The Nation's Dead.

BY E. M. CASS.

By Southern lake and stream they sleep,
On Southern plain and Southern steep,
And in the gloom of valleys deep.

Upon their graves no tear drops flow,
Above their heads no roses blow;
But stars keep watch and guard, I know.

A flame with zeal and righteous hate,
No sacrifice they deemed too great.
Can we not patient watch and wait?

A nation weepeth for her slain,
And hearts are turned with mighty pain,
And tears fall fast as April rain.

Oh! while the good old ship is manned
By hearts so loyal, true and grand,
This glorious Union yet must stand.

Henry's Independence.

BY HORATIO ALGER, JR.

James Trafton has never been a successful man. He had worked hard all the days of his life, but had never seen the time when he could say that he had one hundred dollars ahead. When he died—his wife had died three years before—his three children were left to shift for themselves.

These children were all young. The eldest—Henry—was a boy of fourteen, Alice and George were respectfully eleven and seven. Attached to the hired house in which they lived was an acre of moderately good land. The house itself was small, containing only four rooms, and the furniture was of the plainest kind. The furniture with a few dollars in cash was all that the orphans had to begin the world with, an inconsiderable inheritance certainly.

The morning after the funeral, as the children were sitting at their humble meal, the sound of wheels were heard, and a moment afterwards a tall, sour-looking man entered the room, without the preliminary ceremony of knocking.

"Good morning, Mr. Graves," said Henry.

"Morning," said the stranger, shortly. "Well, I've come after your brother and sister, and you're to come with me too."

"What do you mean?" asked Henry surprised. "This is the first time I have heard of any such plan. Where do you propose to carry us?"

"Where do you expect? Your brother and sister are going to the poor house, and you're to work for me for your victuals and clothes. That is, as you won't earn so much the first year, your furniture is to be thrown in to make it right."

By this time Henry's cheeks were flushed with indignation not only at the proposition, but at the coarseness with which it was conveyed.

"Mr. Graves," said he, "you will find yourself mistaken. I don't intend to work for you, nor shall my brother and sister go to the poor house."

"They shant, hey?" sneered Mr. Graves, in surprise and anger. "Perhaps you're going to support them yourself."

"That is what I shall try to do sir."

"Well you needn't think the town will help you unless you go to the poor house."

"I do not expect the town to help me. I am strong of my age, and I can earn the little we shall need. I know not of any law that will make us paupers, whether we want to be or not.

"O, you can do just as you please, but I reckon you will be glad enough to ask help of the town before six months are out."

"Not if I have health. Good morning Mr. Graves."

"Well, he's a little upstart. Pride and poverty always go together say. I should like to have had him work, because I could have got more than the money's worth out of him. But I reckon he will have to come to it at last."

Henry Trafton was a boy of spirit and energy—very different from his father in that respect, and he had that proper pride which made bitterly repugnant to him the thought of his young brother and sister becoming dependent upon the town for support. He felt considerable confidence in himself and in the Providence that watches over all, however humble and obscure, and he was not disposed to give up without a stout struggle.

Immediately after breakfast Henry went to call on Square Castleton, of whom his father hired the house. The squire had an excellent disposition and received Henry kindly.

"I called to inquire how much rent father used to pay you for our place."

"Fifteen dollars a quarter," said the squire. "I suppose you wish to give it up."

"No," said Henry hesitating. "I thought if you were willing I should like to keep it."

"Indeed! I thought that—at least Mr. Graves told me—"

"I suppose he told you that I was going to work for him, and my brother and sister was going to the poor house," said Henry, coloring.

"Why, yes, I believe he did say that."

"I did not hear of it till this morning, but squire Castleton, I can't bear the idea of any of the family coming on the town and I thought if you would set us as the place, I might with what I could get off the land and what work I could get to keep the family together. We should not expect to live very extravagantly but it would be so much pleasanter if we could still be together."

"Give me your hand, my boy," said the squire, warmly. "Your resolution is a manly and noble one, and you shall not want my encouragement."

"Then we may still have the house?"

"Yes, and at a reduced rent. I guess it will not be any loss to me in the end if I let you have it at ten dollars a quarter instead of fifteen."

"But, indeed, Squire Castleton, you are too kind. I shall not feel as if I was really depending on myself."

"No scruples, Henry. Don't you see that it is for my interest to have you stay. If you left I might be without a tenant for six months or a year else got one that would damage the house, and perhaps neglect to pay the rent. Besides, if you get on well this year, I may increase next."

Henry's sensitive pride was appeased by this representation of the kind hearted squire, and he thanked him earnestly.

"And hark you, my boy," continued the squire, "you will want all your money till you get well underweigh, so you can wait and pay me the rent all in a lump at the end of the year. No thanks, it will be just as convenient to me. How soon do you propose to plant your land?"

"I suppose it is about time now. I thought I would try to hire a man to come and plough it within a day or two."

"As to that," said the squire, my oxen are not in use this forenoon. I will send them right over with my man Mike, and they can have it done by dinner."

"I shall be glad to make that arrangement, and will pay you whatever the regular price is."

"O, that's a trifle. I shall not make any account of it. But I will tell you what you can do. You can get your seed of me. I have got some capital potatoes—an excellent kind, which I can recommend."

"But you must certainly let me pay you for the potatoes, Squire Castleton."

Feeling that Henry would feel more at ease if he permitted this, the squire proposed that he should pay in work, which Henry gladly agreed to do.

"I have got half a dozen cords of wood that I want sawed and split, said the squire. "There is no hurry about it, though. I will deduct the price of what seed I supply you out of your wages."

When Henry left Squire Castleton's house, it would be hard to tell which was the better pleased, he or the squire. The latter felt a warm glow at his heart, such as a good action always brings with it, while the former rejoiced in the bright prospect of independence which he saw before him.

Henry had hardly gone when Mr. Graves, who, by the way, was overseer of the poor, came to see Squire Castleton.

He had come with the benevolent purpose of urging the squire to turn the cold shoulder upon our hero, and decline to let him the house in which he now lived.

"Good morning squire," said the overseer.

"Good morning," returned the squire rather stiffly, for he had never felt particularly friendly towards a man who was notorious for his meanness.

"I have just been over to see the Trafton children," said Mr. Graves.

"Have you?"

"Yes, squire, and what do you think? They have set their backs up at least Henry has, that they won't go to the poor house!"

"Have they indeed?"

"Yes. Ain't it ridiculous? Of course they can't expect to live where they do now."

"I beg your pardon, Mr. Graves.—They propose to do so."

"What! you are not going to let them stay, are you?"

"I have agreed to do so."

"Well, I can tell you one thing Square Castleton—I would not give you ten dollars for all the rent you are likely to get out of them."

"I conceive," said the squire, coldly, "that that is a matter which concerns me only. I feel under no apprehensions on that score. Henry Trafton is a fine, manly boy, and I have the utmost confidence in him."

Mr. Graves left the squire a little discomforted, muttering to himself "Well, it ain't none of my business, I suppose, but I reckon the squire will find by this time next year that I am not quite so far wrong."

Indeed, had all looked upon Henry with the same disfavor as Mr. Graves, the latter's prophecy would very probably have been verified. But, for the credit of human nature, be it said, the boy's spirit, made him friends.

By way of illustration, let me mention that Mr. Burbank, of the firm of Burbank & Co., who kept the village store, offered to give Henry six months credit on such articles as he might need from the store—the favor being the greater that the business was conducted on the cash system. Henry thanked him, and said that he preferred to pay cash when he had it, but might ask a temporary accommodation now and then.

It took Henry about a week to get his land planted. At the end of that time he received an offer from a shoemaker to work during the spare time he had in his shop, while at the same time work at binding shoes was offered to his sister Alice.

But Henry was not willing that either Alice or George should give up school for the sake of work.

He felt that this would be a poor investment of time. Accordingly it was only during their leisure hours that they were called upon to do their part towards the family support.

Fortunately Alice knew how to cook, having been accustomed to do all the family cooking before her father's death, and continued to do it. The family was so small that it did not require her to work beyond her strength, or fill up a large part of her time.

Fortunately the harvest was excellent, and Henry, after selling off one half of his vegetables, had enough left to last their small family through the year.

At the end of the first year, to his great satisfaction found that he had enough to pay the rent and some over.—Certainly he had reason to congratulate himself on the success of his attempt to keep the family together. True they had not lived luxuriously, but they had lived comfortably, and above all, they had retained their independence and their self-respect.

Three years passed, and Henry was now seventeen years old. What was his surprise when Squire Castleton came to him and proposed to him to cultivate his farm at the halves.

'What!' exclaimed Henry, in surprise, 'would you trust me, who am so young, with so important a trust?'

'You are but seventeen, I know, Henry,' was the reply, 'but I have watched you closely for the last three years, and I find in you qualities which I consider far more valuable than mere experience. I may tell you in confidence that the position which I offer you has been sought by Mr. Graves, whose petition I declined without a moments hesitation.'

'My dear sir,' said Henry, 'I accept your proposal with greatful thanks, and I will endeavor to exert myself that you shall not repent it.'

'Only do as well as you have done, and I shall have no fears,' said the squire, shaking his hand warmly.

When it came out that Henry Trafton had taken the Squire's large farm at the halves, everybody was astonished, and none more so than Mr. Graves. He loudly asserted that the squire had acted like a "natural born fool," and that he would find it out at the end of the first year. But five years have passed, and Henry's engagement still continues. I am inclined to think there is no chance of its speedy termination, as Henry is engaged to the squire's pretty daughter, who will soon become his wife.

It is a very common opinion that parrots and ravens live to a great age. From the following statement, coming from a wealthy farmer of La Beauce, it appears that ducks also are long lived. In a letter addressed to a journal he says: "I have in my farm yard, a duck of a small breed, which my father bought twenty one years ago, and which then appeared to be very old. She has laid regularly every season since, and raised several broods.—Galignani.

The Printer's Christmas.

'Is the editor within?'

'Your servant, sir.'

'Package. Charges thirty eight cents.'

Happened to have just the amount—and then with a serious hand proceeded to examine the mysterious box. The cover is removed, when our eyes are gladdened with the sight of a fine fat turkey. The next thing brought to light was a bottle of champaign, and the next a bright golden jug, marked "O Tar." What in the world is O Tar? Just as much as O Tar. But what in the world induced any one to send us either old or new Tar. We haven't got any wagons, and as for getting up a bonfire for the secessionists we are not in the humor. We have it. We will sell it to the livery man. Called on him and he said he didn't use tar, but grease on his wagons. Brought it back to the office in no very good humor, still wondering why it was sent to us. We resolved finally to draw the cork, did so. It wasn't tar. Smelt of it, and knew by the smell it wasn't tar. Tasted of it, and smelt of it again and became satisfied that it wasn't tar. Tasted again and felt happy. Tasted again, felt very rich, and resolved to give our cottage to a poor widow and purchased the elegant mansion over the way, to donate our office to the devil, and buy out the New York Ledger.—Gave the devil a $20 gold piece and promised him a round hundred for New Years. Bought a $5,000 pair of nags and a sleigh cushioned with scarlet, and decorated with gold and pearls. Ordered from the south a darky driver and a postman, whose face shone like glass bottles under a direct sunray. Went over to the 'Office,' told Frank to send every poor family in town a barrel of Globe, Raisin and Tecumseh Mills flour and then bought numerous other articles to make them comfortable.

Bought all the wood in market and ordered it sent immediately to the aforesaid poor families. Gave each of the clergymen in town a thousand dollars—adopted fourteen orphan girls and fifteen orphan boys, run round and paid all debts—(what printer on earth did that?) kissed (before we thought) a pretty girl who called to wish us a merry Christmas (somebody looked unpleasant when this happened,) settled the matter by ordering a shawl worth a thousand dollars and a set of furs costing an equal amount—put on our slippers, (imagined we heard music) did hear music, for somebody came near being kicked out of bed. Alas! we had been dreaming.

Obey Your Wife.

Three jovial fellows—Tom Watson, Joe Brown and Bill Walker—sat late at the village tavern, and in the merriment of their hearts made arrangement that the "shot" shoud be paid by him who omitted to do the first thing his wife told him on returning home. They then separated for the night, engaging to meet again next morning and make an honest report.—Next morning Walker and Brown were early at their posts, but it was some time before Watson made his appearance.—Walker began first—"You see when I entered my house the cradle was out, and as the fire gave but a glimmering light, I was near walking into a pot of batter that the crumpets were to be made of this morning. My wife, dreadfully out of humor at sitting up so long, said to me sarcastically, 'Do put your foot in the batter!' 'Just as you say, Maggie,' said I, and without the least hesitation, I set my foot in the batter, and then went to bed.' Next Joe Brown told his story—"My wife had already retired to rest in our sleeping room, which adjoins the kitchen, and the door of which was ajar. Not being able to navigate perfectly well, I made a dreadful clattering among the household furniture, and in no very pleasant tone she bawled out, 'Do break the porridge pot, Joe!' No sooner said than done. I seized hold of the pot, and striking it against the chimney jamb, broke it into a thousand pieces. After this exploit, I retired to rest, and got a cursing lecture for my pains. It was now Tom Watson's turn to give an account of himself, which he did with a very long face, as follows: "My wife gave me the most unlucky command in the world, for as I was blundering up stairs in the dark, she cried out—'Do break your neck, do, Tom?' 'I'll be cursed if I do, Kate,' said I, as I gathered myself up. 'I'll sooner pay the bill.' And so landlord, here's the cash for you. This is the last time that ever I'll be a sovereign on the command of my wife.

Mamma, am I Pretty?

"Mamma, am I pretty?"

"No, my dear, but beauty is of no consequence."

Now what an unmitigated fib! and every day of that child's life she will be finding it out. Why not tell her the truth—that beauty is of consequence, as is everything that God has made. Why not tell her that the eye is irresistibly fascinated by it; that a handsome girl is always more noticed than a plain one; just as when one walks in a garden, a beautiful flower invites admiration above its fellows, but like that, if upon examination it be found scentless; if it pierces with sharpness the hand that would caress it—the gazer pincks it but to throw it aside, or passes it for one less pretentious, whose sweetness will endure long after its pale hues shall have past away.

Tell her—what children should always be told—the truth, tell her that bright eyes, beautiful hair, satin skins, and dimpled limbs, are indeed very lovely to look upon; and it is just as right to admire them as it is to admire the floating beauty of the changeful clouds, the stately majesty of the trees, the sweet blush of the rose. It is right of people to wish to be pleasing, and it is not only right, but a duty, for everybody to look, as beautiful as they can. Tell your child all this; but tell her that for the higher order of beauty, something beside the body must be decorated.

Tell her that the soul must be washed of bad passions—the spider webs of envy brushed away—the dust of selfishness wiped off, and its chambers aired of the foul atmosphere of uncharitableness.—That its windows must be thrown open wide, that the Heavenly Dove may enter, and sing a perpetual song; that shall make the eyes shine with a light borrowed only of Heaven; that shall make the drooping form expand, and stand erect in the conciousness of its spiritual majesty—serene, unabashed in the greatest, most beautiful, earthly presence; lifting the brow upon which immorrality is so legibly written, beautiful in its fearlessness, to that Heaven, whose brightest serephs sings, as if it had never dropped the chrysalis which earth is crumbling, atom by atom, to dust.

Oh, tell your child this—tell her how resplendent the soul can make the body.

How, like a light within a crystal vase, it makes fair what else were dark and dim to human sight. Tell her how before its radiance men bow down, hushing the hot breath of worldliness as before God's own calm with the triumphant step of one who is heir to all Heaven—second to none!

Oh, I have seen such! Lofty—yet lowly. No earthly artist could trace their beauty, or sculptor mould their symmetry. To hear the rustle of their garment was to feel the sweep of an angel's wing.—To look upon them was to pray. It was to bathe the blushing face with repentant tears, and cry—unclean—unclean?

FANNY FERN.

Stop finding fault and Pray.

"Mother," said a little prattler, who had seen five summers, "are you sure Jesus is alive and up in Heaven now?"

"Yes, my son."

"Can He stay in Heaven and do great things on earth, as he did when He lived on the earth?"

"Certainly, my dear! All power is his in Heaven and on earth."

"Does deacon Jones know it?"

"Yes, my child."

"Then why don't he stop finding fault with the Generals, and Mr. Lincoln, and everybody pray?"

"What good do you think prayer would do the war, Charley?"

"Jesus says, in the Bible. "If you ask anything in my name, I will do it; and my Sabbath School verse, yesterday, said 'If two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask it shall be done for them of my Father who is in Heaven." Are there not two people in this great country, who agree in wanting the Rebels whipped, and the Union and our beautiful banner saved?"

"I hope there are a great many who agree in that, my son."

"Then why don't they ask God for it? Don't they believe he means what he says, or are they afraid it is to hard for him to do?"

Why would it not be right for a man and his wife to ride together upon the same donkey? Because "What God hath joined together, let no man put asunder.

Constitution of the U. States.

We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility provide for the common defence, promote the general welfare and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this Constitution for the United States of America.

ARTICLE 1

SEC. 1. All legislative powers herein granted shall be vested in a Congress of the United States, which shall consist of a Senate and House of Representatives

SEC. 2. The House of Representatives shall be composed of members chosen every second year by the people of the several States, and the electors in each State shall have the qualifications requisite for electors of the most numerous branch of the State Legislature.

No person shall be a Representative who shall not have attained to the age of twenty-five years, and been seven years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that State in which he shall be chosen.

Representatives and direct taxes shall be apportioned among the several States which may be included within this Union according to their respective numbers, which shall be determined by adding to the whole number of free persons, including those bound to service for a term of years, and including Indians not taxed, three fifths of all other persons. The actual enumeration shall be made within three years after the first meeting of the Congress of the United States, and within every subsequent term of ten years, in such manner as they shall by law direct. The number of representatives shall not exceed one for every thirty thousand, but each State shall have at least one representative; and until such enumeration shall be made, the State of New Hampshire shall be entitled to choose three, Massachusetts eight, Rhode Island and Providence Plantations one, Connecticut five, New York six, New Jersey four, Pennsylvania eight, Delaware one, Maryland six, Virginia ten, North Carolina five, South Carolina five, and Georgia three.

When vacancies happen in the representation from any State, the executive authority thereof shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

The House of Representatives shall choose their Speaker and other officers, and shall have the sole power of impeachment.

SEC. 3. The Senate of the United States shall be composed of two Senators from each State, chosen by the Legislature thereof, for six years; and each Senator shall have one vote.

Immediately after they shall be assembled in consequence of the first election, they shall be divided as equally as may be into three classes. The seats of the Senators of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year, and of the third class at the expiration of the sixth year, so that one third may be chosen every second year; and if vacancies happen by resignation or otherwise, during the recess of the legislature of any State, the executive thereof may make temporary appointments until the next meeting of the legislature, which shall then fill such vacancies.

No person shall be a Senator who shall not have attained to the age of thirty years, and been nine years a citizen of the United States, and who shall not, when elected, be an inhabitant of that State for which he shall be chosen.

The Vice President of the United States shall be President of the Senate, but shall have no vote, unless they be equally divided

The Senate shall choose their other officers and also a President pro tempore, in the absence of the Vice President, or when he shall exercise the office of President of the United States.

The Senate shall have the sole power to try all impeachments. When sitting for that purpose they shall be on oath or affirmation. When the President of the United States is tried, the Chief Justice shall preside; and no person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two thirds of the members present.

Judgment in cases of impeachment shall not extend further than to removal from office, and disqualification to hold and enjoy any office of honour, trust our profit under the United States; but the party convicted shall nevertheless be liable and subject to indictment, trial, judgment and punishment, according to law.

SEC. 4. The times, places and manner of holding elections for Senators and Representatives, shall be prescribed in each State by the legislature thereof; but the Congress may at any time by law make or alter such regulations, except as to the places of choosing Senators.

The Congress shall assemble at least once in every year, and such meeting shall be on the first Monday in December unless they shall by law appoint a different day.

SEC. 5. Each house shall be the judge of the elections, returns and qualification of its own members, and a majority of each shall constitute a quorum to do business: but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and may be authorized to compel the attendance of absent members, in such manner and under such penalties as each house may provide.

Each house may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member.

Each house shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and from time to time publish the same, excepting such parts as may in their judgment require secrecy; and the yeas and nays of the members of either house on any question shall, at the desire of one fifth of those present, be entered on the journal.

Neither house, during the session of Congress, shall, without the consent of the other, adjourn for more than three days, nor to any other place than that in which the two houses shall be sitting.

The Union.

We can not better introduce this subject to our readers than by presenting them with the authority of one of the best and purest men our nation has produced. In reference to our form of government he says "It must perish if there be not that vital spirit in the people which alone can nourish, sustain and direct all its movements. It is in vain that statesmen shall form plans of government, in which the beauty and harmony of a republic shall be embodied in visible order, shall be built up on solid substructions and adorned by every useful ornament, if the inhabitants suffer the silent power of time to dilapidate its walls or crumble its massy supporters into dust; if the assaults from without are never resisted and the rottenness and mining from within are never guarded against. Who can preserve the rights and liberties of the people when they shall be abandoned by themselves? Who shall keep watch in the temple when the watchmen sleep at their posts? Who shall call upon the people to redeem their possessions and revive the republic when their own hands have deliberately and corruptly surrendered them, and have built the prisons or dug the graves of their own friends? This dark picture, it is to be hoped will never be applicable to the Republic of America. And yet it affords a warning, which, like the lessons of past experience, we are not permitted to disregard. America, free, happy, and enlightened as she is, must rest the preservation of her rights and liberties upon the virtue, independence, justice and sagacity of the people. If either fail, the republic is gone. Its shadow may remain with all the pomp, and circumstance, and trickery of government, but its vital power will have departed. In America the demagogue may arise as well as elsewhere. He is the natural, though spurious growth of republics; and like the courtier, he may, by his blandishments, delude the ears and blind the eyes of the people to their own destruction. If ever the day shall arrive, in which the best talents and the best virtues shall be driven from office by intrigue or corruption, by the ostracism of the press, or the still more unrelenting persecution of party, legislation will cease to be national. It will be wise by accident, and bad by system."

These words were uttered as a solemn warning, by the universally esteemed Justice Story at a period when the Union was united, and the people prosperous and happy.

Ever since the formation of the government similar warnings have been uttered by Washington, Jefferson, Madison, and other great and good men. All to no purpose, for our watchmen have been sleeping at their posts while the ravings of idle dreamers, for unconstitutional "abstract rights" and the howlings of southern madmen for equally unconstitutional "rights of the States" have kindled a political conflagration that is making a desert of the south and threatens, even now, to desolate some of the fairest sections of the north.

God only knows what sacrifices are yet to be made, what homes desolated, what rivers of blood are to be shed before the Union shall again be firmly re-established. But that it must be re-established before we can have permanent peace in our land is a fact that will not be questioned by any true friend of his country. The truth must be firmly impressed on the minds of the people; it must be engraven on their hearts; it must constitute their leading idea at all times, and in all places; it should be inserted on every banner borne on the battle-fields by our armies. Then indeed, we shall have far less partisan, far less public, and far less private selfishness. Then we shall know how to sympathize more deeply with our gallant soldiers who are fighting, and bleeding, and dying for the Union, while at home we are dividing our strength by intestine feuds, and jealousness, and bickerings which, in the end, may ruin but can not save the Union.

It is said that the people of Maine are about to tap the pine trees in that State with a view to making rosin, which they think can be done quite as well in that region as in the Carolinas. The object is worth the effort at least, and should it succeed, will be a source of great profit to Maine, and also supply a want for which the North has been dependent on another and remote part of the country.

Lee's New Campaign.

The Northward movement of the rebel army is certainly very audacious, though we are not yet able to divine its precise course, nor the specific object it may have in view. We do not even yet know whether it has crossed the mountains or is still on the upper waters of the Rappahannock. Some think that Lee will offer Hooker battle on the present ground now held by our army, near the old Bull Run battle fields; others hold that he is going to march his whole army into Pennsylvania by the Shenandoah Valley, and attempt a short campaign in the North, while others think his object is an attack on Washington from the rear. A short time must develop the truth in the matter. His plan and course are doubtless clearly enough marked out in his own mind. But their execution will depend very much upon us. We have already an army in the field near Washington far superior in numbers to his; and twice a hundred thousand volunteers are rushing to arms in the five States nearest to the theatre of operations. If we have energy and vigor in our movements; if we have intelligence and unity in our plan; if we have skill and sagacity in our leadership, there is no reason under Heaven why Lee's new campaign should not prove as disastrous as it is daring.

We have no strategical plan of campaign to urge; we have no special scheme of action to uphold. The men in Washington are supposed to have the ability to devise proper military plans; and the Generals whom they have placed at the head of the army are supposed to have ability and courage to execute them.—But common sense teaches us, as it must show every one, that whether Lee's army be on the Upper Potomac, in the Shenanhoah Valley, or at Warrenton, it is in a position where a superior army stationed in front of Washington, aided by a competent army of occupation in Washington, a co operating army on the Upper Potomac, and an army of volunteers to be moved at will, should, between them, be able to make it difficult for it to advance very far or to retreat very easily.

The rebels have now given us an opportunity to attack them in a way which, if properly improved, should crush them. They are far away from their capital far, from any proper base of supply, liable to have their communications cut, their flanks assailed, their columns separated, their retreat rendered impossible. To this all-important and imperative work, the Government, the army and the whole nation should now bend every energy and strain every nerve. Every outlying regiment, stationed at unimportant or secondary places, should be—or, rather should have been—brought to the imminent point; the position of Lee's main body and the probable line of his movement should be ascertained, and the army confronting it made sufficiently strong and then should follow such rapid movements and manoeuvres as are dictated by military science to secure success under the circumstances.

It is altogether likely that Lee will move very rapidly in the execution of his plan, whatever it may be. He knows already that Pennsylvania and the whole North are rallying to drive him back; and he knew before he advanced that they would do so. He knows that Hooker will become stronger every day, and that every day will also add immensely to the strength of any position that Hooker may take up. He knows that every day he remains in the North, Richmond is put in the most imminent peril from an advance of our troops stationed on the Peninsula and at Suffolk.—He knows that a Northern campaign, lasting even as long as months, is impossible. He will be likely, therefore, to strike out very quickly and with his whole force. If it is invasion in force, we shall have it this week. If it is a battle with Hooker, it will not be delayed. If it is an attempt to get into Baltimore, and thus into the rear of Washington, which would be the work of a madman, it will be done with the hot haste and fury of a madman.—N. Y. Times.

From the 4th Cavalry.

CAMP PARK, NEAR MURFREESBORO, June 10th 1863.

MR EDITOR:—It is through the columns of your widely circulating paper, that I would invite the attention of its numerous readers for a few moments, in answer to the many inquiries, in regard to the present condition of the 4th Mich. Cavalry

Since I last wrote you, nothing of note has transpired, except a few skirmishes and occasionally a dashing brush with our neighbor's pickets who appear unsatisfied unless they are within fighting distance of the Blue Yankees. But Uncle Abe's boys contend that Secesh can see just as well by standing back a proper distance, wherefore an occasional dispute arises and titles are tried for the most sitely position, when one or the other party gets a right smart flogging General Terchen's accompanied by Gen. Stanley's forces made a surprising dash upon a rebel encampment a few days since, some twelve miles in front, reaching the encampment at daylight, and would have made a complete surprise if our reserve had remained in position until the advance had swung around at a proper distance to the right,—but they became impatient, and dashed forward surprising the camp before the main line came to posish; however, considering the time our forces were absent it is thought they made a fine thing of it. They started at eight o'clock in the evening and moved cautiously until day light, when they surprised the rebels in their night clothes, taking three hundred prisoners, all of their camp equipage and nearly all of their horses, (among the latter were many valuable ones,) returning to camp at nine o'clock the next morning. Our boys come out all right with one or two exceptions; one of A. Co. received a mortal wound and Lieut. Tucker of Macon, who is now 1st Lieut. of "F. Co." received a flesh wound in the right leg below the knee, by a minnie ball; he is gaining fast and is now nearly well.

Our Regiment is in good trim, having lately received a fresh supply of first class cavalry horses. We are receiving daily drill while in camp, by one of the best drill-masters in the service, and while on scouts we get a double portion; scouting is the cream of exercises,—there is an electric current about it that draws the inactive to action and the stupid to newness of life. An unexperienced person would readily conclude that a three days scout, with a strong smell of powder and the bullets occasionally whizzing by his head from the thick cedars, would satisfy the sportsman to remain in camp contented, on his return but nine tenths of our Cavalry had rather be scouting than to remain on camp duty. Our regiment has received a number of fresh recuits, which help to fill up the many gaps that the effects of rebellion has caused in our ranks. Four of "F. Co." who were taken prisoners some three months ago, while out foraging, returned in high spirits yesterday. They state that they received rather rough fare while down in rebbledom; two of them, W. S. Mead of Adrian, and W. McMullen of Blissfield, were taken to Richmond and there exchanged.

James Mudge of Raisin, died May 22d at Murfreesboro of typhoid fever and mumps; he was sick but a few days; he was a young, brave, dutiful and hardy soldier and his loss was much felt by his fellow associates. The health of the regiment at present is very good, the average number sent to the hospital per week does not exceed five, when last winter, I have seen five per day, but it is hopeed that we have experienced and past through the roughest of the campaign. In regard to climate, water &c, which has been very trying indeed, especially during our early experience, last fall, while passing through Kentucky and the past winter in Dixie. I am aware that it requires one term of service to become wholly initiated, and according to the late reports from Vicksburg and portions of the army of the Potomac, if they be true we will have an opportunity to try another winter in the land of Cotton—but we get all sorts of news in camp and do not rely upon more than three fifths of what we hear.

A very important move is about to take place, and the great question is: Is Old Rosa going to move his little family down South, or are his combined opponents going to try the Dutchman's courage and test the strength of his iron dogs and tried soldiers? Be that as it may, we are ready; I repeat it "we are ready!" We have been under marching orders for more than a week, our most important stores have been packed and ready. Agreeable to the order since that time, we keep five days rations constantly on hand, every man that is able to do duty is furnished with extra horse-shoes and nails; a large amount of amunition is being distributed, and the present, compared with, and judging from the past, I am well satisfied that a storm is not far distant and the programme will be changed for a season.

Last Friday a large gathering of soldiers swarmed the streets of Murfreesboro to witness the hanging of a specimen of the southern confederacy—the subject was a young of strictly rebbel principles. Sufficient evidence was brought against him to prove clearly that he murdered a Union citizen for money.—He was conveyed to the scaffold from his place of confinement, by being placed upon his coffin, and the carriage drawn by six grey horses, guarded by two regiments of infantry. He spoke but a few words, when the scene was over and the crowd dispersed. J. A. H.

The Rebel Invasion.

PITTSBURG, June 23.—The excitement produced by a dispatch originating in Washington, stating that Maj. Beasell had received intelligence from Fayette county, to the effect that the rebels were advancing along the national road in heavy force to invade Western Pensylvania, was, from the first, known here to be groundless. The rebels had not, up to that time, and have not yet, so far as we can learn, advanced beyond Cumberland in this direction. From that place they were driven back by Gen. Kelley several days ago, and if they have returned, we have no authentic intelligence of the fact. As to our preparations, we may say generally that we consider ourselves pretty well secured already, and we are rapidly completing fortifications which will render us perfectly so. Particulars either as to our fortifications or our military organizations would be contraband

Twelve thousand men were at work to-day, and 14,000 will be at work to-morrow on the intrenchments around the city.

HARRISBURG, June 23.—The rebels reoccupied Chamberburg about 11 o'clock this morning. Our cavalry pickets are now five miles this side of the place. The troops under Gen. Knipe, which were at Chambersburg, have safely fallen back to the main body. The authorities believe the rebels to be in considerable force.

PITTSBURG, June 23.—Business has been suspended for a week. The citizens en masse, are digging entrenchments on the surrounding hills for miles out, encircling the city. The works are nearly finished and the city is safe.

From Vicksburg.

WALNUT HILLS, near Vicksburg, June 10.—A copy of the Vicksburg Whig, extra printed on wall paper, pretends to give exciting news, putting Grant's loss in the seige at 40,000.

A rebel Lieutenant, captured yesterday, says it is Pemberton's purpose to die sooner than surrender.

There was a picket skirmishing at Haines' bluff yesterday and Monday.—The rebels are reported advancing on our defences at that point. Ample preparations are made to receive them.

LATER—June 18.—Correspondents from our lines say all is unusually active. The rebels are firing more cautionsly. No news from Johnston. Hot work is expected.

LOUISVILLE, June 23.—Reports from a reliable source state that Morgan has recrossed the Cumberland near Carthage, having remained but a short time this side. He had four thousand men and sixteen pieces of artillery. He was closely pressed by Col. Wilder, 17th Indiana, commanding a brigade of mounted infantry.

It is stated positively that the Rebels carried the black flag, with the skull and cross-bars, in the recent attack on Millikens Bend.

Johnston's forces are moving toward Yazoo City. He will find Grant ready to receive him.

MEMPHIS, June 22.—Advices from Grant to noon of June 18th, report some advantages gained by our forces. On the 18th Logan was progressing satisfactorily Gen McClernand has been removed from command of the 13th Army Corps, by Grant, Gen. Ord is assigned his place.

Rebel cavalry is threatening the lines between Memphis and Corinth, and guerrillas are roving through the country north of this line, enforcing the conscription and driving off stock.

YOUNG'S POINT, June 17th, via Cairo, 23.—The marino brigade, under Gen. Ellet, accompanied by Gen. Moore, made a reconnoissance to Richmond, La., on the 16th with 2,300 men, and drove 3,500 rebels out of the place, captured thirty prisoners, and burned the town. Our loss was slight.

From Washington.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—Mr. Buckingham, correspondent of the N. Y. Herald's correspondents in this city, from a sixteen hundred dollar clerkship, which he has held during this administration. He [illegible] who has been in office many years, and who refused to subscribe to a fund to assist in raising a colored regiment, saying that he had lost his own niggers under the emancipation act, and had never been paid enough for them.

Mrs. Mattie Attisson, of Jackson, Miss., convicted of being a spy at Murfreesboro, has been sentenced to imprisonment for life at Jefferson.

The Richmond Enquirer of Saturday speaks of a rumor that Extra Billy Smith, newly elected Gouernor of Virginia, was killed at Winchester, but does not speak of it as beyond question.

It is understood that Gen. Milroy has been relieved from command on account of defeat at Winchester. It is supposed that there will be an investigation on the Winchester affair.

Gen. Hunter is in town.

Gen. Hooker left for headquarters in the field again this evening, also Sickles, who returns to command his old corps.

CINCINNATI, June 23.—Millitary matters remain unchanged. The rebels have apparently left our front in Wayne County. Tennessee refugees come in daily, also an occasional squad of prisoners and deserters, confirming in the main our previous information from the enemy as to numbers and location.

The health of the army is still good.—Weather hot and dusty. Deserters in today state that two divisions of Bragg's army, under Breckinridge and McCowan, were sent to Mississippi.

The rebels who crossed into Indiana on Sunday have not as yet been overtaken. Their exact whereabouts is unknown. It was repoted they had gone north of the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad. This is not confirmed. The operator at Bloomington, Ind., reports an encampment of a thousand citizens, with pickets out eight miles further. He says they resist the enrollment.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, June 23.—Mr. S. H. Buckinghan, a correspondent of the New York Herald, was yesterday killed under the following circumstances. He was coming from Aldie with details of the cavalry fight, and when five miles below that point was chased by guerrillas. He put spurs to his horse, which stumbled and threw him off, breaking his neck and killing him instantly.

VALLANDIGHAM, it is reported, has run the blockade.

NEW YORK, June 24.—U S. Marshal Murray, of this city, received a letter from Daniel Sargts U. S. constable agent at Mathension, Bahamas, dated June 6th in which the following interesting paragraph appears.—"By an arrival from St. Thomas, via Port Au Prince, we just hear that Semmes and 3 of his officers, have been transferred at St. Thomas on board a sixteen gun Frigate, just out from England. So look out."

A Washington letter of the 22d in the Tribune says: "The Government has determined to offer a bounty of 300 dollars to two year and nine months men, who re-enlist for the war, who are to form a special corps.

WHEELING, Va., June 20.—The State of Western Virginia is now a fixed fact Hon. A. J. Borman was to-day inaugurated Governor of the State.

The loss at the battle of Winchester, Va. under Millroy, was three batteries of field artillery, all the siege guns on the Star fort and the main fort, 6,000 muskets, 280 wagons, &c. Of the 7,000 engaged, 1,600 have reached Maryland Hights, and probably 300 or 400 escaped to Hancock and Cumberland, Md.

Late Vicksburg papers, received at headquarters, contain nothing of importance, but speak of severe casualities.

European News.

NEW YORK, June 23.—The Liverpool journals, by the last steamer, urge an early termination of hostilities between France and Mexico, in order that the French Government may regain freedom of movement in the European question.

It was reported that the notes of the three powers to Russia, regarding Poland, would be dispatched to St. Petersburg on the 19th. The Patric says the Russian Government exclusively would enter into an arrangement with Prussia.

Important Post-Office Arrangement.

The recent Congress changed the post office laws materially. The change goes into effect on the first day of July, and it is important that the public should be fully posted. The following is the section of law relating to the prepayment of postage and box rents:

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That no mail matter shall be delivered by the postmaster until the postage due thereon shall have been paid; and no box at any postoffice shall be assigned to the use of any person until the rent therefor has been paid for at least on quarter, for which the Postmaster shall give a receipt, which record shall be delivered to his successor.

This section absolutely prohibits the delivery of any letter, newspaper, phamplet, or package whatever, until the postage chargen thereon shall have been paid.—Postmasters must strictly conform to it. Printed matter must be retained until it is paid for, either as transient package, or for a quarter.

Postage on drop letters, to be delivered at the mailing office, is two cents on letters weighing less than half an ounce; if over half an ounce, an additional charge of two cents will be made for every half ounce or fraction of an ounce. The postage must be prepaid by stamps.

It will be seen that these changes take effect on the first of July [illegible] the Postmasters instructions are peremptory.

Between 15 and 20 cases of varioloid have appeared in the northwestern part of Greenbush, Clinton county, and some of them are of a very malignant character.

The Wheat crop in Ingham Co. is injured to some extent by the Hessian fly; but the yield on an average will be greater than over. Fruit looks extremely promising.

The Border Brigands.

The Missouri Republican speaking of the Border ruffians says:—The people greatly mistake who suppose that on and near the line between Kansas and Missouri, the question is any longer one of Union and Disunion. The real question is, rather, who has any property left to be stolen, or any throat to be cut. Rascals and ruffians of all hues—collected from every part of the United States, and probably some parts of Europe—abound all through the border country. They are mere robbers and murderers, but disguise their character under some thin mask—sometimes of Secessionism and sometimes of Unionism. It might be interesting to contrast a census (supposing one could be taken) of the present number of inhabitants in the Missouri border counties with a register of the number three years ago. Desolation and desertion are printed in the saddest colors all over that ravaged tract of country. The Missouri border having been pretty thoroughly laid waste, the brigands are now paying their attention to the Santa Fe trail which holds out temptations to these rascals, who vary their occupation of robbing stores, burning houses, and murdering peaceable settlers in Kansas, by assaulting and robbing the trains to New Mexico. A home in the range of the Bedouin Arabs would be about as safe and agreeable as one in this border country. It would seem that it must take some time and the most stringent measures of a fearless Government before that country can be again the fit abode of civilized man.

Spinning Yarn from Cotton Rags.

A letter in the London Times, from its Paris correspondent, contains an account of a new machine invented by a French engineer, by which, it is said, "cotton rags of every description may be rendered fit for spinning." With respect to the value of the invention, the Times says: "It will effect a revolution in industry, and increase public wealth to an immense extent. When it is considered how many millions are expended in the purchase of raw cotton, and the short time the manufactured lasts, every machine that can render worn-out cotton cloth available for spinning, must render great service to the manufacturer." The most that can be said for this invention is that cotton shoddy can be spun with it; but it is of doubtful utility. Cotton becomes weak in the fibre after being woven into cloth and worn for some time. The best use to which cotton rags can be applied is in the manufacture of paper, for they cannot be made into strong cloth.

Flax and Flax Cotton.

According to accounts received from Western letters and papers, considerable attention is being given to flax culture and the manufacture and "cottonizing" of flax fibre. One exchange states that flax is now used quite extensively in some parts of Wisconsin for manufacturing purposes. At Milwaukee there are exhibited specimens of flax white as snow and also colored with the most brilliant hue; calico made of fifty per cent. of flax; cotton flannel, one-half flax; felted cloths, and a variety of other manufactures of which flax is a component part. The market sales of these calicoes is six cents a yard. As handsome an article of broadcloth is manufactured from this cottonized flax as could be desired.

THE AMERICAN SILVER QUESTION IN CANADA.—The Toronto Globe of yesterday has the following in addition to what we have already given in relation to the silver question: "The citizens appear to come into the arrangement for the increased discount on American silver with a ready acquiescence. Mr. Webber, who was appointed by the Board of Trade to canvass the merchants for their names, agreeing to the increased rate of discount, commenced yesterday, and has already succeeded in obtaining a large number of signatures. The following is the rate of reduction: Half dollars [illegible] 46 cents; quarters [illegible] at 9 cents; half [illegible] three cent pieces [illegible] and Colonial silver will, however, be taken at previous rates.

WEARING MILITARY CLOTHES.—It is a common thing to see a man wearing military clothes—soldier's coat, pants and caps—who is not attached to the army. This is against the law and those who violate it, are liable to a fine of $600 and one year's imprisonment, that being the penalty attached.

☞ President Lincon has granted an unconditional pardon to Albert Horn, who was undergoing a sentence of imprisonment for [illegible] or being engaged in the slave trade. It was said to be in the last stages of consumption, but will now probably recover and engage in politics.

☞ Gen. Grant, before he went into the army, was a tanner and courrier in Minnesota. The way he is tanning rebels hides in Mississippi shows that he has not forgotton his trade.

The crop in several townships in Clinton county, are suffering from the same cause.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK, for July, is around. Godey is not to be outdone by any of the Magazines. The illustration, Grandfather and Grandmother, is a fine specimen of art.—Fashion Plates up to the times. It is our favorite and so it is of the Ladies.

ANOTHER GONE.—The Expositor, of last evening, says the sad intelligence reached Adrian that Alfred Smith of the 18th regiment—a member of Capt. Miller's company we believe—died in hospital at Nashville last night. Thus, one by one, fall the young, and vigorous and full of promise beneath the bloody wheels of the Juggernaut of War.

Frightened.

A four year-old colt, worth over $200, belonging to L. B. Fonda, of Brighton, in this county, got frightened last week, ran against a tree, broke his neck, and had to be killed.

A Rowdy.

A man by the name of Martin Armstrong, in Dover township, has been fined $20 for attempting to force his way into an entertainment, and maltreating the door keeper. He could have gained admission for 50 cents; so he lost money and dignaced himself too.

Not Caught Yet.

We understand that nothing has been heard from Stevason, who "cut dirt for thick timber," with the money obtained for the stolen wool, mentioned in our last issue. He had nothing to do with the stealing, but it seems is first rate at hiding. We hope Mr. Moore may yet come across the villain.

Festival.

The annual Sheep-shearing festival of the Lenawee County Agricultural Society, at Adrian, last Friday, was twice as largely attended as the one of the year previous.—There were 12 entries of fleeces and 10 competitors in shearing; and Hillsdale county carried off the first prizes in both departments.

Large Reduction in Prices at Moore's!

R. C. MOORE—Dry Goods Dealer—offers Domestics, Cottons, Prints, &c., at the lowest present market value. See his Bleached and Unbleached Cottons—Summer Stuffs, Prints, &c., before you buy elsewhere. His terms are "Cash on Delivery." Buy of him and save money. 2w2.

Wool Growers.

A convention of Wool-growers assembled at Jonesville and resolved to bring their clip to market clear and in good order, to hold it at 75 cents, in view of the present high prices of every other commodity of general use, and the abundance of money at low rates of interest, and to be bound by these resolutions until there is a change in the times.

Dentistry.

There are numberless ladies—not very old either—in this county, who, from appearance, would be taken to be 60 or 70 years of age, all owing to the need of a little trimming in the mouth. We therefore take pleasure in recommending them to Mr. ELMER HAUSE, of Tecumseh, where they may renew their youthful visage.

See card in another column.

Yes, Sir!

We were asked the question, by letter from Cambridge, whether we would receive eight months subscribers, by their paying one dollar. To which we reply, YES SIR! and thank the writer for the interest he takes in the Herald. The publication of the Constitution of the United States, will be continued in four numbers of our paper before its completion, and those who wish to secure a copy will need to subscribe immediately, as we shall issue but a few extras.

Union Fair.

The Hudson Gazette contains a list of Premiums and Regulations of the Fourth Annual Fair of the Hillsdale and Lenawee Union Agricultural Society, to be held on their Riding Park, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, October 6th, 7th, and 8th, 1863. A large amount of premiums are offered.—We understand that an institution, of a similar kind was in existence in this township, but by imposing the burthen of its offices upon a few individuals, it was thrown up. Can not it be revived? Farmers should take a deep interest in these matters.

Promoted.

We are glad to learn from a reliable source, that Chas. C. DOOLITTLE, of the 18th Michigan Infantry, has been promoted to Brigadier Gen. 3d Brigade, 2d Division, 14th Army Corpse. Col. D. is a good military man, and having been in the service since the rebellion commenced, and filled the office of Captain in company ——, 4th Regiment, knows the wants of Secessia, and has the right faculty of furnishing them what they want—sound drubbings.

We also learn that he has selected Lieut. CHAS. T. HEWITT, of Co. "B" for one of his aids. Our citizens are principally well acquainted with the lieutenant, and we think will unite with us in saying, "that he has selected right man in the right place."

Appeal.

RIDGEWAY, (Mich.) June 20, '63.

The Tecumseh Herald is quite a favorite with the people here, as a medium of local news. No paper is so liberally patronized at Ridgeway P. O.

Under the guideance of the new editor—J. S. CASTLE—considerable improvement may be expected, both in editorials and selected matter, while the columns of the local incidents may, and should be, much improved by a communication from some competent person, in each township, of all new and interesting events, as they occur. Excepting the various advertisements of diversified business transactions, the details of local news involves the greatest interest to the reader of a county newspaper.

The Herald is published for $1 50 per annum, and to subscribers in the county, free of postage. Now is the time to subscribe.—Application can be made to any Postmaster, or the editor at Tecumseh, who will be as accommodating, as to manner of pay, as the circumstances will permit.

Now is the time for those who take no paper, to supply themselves, and families, with a paper which experience will soon prove to be an indispensable literary requisite.

The author, of the above appeal in behalf of the Herald, we heartily thank, and hope that the paper may not disappoint his, or his friends, expectations.

Sanitary Supplies.

The receipts at this Commission, forwarded by the committee, Messrs. J. P. SLAYTON and JACOB G. ROBERTS, to the Sanitary Commission at Chicago are as follows:

68 Barrels of Potatoes,
7 " of Dried Fruit, all kinds,
3 Tubs of Pickles,

Making a car load worth well one hundred and fifty dollars. This is doing nobly for Tecumseh—is it not?

Chicago Sanitary Commission Rooms.

CHICAGO, June 15, '63.

J. P. SLAYTON, Esq., Tecumseh, Mich.

Dear Sir—The Commission have the pleasure to acknowledge the reception of Sanitary Stores sent by the residents of Tecumseh. They were immediately forwarded.

We have already forwarded two thousand boxes of supplies to our brave sufferers, near Vicksburg; and have expended five thousand dollars in the purchase of those articles which can best be thus obtained.

Yours Truly,

A Word to our Business Men.

This being the 4th number of the Herald's issue since we took possession of the office, we wish to say a word or two to our business men. We think the course of the paper must be pretty well understood, and which will not be deviated from. Then, if satisfactory, may we not ask in all confidence, that your patronage, in the way of job work and advertising, be awarded to us. There has but three or four manifested, as yet, that they would advertise, only by promises. Some may be waiting for us to give them a call, in the way of soliciting business. This is all well enough, but we declare to you that our time has been, and probably will be for some little time to come, occupied with the mechanical department of the paper, that it will be almost impossible to call on each individual. Will not this be a sufficient invitation? We hope so.

Speaks well for our Town.

A gentleman of this place visited Adrian, one day last week, for the purpose of buying cotton goods and groceries, supposing he could purchase them cheaper there than in Tecumseh. Upon his return he says to us, with the bare exception of white sugar, that he could get better bargains here than in Adrian. Then what is the use of running off to purchase goods,—you will not find Adrian people coming here, even if they could purchase a little cheaper—and we don't blame them by any means—support your home merchants, mechanics and professional men, is the way to make your town thrive. Our readers will find that those who advertise sell cheap.

COMMERCIAL.

There is not much doing in the grain trade. Some few lots of wool have made its appearance and sold at rates quoted in our prices current.

It is reported by a gentleman from Coldwater, that 5,000 to 6,000 pounds of wool were taken there on Saturday last, and purchased by local operators, at from 50 to 65c considerable amount sold at 64 1-2c.

The Owosso Press says there has been sold the past week, from 30,000 to 35,000 pounds of wool, at prices ranging from 50 to 60c.

The St. Johns Union Press says wool has been sold the past week, at 58c.

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seem, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances "to survive the washtub."

A patented device of great utility to learners, prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it."—Phila. Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder."—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished, and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines."—Pennsylvanian.

"This Machine, in the opinion of the committee, fills more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Willcox & Gibbs', as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report.

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine."—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 11, 1860.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN,—County of Lenawee, ss.—At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, on Monday, the first day of June, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty three.

Present, Robert R. Beecher, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of John Fisher, deceased. On reading and filing the petition duly verified, of John Fisher junior, son of deceased, praying, among other things, that the last will of said deceased, now on file in this court, may be admitted to probate and that said petitioner may be appointed administrator of said estate.

Thereupon it is ordered that Monday, the thirteenth day of July next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

DETROIT ADVERTISER & TRIBUNE.
PUBLISHED
DAILY, TRI-WEEKLY AND WEEKLY.

The oldest newspaper in Detroit, now in its 34th year—the Advertiser being first established in 1829.

In July last, by the consolidation of the Daily Advertiser and Daily Tribune, a circulation larger than that ever enjoyed by any paper in Michigan was attained. Since then a corps of editors has been secured second to none engaged on any western paper. Some have been employed for years on leading Eastern papers, and bring a rich fund of experience to the columns of the Advertiser & Tribune.

Our expenses for telegraphic despatches are larger than those of any other in Detroit, and more than seven times the amount paid by any one paper a year ago. In fact we now publish simultaneously with them, besides the regular Associated Press dispatches, all the most valuable of the special dispatches that are sent to the Philadelphia Inquirer Pittsburg Gazette, Cincinnati Gazette, St. Louis Democrat, and Chicago Tribune—the five leading papers in the cities in which they are published, and for enterprise not a whit behind the New York journals. Almost daily it occurs that we obtain news by special dispatches twelve hours in advance of the Associated Press, of the correctness of which statement we refer to the numerous readers of our Daily. In this city, where both the daily papers are habitually read by all parties, it is generally conceded that the dispatches of the Advertiser & Tribune are the most reliable and satisfactory of any published in Detroit.

We are now sparing no expense and intend to spare none to place the Advertiser & Tribune in the first rank as a newspaper. Particular attention is given to State news, and to intelligence from our soldiers in the army, a correspondent being maintained in every Michigan Regiment.

Politically the Advertiser & Tribune looks to the salvation of the country by the energetic prosecution of the war now waged against the accursed rebellion of the South. On humantarian grounds, as a war measure, and as a safeguard for the future quiet of the nation, it upholds the Presidents Emancipation Proclamation, and all other war measures of the Government; and while it admits the propriety of friendly criticisms, it holds that no direct and active opposition to the Government is consistent with loyalty, or should be tolerated in the North any more than in the States engaged in the rebellion.

As a commercial paper we aim to make the Advertiser and Tribune the best paper in the State and have employed to conduct this department a man of large experience and reputation. This will make the paper particularly acceptable to farmers, as well as merchants and millers.

Our facilities for printing a large edition have lately been greatly increased by the erection of the fastest press in use in this city, and our circulation is keeping pace with our capacity to print.

TERMS:

DETROIT DAILY ADVERTISER AND TRIBUNE
To Mail Subscribers $2 00 per Quarter.

Contains twenty-two columns of reading matter including local news, telegraph reports, State and miscellaneous items, army correspondence, copious details of war and foreign news, editorial articles, personal and political items, commercial and marine intelligence, etc. etc.

Detroit Tri-Weekly Advertiser & Tribune
To Mail Subscribers $1 00 per quarter; 10 copies to one address $8 75 per Quarter.
Published every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Contains about thirty columns of news, comprising all the most important matter of the daily issue. This edition is well suited to farmers, merchants, and others living at a distance from a post office, or who are reached only by tri-weekly mails. It is becoming very popular throughout the State, so much so that it has increased in circulation about one thousand copies within eleven months.

Detroit Weekly Advertiser and Tribune
$1 50 per year within the State. 20 copies to one address $25 00. Papers sent to soldiers in the army for $1 00 per year.

The Weekly is printed in quarto form, and is as large as any of the New York Weeklies. It is made up of articles carefully selected from the daily edition, and contains besides a carefully prepared review of the news of the week, full commercial reports, a story, and a large amount of interesting miscellany, poetry, etc.

Every one wanting a good State paper should send for the
DETROIT ADVERTISER & TRIBUNE.

Subscriptions may be safely remitted by mail, or will be sent by any Postmaster.

PROPER QUESTION.—The question has been asked, why is it considered impolite for gentlemen to go into the presence of ladies, in their shirt sleeves, while it is considered in every way correct for the ladies themselves to appear before gentlemen without any sleeves at all.

Two Son's.

I have two sons, wife,
Two, and yet the same
Both are only one, wife,
Bearing but one name—
The one is bearded, sunburnt, grim, and fights across the sea:
The other is a little child who sits upon your knee.

Only one is here, wife,
Free from scath and harm;
I can hear his voice, wife,
All about the farm,
The other is a great, strong man, wherever he may be;
But this one, shadowy and dim, is sitting on your knee.

One is fierce and cold, wife,
With a wayward will;
He has passed through fire, wife,
Knowing good and ill;
He has stabbed our hearts for many a year—not broken them—for he
Is still the stainless little one that sits upon your knee.

One did wilful wrong, wife,
Bringing us to shame;
Darkened all the farm, wife,
Blotted our good name;
And when our hearts were big with grief, he sailed across the sea.
But still we keep the little one that sits upon your knee.

One was rash and dark, wife,
Would have say for nay,
Furious when a child, wife,
He went his wily way;
His voice in sinful rage was loud within the farm; but he Remained the crowning little one that sat upon your knee,

One may fall in fight, wife,
Is he not your son?
Pray with all your heart, wife,
For the wayward one;
Pray for the dark, rough soldier who fights across the sea,
Because you love the little one who smiles upon your knee.

One in sinful fight,
As I speak may fall;
But this one at home, wife,
Cannot die at all.
They both are only one; and how thankful we should be.
That we cannot lose the darling son who sits upon your knee.

A Rich Cow Scrape.

An Erie paper has the following: A short time since an affair occurred in a quiet neighborhood in this city, which, though performed by a cow, has not been equaled in pantomimic effect or farcical execution since the performance by the "Bull run in the China Shop."

A family of three persons—one lady and two gentlemen, were startled from a quiet condition of mind about the time they were preparing to retire for the night by an unusual clatter in an adjoining shed. One of the men in his stocking feet, cautiously opened the door leading from the dining room to the outside apartment, and discovered a cow with her head stuffed into a barrel of swill, with her horns fast, and, in her efforts to extricate her antlers, she had overturned a table upon which there had been stacked a quantity of tin ware, crockery, iron pots, &c. Hence the clatter which was loud enough and long enough to resurrect the dead.

The gentleman at once proceeded to drive away the cause of this disturbance, and in so doing brought a dog into the Ring, who, with a bound, fastened upon the cow and caused her to shake off her dishonestly-acquired head-dress, and with nose down and tail aslant, she made a dart through the door, left open, into the dining-room, where she came in contact with a table laid ready to receive the breakfast of the following morning and sundry other things, the upsetting and banging about of which created the greatest confusion imaginable.

Meanwhile the other gentleman, who had already retired into an adjoining bedroom, arose in his nether garments and opened the door of his room to see what was going on outside. The cow thought the opening of this door afforded her an opportunity to make her escape, and accordingly rushed into the bed room.—Here she met with opposition. The space in the room unoccupied by the bed was scarcely large enough to admit her in full length, and so narrow that she could not turn; besides the occupant of the room received her by the horns and endeavored to back her out.

Now commenced the genuine sport of the scene. The little fellow inside was pitching and rearing and swearing at the head of the cow, first on the bed, then in the alley, and next in close proximity to the ceiling his limbs and skirts gyrating and flapping around with wonderful velocity, while the man in the dining-room had seized the animal by the tail, and was pulling, tugging, laughing and yelling, and the cow bellowing and fighting desperately. Together the men see-sawed her back and forth some time before they succeeded in backing her out. Finally she was driven in to the street, but no fire or moving ever created more confusion in affairs of a house-hold than was here to the presence of this cow.

Of all the Percy family, the noblest is Percy-Vere, (persevere); and the most cruel, Percy-Cute (persecute.)

Even Brigham Young's wives are affected with the military spirit; they call their husbands Briggy-dear.

Why are the Mary's the most amiable of their sex? Because they can always be Molly-fied.

Ladies, if your husbands scold you for buying too expensive cuffs, give them a few smart ones to keep them quiet.

A new article of gin has just been brought out, that has to be kept in bottles, as it would eat itself out of a barrel in fifteen minutes.

A Boston man has invented a new pocket that he calls 'thief-proof.' Our people need some change in their pockets.

Appropose of this is the following:

On hearing a clergyman remark, 'The world is full of change,' Mrs. Partington said she could hardly bring her mind to believe it, so little found its way into her pocket.

Said a woman to an old maid, 'My husband is not so good a husband as he should be, but he is a powerful sight better than none.'

A young lady being asked by a boring politition which party she was in favor of, replied that she preferred a wedding party.

A physician, once in company with others of the cloth, thus boasted: 'I was the first to discover the Asiatic cholera, and communicate it to the public.'

When Rabelais was on his death-bed, a consultation of physicians was called.—'Dear gentlemen,' said the wit to the doctors, raising his languishing head, 'let me die a natural death.'

Charles Lamb, playing at whist with Hazlitt, when the latter's hands were rather dirty, said to him: 'Hazlitt, if dirt were trumps, what a fine hand you would have.'

Never did an Irishman utter a better bull than did an honest John, who being asked by a friend: 'Has your sister a son or a daughter?' answered: 'Upon my life, I do not know whether I am uncle or aunt.'

A few days since a town crier took in charge a lost child, and proceeded to hunt up his parents. On being asked by a lady what the matter was, he replied:—'Here's an orphan child, ma'am, and I'm trying to find its parents,'

It is a beautiful saying of somebody that 'gratitude is the music of the heart when its chords are swept by the gentle breeze of kindness.' Many hearts, however, might as well be strung with bed cord for any music of gratitude that ever comes from them.

A poet was walking with M. de Talleryrd in the street, and at the same time reciting some of his own verses. Talleyrand perceiving at a short distance a man yawning, pointed him out to his friend, saying: 'Not so loud, he hears you.'

There is an Irishman employed as a bridge hand down East, who brags of having a time-piece that keeps correct time. He was heard to remark, a few mornings since, upon pulling out his watch: 'If the sun ain't over that hill in a minuit and a half, he will be late.'

An aged spinster was wont to console herself for her disappointments in the matrimonial line by the following reflection: 'If she had been married and had a baby, and the poor thing had crawled into the oven and burnt itself to death, what a horrible thing it would have been!'

Mrs. Elderberry says there must be a great many children killed on battle fields, as there are always so many small armes found after a fight.

How could it be otherwise when such a large proportion of our army is infantry?

THE WAY OF WRITING MODERN ROMANCES.—Albert rode with the speed of an arrow to the garden, sprang like the wind from his steed, climbed like a squirrel over the hedge, writhed like a snake through the palings, flew like a hawk to the arbor, crept up to her all unseen, threw himself passionately at her feet, swore frantically that he would shoot himself, was, however immediately heard, seated himself in blessed delight at her side, sank on her bosom, swam in a sea of bliss—all this was the work of a second!

BEAUTIFUL AND TRUE.—Well has a writer said:—"Flowers are not trifles, as one might know from the care God has taken of them everywhere; not one unfinished; not one bearing the marks of a brush or pencil. Fringing the eternal borders of mountain winters, gracing the pulseless gray old granite, everywhere they are humanizing. Murderers do not ordinarily wear roses in their button holes. villains seldom train vines over cottage doors." And another adds, "Flowers are for the young and the old, the grave and the gay, for the living and for the dead; for all but the guilty, and for the guilty when they are penitent."

GREAT REDUCTION!!

IN THE PRICES OF

SINGER & Co's

STANDARD MACHINES

IS WELL KNOWN TO BE THE BEST FOR MANUFACTURING PURPOSS.

No. 1, STANDARD SHUTTLE MACHINE, (Formerly sold for $00—reduced to $70.)

No. 2, STANDARD SHUTTLE MACHINE [Formerly sold for $100—reduced to $75.]

SINGER'S LETTER A MACHINE

is the Best Machine in the World For Family Sewing and Light Manufacturing Purposes. Price, with Hemmer, and beautifully ornamented, $50.

We would ask for our LETTER A, MACHINES the special attention of Vest Makers and Dress Makers, and all those who want Machines for light manufacturing purposes. They embody the principles of the Manufacturing Machines, making like them the interlocked stitch and are destined to be as celebrated for Family Sewing and light manufacturing purposes as our manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes in general.

Family Sewing Machines are valuable in proportion to the number of things they can do well. See what ours can do before making a purchase.

There is no doubt as to the value of our machines for manufacturing purposes, but it is only of late that the public began to learn that the essential elements of a machine best adapted to the heaviest work, would also be the elements to be embodied in a Family Machine. It is now well understood that our Letter A Machine is the only Family Machine yet offered to the public which has simplicity, rapidity, durability, and certainty of correct action. While as a general thing the sewing machine people are candid enough to acknowledge that our machines are unequaled for munufacturing purposes, they are almost sure to assert; in the same breath, that Singer's letter A, or family Machines, are not as good as theirs!—This is a mere trick of the trade, and we confidently invite those interested in the subject to examine for themselves, and see what our Letter A Family Machines, with all the recent improvements, are capable of doing. While they will sew the most delicate material to perfection, as already stated, they are also adapted to light manufacturing purposes, and this, be it remembered, can not be said of any of the other family machines yet offered to the public.

The No. 1 and 2 Machines are of great capacity and application for manufacturing purposes.

Our No. 3 Machines are especially adapted to all kinds of light and heavy leather work in carriage trimming, boot and shoe making harness making, etc. They are of extra size with an arm long enough to take under it and stitch the largest sized dashes. There is scarcely any part of a trimmers clothing that cannot be better done with them than by hand. so, too, the saving of time and labor is very great. The table of these machines is twenty-four inches long, and the shuttle will hold six times as much thread as the shuttle of those used for tailoring purposes. The large machines work as fast as the small ones.

We have always on hand Hemming Guages, Silk Twist, Linen and Cotton Thread on Spools, best Machine Oil in bottles, &c.

We manufacture our own Needles, and would warn all persons using our machines not to buy any others We know that there are needles sold of the most inferior quality at higher prices than we charge for the best. The needles sold by us are manufactured especially for our machines. A bad needle may render the working of the best machine almost useless.

Our customers may rest assured that all our Branch Offices are furnished with the "genuine article."

In case of small purchases the money may be sent in postage stamps or bank notes.

☞ Correspondents will please write their names distinctly. It is all-important that we should, in each case, know the Post Office County, and State.

☞ All persons requiring information about Sewing Machines, their sizes, prices, working capacities, and the best methods of purchasing, can obtain it by sending to us, or any of our Branch Offices for a copy of "I. M. SINGER & Co's Gazette," which is a beautiful Pictorial Paper, entirely devoted to the subject. It will be sent gratis.

We have made the above REDUCTION IN PRICES with a two-fold view of benefiting the public and ourselves. The public have been swindled by spurious machines made in imitation of ours. The metal in them, from the iron castings to the smallest piece, is of a poor quality. Their makers have not the means to do their work well. They are hid away in secret places, where it would be impossible to have at their command the proper appliances. It is only by having a great business and having extensive manufacturing establishments, that good machines can be made at moderate prices. The best designed machines, badly made, are always liable to get out of order, and are sure to cost considerable trouble and money to keep them in repair.

The qualities to be looked for in a machine are—

Cerrainty of correct action at all rates of speed, simplicity of construction, great durability and rapidity of operation, with the least labor.

Machines, to combine these essential qualities, must be made of the best metal and finished to perfection. We have the ways and means on a grand scale to do this.

The purchasers of machines, whose daily bread it may concern, will find that those having the advantage of speed, but last long in the finest possible working order.—Our machines, as made by us, will earn more money with less labor than any others, whether in imitation of ours or not. In fact they are cheaper than any other machines a a gift.

Song.

BY MRS. M. L. DEMING.

I'm waiting, love, I'm waiting,
The day has come and gone,
And the dreamy shades of twilight,
Are stealing slowly on.
The moon hath bathed the billow,
In a flood of golden light,
But I'm waiting love, I'm waiting,
For you said you'd come to-night.

I'm waiting, love, I'm waiting,
In the arbor by the sea,
And the perfumed breath of evening
Is stealing o'er the lea;
The gentle flowers are sleeping
Beneath the moon's pale light,
While here I'm fondly waiting,
For you said you'd come to-night.

I'm waiting, love, I'm waiting,
The night is growing drear,
Methinks you could not thus forget
Our promised meeting here;
But hark! I hear a footstep
Come tripping through the light;
Ah! bless you, darling, bless you—
I knew you'd come to-night.

Married at Last.

Believing in short prefaces, we will simply say that the scene of our story is laid in a New England village, in which way situated a flourishing female seminary, and which is considered now, as then, unrivalled in finishing young ladies.

About three-quarters of a mile from the seminary building, resided a well to do farmer, Peter Buttonwood, by name, who though turned towards the shady side of forty, by a few months, still remained unmarried, and was like to be, till done with the "vale of woe," or at least so report said. The trouble was not on account of his not liking womanhood, for there was not a dozen girls for miles around that he had not tried to pay court to, but with poor success, as his now remaining single proves. The reason a few words can tell—he bestowed his attentions only on those who were young enough to be his daughters.

Peter disposed of the products of his farm principally at the boarding house connected with the seminary; and as he attended to its disposal himself, most of the girls that had been at school for any time, had got on speaking terms with him, and many were the jokes cracked at his expense.

His counterpart was found in the village, in the shape of Miss Nancy Grant, who owned up to thirty-eight, and who also had made many unsuccessful attempts at matrimony, all of which were lamentable failures; and even the lady in question began to think that the fates were against her, though she by no means gave up in despair, for she knew well the adage "as long as there is life, there is hope."

For several days the girls had many consultations, while out of school, which always ended in a burst of merriment.—It was evident that they were planning something of vast importance, and amazing withal. What it was the denouement will explain.

One morning in spring, Peter Buttonwood opened his eyes. Now that was no unusual feat that it need be chronicled here, but no sooner had he done this, than he closed them again and groaned. Now there were two things unusual in this procedure on the part of Peter. In the first place, Peter being a thrifty farmer, was always out of bed as soon as he was fairly awake; and in the next place his bodily health was never better.—What could be the meaning of this unusual proceeding?

"I won't get up first this morning, see if I do!" came from beneath the bed clothes, as he pulled them over his head. "Biddy Flannagan may build the fire this morning, or it may go without being built. Wish I was married, so as to make the help know her place. Heigho! wonder if I ever shall get married or not?" and with a sigh, our hero tried to sleep.

With much spluttering, Biddy built the fire that morning, though not until she had been interrupted twice by old Mrs. Buttonwood, sending her to Peter's door, to see if he was not going to get up, or was sick, for the old lady was much worried at this freak of her son; but it was not till breakfast was ready that he deigned to come down stairs.

As he entered the kitchen, the "daughter of Erin" approached with a letter saying:

"And sure, sir, here's a litter that Patrick Mulligan has jest brought over from the Seminary."

Peter took the missive and glanced at the back of it. It was directed in a delicate hand, and the heart of our hero gave a great thump. Surely it must be from some of the young ladies, and as this was leap year, she being in love with him, had the right to open a correspondence. Not daring to read it where his looks might betray him, he put it in his pocket till he could peruse it alone after eating his breakfast.

"And sure, Patrick said he should be round in an hour for the answer to the same!" said Biddy.

"It shall be ready for him by that time," replied Peter.

After the repast was over, our hero went to the barn and opened his letter.—The contents were as follows:

GLENNILLE, April 1st, 1860.

My dear Peter Buttonwood:—What can you think of a young and delicate lady, who, without encouragement, thus presumes to declare her love? Pardon me for thus exercising the rights and privileges of my sex, in declaring my love for you. For a year my heart has been all your own, and if you return my love, don't fail to meet me at the leaning oak in the meadow to-night at nine precisely. I shall send this by Patrick, and in an hour he will call for an answer. Come without fail, or you will break the heart of your TRUE LOVE, N. G.

"Nellie Graythorn, by the piper that played before Moses! Of course, N. G. can be no other. And she loves me!—Ah, Peter, this will pay you for waiting! Lucky dog, ain't you, Peter? She is but eighteen, and has property to the amount of five thousand in cash. Gosh! Peter Buttonwood, your fortune is made. But I must answer this immediately," and Peter, in his joy and forgetfulness, gave his horse a peck of meal instead of a quart as usual.

That day, just as Nancy Grant had finished her dinner, one of the seminary girls came in and handed a letter that she had just obtained from the post office for her. With the utmost gravity, the maiden suggested that perhaps it was an offer of marriage, and then left the spinster's cottage.

"La sakes, who can it be from?" murmured the spinster, as she drew from the lowest depths of her capacious pocket a pair of spectacles, which she only sported when alone. "A man's hand writing, I declare!" and all of a tremble, she opened the letter and read as follows:

GLENVILLE, April 1st, 1860.

My Dear Nellie:—I have long loved you, above houses and lands, and all I possess; but I feared you didn't return my love. I think we had better be married right off, as I am in want of a housekeeper. Be sure to be at the Leaning Oak to-night at nine o'clock to exchange our vows.

Your true lover,

PETER BUTTONWOOD.

"An offer, as sure as I am born, and from Peter Buttonwood, too! And he has loved me all this time, perhaps for years. What a pity he had not told me before, we might have married ten years ago. But better late than never Miss Nabby Buttonwood! He called me Nellie; how romantic he is! Well, well, I shan't be an old maid, and that is a great comfort. Dear Peter, I'll be there as sure as rivers don't run up hill. See if I don't!"

At just a quarter of nine Peter Buttonwood, dressed in his Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes, emerged from his residence, and bent his steps towards the Leaning Oak, which, by the way, was located in the cow pasture at the foot of a steep hill.

"What a happy man am I," mused Peter to himself as he plodded on. "Nellie will make a capital wife, to say nothing of the five thousand dollars, which added to two thousand that I've got in the bank will make seven thousand!—Eureka!" and our hero went through divers feats of gymnastics, that were perhaps more practical than elegant; but as he neared the place of meeting he sobered down somewhat.

Meanwhile, beneath the tree Nabby Grant was waiting for his coming. She would have been afraid to come that distance alone, had not the moon shone bright, and the days of her maidenhood were numbered. Just at her arrival at the tree, she was startled by something that sounded like a giggle up among the branches, and she was sure that she saw something white in the same direction; but as she had left her spectacles at home she could not determine, and as she heard no more sounds, she dismissed it from her mind.

Punctual as a deacon at dinner, Peter reached the tree. The moon at this moment hid her face behind a cloud, as if the 'man' that is fabled to reside there, was too modest to witness the meeting of the happy twain. Peter saw only a female form dressed in white, and he rushed forward and clasped her in his ardent embrace.

"My dear Nellie!"

"My dear Peter!"

"Will you have me dearest?" for Peter was bound to make sure of his prize, remembering, we suppose, the old adage of "Many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip."

"Yes, Peter," softly said the spinster.

The enraptured lover sealed the bargain with a kiss, and he was just on the point of making it doubly sure, when the moon burst suddenly from behind the cloud, and discovered to his horrified gaze, the sharp face of the happy spinster.

"What means this, Miss Grant?" at last ejaculated the astonished Peter.

"How can you ask, Peter dear?" said the spinster coming forward to his side.

"April Fool!" came seemingly from above their heads.

They both started as if they had been found guilty of a theft, but the moon disappeared again and they could discover nothing, so they concluded they must have been mistaken.

"How happy we shall be when we are married, shan't we, Peter?" said the affectionate spinster.

"I shan't marry you, Miss Grant!" said Peter, in a surly tone.

Before the astounded Nabby could recover from her astonishment at these words, the voice above them exclaimed in a ringing tone:

"Sue him for breach of promise if he won't" and then followed a burst of laughter from a dozen throats, and out from the branches, and down the leaning trunk, came Nellie Graythorn, followed by half a score of seminary girls, and surrounded the astonished pair, who would gladly have taken to their heels had it been practicable, before their advent.

"Mr. Peter Buttonwood!" said Nellie, in a very solemn voice, assumed for the occasion, "I, and these ladies, have heard you propose, and have heard you accepted by Miss Grant; thus you see she has got a large number of witnesses to prove it, and it will be impossible for you to escape. Beware!" and at a motion from her, she and her companions turned and left the pair alone to discuss the matter.

Miss Grant would not waive her claim, and hinted that she would do as had been suggested by Nellie, and this had the effect to bring round Peter; and the marriage was celebrated a week later, to which all the school girls had invitations, for the happy bride was sensible of the favor they had done her by that April fool joke, nor in after years did Peter regret it.

The Christian Gentleman.

He is above a mean thing. He can not stoop to a mean fraud. He invades no secrets in the keeping of another. He betrays no secrets confided to his own keeping. He never struts in borrowed plumage. He takes selfish advantage of no man's mistakes. He uses no ignoble weapons in controversy. He never stabs in the dark. He is ashamed of innuendos. He is not one thing to a man's face and another behind his back. If by accident he comes into possession of his neighbors' counsels, he passes upon them an act of instant oblivion. He bears sealed packages without tampering with the wax.—Papers not meant for his eye, whether they flutter in at his window, or lie open before him in unguarded exposure, are sacred to him. He professes no privacy of others, however the sentry sleeps.—Bolts and bars, locks and keys, hedges and pickets, bonds and securities, notices to trespassers, are none of them for him. He may be trusted, himself out of sight—near the thinnest partition—anywhere. He buys no office, he sells none, he intrigues for none. He would rather fail of his rights than win them through dishonor. He will eat honest bread. He tramples on no sensitive feeling. He insults no man. If he have rebuke for another, he is straight forward, open and manly. He cannot descend to scurility. Billingsgate don't lie in his track. From all profane and wanton words his lips are chastened. Of woman and to her, he speaks with decency and respect. In short whatever he judges honorable, he practices toward every man.

☞ At one of the last balls of the Paris season the Empress wore eight hundred bunches of violets on her cress—each violet containing diamonds to represent dew drops.

First shot in the Revolution.

The first American who discharged his gun on the day of the battle of Lexington was Ebenezer Lock, who died at Deering, N. H., about fifty years ago. He resided at Lexington in 1775. The British regulars, at the order of Major Pitcairn, having fired at a few Americans on the green in front of the meeting house, killing some and wounding others, it was a signal of war. "The citizens might be seen coming from all directions in the roads, over the fields and through the woods, each with his rifle in his hand, his powder-horn to his side, and his pockets provided with bullets." Among the number was Ebenezer Lock.

The British had posted a reserve of Infantry a mile in the rear, in the direction of Boston. This was in the neighborhood of Mr. Lock, who, instead of hastening to join the party at the green, placed himself in an open cellar at a convenient distance for doing execution. A portion of the reserve was standing on a bridge, and Mr. Lock commenced firing at them. There was no other American in sight. He worked valiantly for some ten minutes, bringing down one of the enemy at nearly every shot. Up to this time not a gun had been fired elsewhere by the Americans. The British, greatly disturbed by loosing so many men by the random fire of the unseen foe, were not long in discovering the man in the cellar, and discharging a volley of balls, which lodged in the walls opposite. Mr. Lock, remaining unhurt, continued to load and fire with the precision of a distinguished marksman. He was driven to such close quarters, however, by the British on his right and left, that he was compelled to retreat.

He had just one bullet left, and there was but one way to escape, and that was through an orchard, and not one moment was to be lost; he leveled his gun at the man near by, dropped the weapon, and the man was shot through the heart. The balls whistled about him. Lock reached the brink of a steep hill, and throwing himself down on the ground, tumbled downwards, rolling as if mortally wounded. In this way he escaped unhurt. At the close of the war he moved to New Hampshire, where he resided until his death, twenty years after. He lived in seclusion and died in peace.

Growth of Timber.

It is a singular fact that what were vast treeless prairies in Illinois twelve years ago are now covered with a dense growth of thrifty young forest trees, comprising various species of oak, hickory, cotton-wood, ash, etc. So rapid has been this change in many localities, that where some of the early settlers located, twenty to twenty-five years ago, without a tree around them, they can now cut and hew good building timber a foot square. Prairie land, when kept from the annual fall burning formerly practiced by the Indians, rapidly produces a growth of trees. Some of the old citizens, who greedily located the timber land when they came to this country, and were careless about acquiring prairie, now find the latter of more value than the former, their timber has grown faster than they used it.

A HEART THAT FEELS FOR ANOTHER.—"I give and bequeath to Mary my wife, the sum of one hundred pounds a year. Is that written down, master?"

"Yes. But she is not so old; she may marry again. Won't you make any change in that case? Most people do."

"Ah, do they? Well, write again, and say: And if my wife marries again, I give and bequeath to her the sum of two hundred pounds a year. That'll do won't it master?"

Why, its generally the other way; the legacy is lessened if the widow marries again."

"Aye, but him as gets her'll deserve it."

GOOD CON.—"Arrah, me darlint," cried Jamie O'Falagen to his loquacious sweetheart, who had given him no opportunity of even answering her remarks during a two hours' ride behind his little bay nags in his oyster wagon—"are you afther knowing why your cheeks are like my ponies there?"

"Shure an' it's because they're red is it?" quoth blushing Bridget.

"Faith, and a better raison than that, mavourneen. Because there is one ov them on each side uv a wagin' tongue!"—Arrah! booh!

Try to love labor. If you don't want it for food, you may for physic.

The Reckless Sailor.

The days of miracles are past, but the blessed promises of the Bible are a living truth to-day. In a seaport town of New England there lived a pious woman, a widow with one son. He was a sailor; and at the early age of nineteen, seemed to be hopelessly hardened in vice. His mother had prayed for him earnestly and unceasingly, as only a mother can pray for an erring and beloved child; but after years of supplication and tearful waiting, she could see no change for the better.

She attended a prayer-meeting, where a sailor, in his homely phraise, told what a wicked life he had led, what God had done for his soul, and begged the praying men and women of that audience to pray for the sailors.

The mother's heart was full, thinking of her own son. She went home, resolved to spend that day and night in prayer for her boy. She did so; and at midnight it seemed to her that a great weight was lifted from her soul. She felt a strong assurance that her prayers were heard.—The next letter that mother received from her wanderer brought the glad tidings of his conversion.

He wrote her, that on a certain day he felt a new and strange concern about his soul. His mother appeared to be present with him, urging him, as she had so often done, to forsake his evil courses. He read his Bible; he tried to pray; he sought the aid of a Christian sailor on board the ship, and four days after wrote to his mother in a new spirit, and with a new hope. May not this true story carry encouragement to many desparing hearts?

Gambling in the Army.

It may be interesting to some to know the manner in which gamblers are sometimes punished in the army.

Colonel C——of the New York State Volunteers having ordered the reading upon dress-parade of an order, in relation to those who were in the habit of playing cards and other games of chance, to cease the same, and having found his order violated by some under his command, ordered their arrest and punishment.

Eight were thus arrested and ordered to be punished, 3 of whom were sentenced to carry rails upon their shoulders attended by a guard during a certain number of hours, and the remainder to have boards placed upon their backs with the word GAMBLER painted in large letters, so that their comrades might know the particular crime for which they were punished; then they were marched thro' the streets of the camp attended with a guard and music, to their shame and disgrace. The Colonel, detesting the vile practice, made up his mind to stop it; and all who are under him admire him as a man, and love him as a father.

Old Bartey and his Excuse.

Old Bartey Willard was a wheelwright by trade, and though an excellent workman, was remarkable for procrastination. He would promise over and over again, with as little scruple and as many "positively lasts," as a theatrical star. Having pledged his word to a very urgent customer for the third time, that he would have his cart done by a certain day, Bartey again failed to keep his engagement, and on the arrival of the owner the cart was still unfinished.

"Well, said the customer "you have got my cart done this time of course."

"Yes," said Bartey, "I have done the work, and supposed it was quite ready for you, when I discovered that I had made an unaccountable mistake that will put me back a fortnight,"

"Ah, indeed," said the customer; "what is the trouble?"

"Why, you see," said Bartey, with gravity and an air of extreme vexation, "you see I have made a mistake—I never made such a blunder in my life—I have committed the ridiculous mistake of making both wheels for the same side; they are both off wheels."

"Is it possible?" said the customer, who was thoroughly mystified; and so allowed old Bartey two weeks more to finish the cart.

PROPER QUESTION.—The question has been asked, why is it considered impolite for gentlemen to go into the presence of ladies, in their shirt sleeves, while it is considered in every way correct for the ladies themselves to appear before gentlemen without any sleeves at all.

Constitution of the U. States.

SEC. 6. The Senators and Representatives shall receive a compensation for their services, to be ascertained by law, and paid out of the Treasury of the United States. They shall in all cases, except treason, felony, and breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at the session of their respective houses, and in going to and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in either house, they shall not be questioned in any other place.

No Senator or Representative shall during the time for which he was elected, be appointed to any civil office under the authority of the United States, which shall have been created, or the emoluments whereof shall have been increased during such time; and no person holding any office under the United States, shall be a member of either house during his continuance in office.

SEC. 7. All bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives; but the Senate may propose or concur with the amendments as on other bills.

Every bill which shall have passed the House of Representatives and the Senate, shall, before it become a law, be presented to the President of the United States; if he approve he shall sign it, but if not he shall return it, with his objections, to that house, in which it shall have originated, who shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If after such reconsideration two-thirds of that house shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered, and if approved by two-thirds of that house, it shall become a law. But in all such cases the votes of both houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, and the names of the persons voting for and against the bill shall be entered on the journal of each house respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the President within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the Congress by their adjournment prevent its return, in which case it shall not be a law.

Every order, resolution, or vote to which the concurrence of the Senate and House of Representatives may be necessary (except on a question of adjournment) shall be presented to the President of the United States; and, before the same shall take effect, shall be approved by him, or being disapproved by him, shall be repassed by a two-thirds of the Senate and House of Representatives, according to the rules and limitations prescribed in the case of a bill.

SEC. 8. The Congress shall have power—

To lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts, and excises, to pay the debts and provide for the common defence and general welfare of the United States; but all duties, imposts and excises shall be uniform throughout the United States;

To borrow money on the credit of the United States;

To regulate commerce with foreign nations, and among the several States, and with the Indian tribes;

To establish an uniform rule of naturalization, and uniform laws on the subject of bankruptcies throughout the United States;

To coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin, and fix the standard of weights and measures;

To provide for the punishment of counterfeiting the securities and current coin of the United States;

To establish post offices and post-roads;

To promote the progress of science and useful arts, by securing for limited times to authors and inventors the exclusive right to their respective writings and discoveries;

To constitute tribunals inferior to the Supreme Court; to define and punish piracies and felonies committed on the high seas, and offences against the law of nations.

To declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make rules concerning captures on land and water;

SEC. 10. No State shall enter into any treaty, alliance, or confederation; grant letters of marque and reprisal; coin money; emit bills of credit; make any thing but gold and silver coin a tender in payment of debts; pass any bill of attainder, ex post facto law, or law imparing the obligation of contracts, or grant any title of nobility.

No State shall, without the consent of the Congress, lay any imposts or duties on imports or exports, except what may be absolutely necessary for executing its inspection laws: and the nett produce of all duties and imposts, laid by any State on imports or exports, shall be for the use of the Treasury of the United States, and all such laws shall be subject to the revision and control of Congress. No State shall without the consent of Congress, lay and duty of tonnage, keep troops or ships of war in time of peace, enter into any agreement or compact with another State or with a foreign power, or engage in war, unless actually invaded, or in such imminent danger as will not admit of delay.

CONTINUED NEXT WEEK.

We cut the following from a recent unmber of the N. Y. Tribune:

"We shall believe, so long as we can, that the Government will not again be chargeable with such fatal mismanagement. But it is well that it should bear in mind that there is a limit to all human endurance, even when the suffering is inflicted by one's most trusted friends.—If Grant and his brave army shall be left to be overwhelmed, and the nation be again agonized with the spectacle of hecatombs of its children slain to no purpose, the loyal millions will not quail nor abate one jot of their spirit even in the presence of so great a calamity; but they may feel that it would be no longer a duty to tolerate the men in whom they had confided, and who only day after day have given proof upon proof that they can neither comprehend nor grapple successfully with the magnitude and the demands of the task before them.

"We feel it our duty to tell the President these things. The people believe in the perpetuity of the Republic, but they cannot believe in eternal weakness.—They believe in the ultimate triumph of the national cause, but they cannot forever endure a chronic apathy and improvidence that no experience, however sharp, and no adversity, however appalling, can stimulate or instruct. They demand at least the same foresight and vigor in promoting their cause that its enemies exhibit in assailing it. The time is past for quieting the country under inexcusable disaster, with assurances that tedious and long wars and incompetency in waging them, are as old as the world itself. With unlimited means, and with powers, evil and military, that are literally despotic, placed in the hands of the President, there ought at this day to be no failures. We trust that the issue at Vicksburg will prove that there will be none, and that there is an end of the system which, if longer continued, must waste away and consume, not the enemies of the Republic, but the Republic itself."

A Free Talker.

General C. B. WILCOX of Michigan, who has been appointed to command the District of Indiana and Michigan, is a West Point graduate, and was taken prisoner at Bull Run with CORCORAN and others. On his release he came to Washington and met with a reception, at which he spoke, saying among other things:

"Without casting reflection upon any military men, it appeared to him that this has been a brainless war! ['That's so,' and laughter.] The means of the country have been wasted in isolated places. Contractors have carried on the war.—The blood of our men, the groans of the orphan and the wails of the window have been coined into money. Men without patriotism and without wisdom have urged military plans, which have not accomplished any thing. Expeditions have been gotten up to wipe the outside of the platter on the coast, while there are places that could be struck to rapidly terminate the rebellion."

☞The following incident has been related and vouched for by our informant: Peter Apple, of Oakland, in this county, was lately recruited for the 11th Indiana, and took part in the attempt to storm one of the Vicksburg batteries. The rebel fire was so destructive that our army recoiled. Apple, the "raw recruit," "didn't see" the backward movement and kept going until he came right up to one of the rebel guns, caught a gunner by the collar and brought him within our lines, saying: "Boys, why didn't you come on. Every fellow might have got one." We have heard of no more daring act of bravery than this little incident since the war began.—Ind. Journal.

Enforcement of the Laws.

Plato and Aristotle declared that "The law is mind without passion." According to Demosthenes "the design and object of laws is to ascertain what is just, honorable and expedient; and when that is discovered, it is proclaimed as a general ordinance, equal and impartial to all.—This is the origin of law, which for various reasons all are under an obligation to obey, but especially because law is the resolution of wise men, the correction of every offence, and the general compact of the State, to live in conformity with which is the duty of every individual in society.

Algernon Sidney says, that "the Israelites, Spartans, Romans and others, who framed their governments according to their own will, did it not by any peculiar privelege, but by a universal right conferred upon them by God and nature.—They were made of no better clay than others; they had no right that does not as well belong to other nations; that is to say, the Constitution of every government is referred to those who are concerned in it, and no other has anything to do with it. Sir William Blackstone remarks, that "every man when he enters into society, gives up a part of his natural liberty, as the price of so valuable a purchase; and in consideration of receiving the advantages of mutual commerce, obliges himself to conform to those laws which the community has thought proper to establish. And this species of legal obedience and conformity is infinitely more desirable than that wild and savage liberty which is sacrificed to obtain it.—For no man that considers a moment, would wish to retain the absolute and uncontrolled power of doing whatever he pleases; the consequence of which is, that every other man would have the same power, and then there would be no security to individuals in any of the enjoyments of life. Political, therefore, or civil liberty, which is that of a member of society, is no other than natural liberty, so far restrained by human laws as is necessary and expedient for the general advantage of the public. Hence we may collect that the law, which restrains a man from doing mischief to his fellow-citizens, though it diminishes the natural, increases the civil liberty of mankind. And Locke has well observed, "where there is no law there is no freedom."

These remarks, in connection with those quoted from eminent jurists and statesmen of our our country, which will be found in our recent editorials under the heads of "The Constitution," and "The Union," show the opinions of both ancient and modern patriots and jurists on the infinite importance of civil law and its strict observance to the peace, happiness and prosperity of society. That we have had laws under which we prospered beyond all other nations, while our whole people respected and observed those laws will not be questioned. But when we ignored the source from whence our prosperity eminated; when we learned to listen complacently to the siren song that individual conscience was to be our guide when to obey the civil law, and when to violate it; when a great section of the Union dared to trample on the fundamental law, then the seeds of jealousy and disunion were sown broadcast, which rapidly sprung up among us, producing fearful harvests of misery and crime. It is in vain however to recall the bitter memories of the past; to show by what slow and insidous means two great sections of the Union were alienated and at last brought into deadly strife. We have no heart to discuss the remote and immediate causes of the terrible feud which is desolating our country at this time. The great question before us is, what can we do to save our nation from anarchy and ruin? This question comes home to every patriotic heart with peculiar force at this hour of despondency and political gloom, and the answer springs spontaneously to the lips of every true citizen—STAND BY THE CONSTITUTION AND SEE THAT THE LAWS ARE ENFORCED.

—Electric clocks have become very gederal in France within the last few years, several of the chief lines of railway as well as a number of public buildings in Paris, being "timed" in this manner. It is now proposed to erect small clock towers, simple columns, with dials on all sides, in the main thoroughfares of the French metropolis, to give the true time to a second to all passers by. The hands of the whole of the dials will be put in movement by an electric currant from the Paris Observatory.

Independence Day.

Day after to morrow is July 4th. No need of our telling it,—everybody knows it, and beats there a northern heart that does not throb quicker at the remembrance of it. There is some who would have us believe that it is but a delusive dream we are reveling in; that naught remains but the broken fragments of a once glorious union. We know that there were only thirteen stars on our flag when Fourth of July's were instituted, but one after another has appeared until now there are thirty-four. And because a few look dim through the strife shall we count them as lost? No. For each one has its own peculiar brightness, and they would be sadly missed from the galaxy. Shall we give up the old flag, altogether, stars, stripes and all—can we give up a flag whose stars are not spun from a silk worm's shroud, nor wove in a factory?—They are God's own stars shining through the heaven of blue, and its crimson is dyed with the blood of our fore-fathers—they around whose brow time has twined the laurel. Can we give it up, or blot out one of its stars.

Our flag, emblem of our country, is there any one that is less proud of it today than they were three years ago.—The winds fling it to the breeze just as proudly, the zephyrs linger among its folds just as lovingly as they did before a traitor's hand had been raised against it. The little rills and rivulets sing our country's praises just as sweetly to the hills that hover around them. The torrents and cataracts chant its praises just as grandly. The waves of the old ocean's that washes its shores still throw their silver spray, and rocks still keep their virgils to stay its waves of pride. The mountains rear their heads just as proudly, and the lakes still mirror its beauties. Nature performs all her offices the same as she did in its days of prosperity. And is it possible that there are those who have lived 'neath the protecting folds of the old flag, who will desert it now, are there any true hearts found in the ranks with those who are trying to destroy the best government that ever existed?

Think, before you raise your hand against it, what a country it is you contemplate destroying. Only 243 years ago our pilgrim fathers landed, a feeble band they were, and now we are the most powerful nation on the globe, think of it, only 243 years ago. We are a powerful nation, we are carrying on war that would soon ruin most of countries, but ours stands firm. Manufactory increases, trade is the same, and want is not felt.

The hand of England is stretched across the waters to grasp ours in friendship and sympathy; it is not the white, jewelled hand that is fitting out its Alabamas and sending its ships laden with help for our country's foes; but it is a hard, brown hand; it is the laboring hand of England, but we see it is the hand of want. We forget the wrongs inflicted by the rich hand, and soon ships are seen crossing the ocean laden with relief for England's poor.

When the next Fourth of July rolls around we hope that the sun of peace that now shines forth like a "pale Pleaid through the rack of the storm," will shine out as bright as in the days of yore, but God grant that it may not shine on a disevered "Union."

Removal of the President of the University.

A bare majority of the Board of Regents of the University of Michigan met at Ann Arbor on Thursday last, and summarily removed Dr. Henry P. Tappan from the Presidency of the University over which he has presided with signal ability and success during the last eleven years.

The Regents who did this great thing (?) have been relieved by the people from all official connection with with the University after the 1st day of January next.—But possessing remarkable acumen—more in fact than the obtuse intellects of common people, like ourselves, had given them credit for—they probably feared that the profound wisdom which they have exhibited in governing the University would perish with them; that their successors would not have an amount of brains essential to grasp the important interests of the Institution, and therefore; waving; all feelings of delicacy, they summarily and as it appears to us most uncourtiously removed a gentleman whose reputation and long tried devotion to the University have placed it first among the Collegiate Institutions of the west; and raised it to a position of equality, at least, with the old and far-famed University Institutions of the east.

☞Mrs. Partington says she can't understand these 'ere market reports.—She can understand how cheese can be lively and pork can be active, and feathers drooping—that is, if it's raining; but how can whisky be steady, or hops quiet, or spirits dull, she can't see; neither how lard can be firm in warm weather, nor iron unsettled, nor potatoes depressed, nor flour rising—unless there had been yeast put in it—and sometimes it would not rise then.

From the 18th Regiment.

BARRACKS 18th MICHIGAN,
NASHVILLE, June 28d.

DEAR HERALD:—

We are having pleasant times to day, on account of the gay "green backs" being distributed among us again; under almost any circumstances this alone, would make us feel fine. You are probably aware that we are on provost duty, and Lt. Col. Spaulding is Provost Marshal of this city. We relieved the 8th Kansas, about two weeks ago, and moved from our tents to these pleasant quarters in the Court House, which is situated in public square, and you have no idea how very neat we are here. This is a large building 150 x 85 feet. The first floor, and walls of the first story, are of granite; a wide hall traverses the whole length, on either side of which, are the different county officers, all occupied, excepting two of the most spacious, which are used for the Regimental Hospital, and are kept in the very cleanest and most comfortable state possible, under the direction of our excellent Surgeons, Stevens and Baldwin; these gentlemen conduct this hospital in a manner not to be excelled in any regiment in this department.

The second and third floors are occupied by eight companies; every morning by 7 1-2 o'clock, the floors are all swept clean, the dirt being drawn away with the close sweepings of the grounds around the building. Companies I and C occupy their tents, near the State House, four squares from here; they are equally as neat and comfortably situated as we.

We have nice bunks, regular garrison style, two stories; each berth accommodating two sleepers. Each bunk has a nice gun rack at its head, to hold four guns.

Every Saturday, the long hose from the steam fire engine house,—just across the street,—is connected with the hydrant, brought over into the building the floors deluged with water, and scrubbed perfectly clean. Not a man is allowed to spit on the floor, so we have spit boxes. At four o'clock every P. M. the streets about the building are sprinkled with water from the same hydrant and hose preparatory to dress parade and battalion drill at 5 o'clock, on each of which occasions the side walks are crowded with spectators, from many of whom may be heard the expression, "what a fine regiment and how splendidly drilled, &c, &c. which remarks are "too true".

Our beloved Colonel has been put in command of the 3d Brigade, 2d Division, Reserve Corps, of which we are a part, with the 22d Mich., the 106th and 108th Ohio, and the 1st Middle Tennessee, also Co. E. 1st Ohio artillery. Lieut. Charles Hewitt is acting as Aid on his staff.

You may judge we see something of city life, and very likely think it must be a fine thing to live in the city and soldier, but to be on duty 20 hours out of the 24 every other day, changes the story entirely.

Quite a demonstration was made yesterday, not of evil, but of the good feeling of the members of Co. E, towards their excellent 1st Lieut. E. H. Hoag.—After dinner, the company was formed in line, and Lt. H. was summoned by Orderly Crane to receive a present; Serg't Snyder officiated in behalf of the company, by stepping to the front with a beautiful sword and belt, which he presented with the following remarks:

"We the members of Co. E, as a token of our regards, have each contributed to purchase this sword for you; it is not as beautiful and costly as we would like to have presented you, yet we sincerely trust that it may, in a measure, show our great esteem of your manly conduct as an officer toward us. Many of our members have left us, since departing from our loved homes, some have returned home again, some have, we hope, gone to a better world, where war is not known, while the rest are in some of the numerous hospitals stricken by the hand of disease, but were they here, they would join us in this just as freely as we now do, for when we look back upon our long marches, your fidelity and watchfullness over us in those marches, we think this but a small gift beside one you deserve. Therefore, take it, and when you draw it, as you may, on the field of battle, think of the trust we now put in you, that it may never be sheathed in dishonor."

Lieut. Hoag responded in a few appropriate remarks.

A very fine sword and belt was also presented to G. Romyne Baldwin, by the non commissioned staff, of which he was a member, as Hospital Steward, but recently promoted to Assistant Surgeon.—We were reviewed to-day by General Granger, who spoke very highly of the Regiment, particularly of Co. E, which he said was the best company he had inspected in the division.

L. D. C.

It is estimated that there will be 6,000 canal boats in operation on the Eric Canal this summer, and the pressure of grain is so great that it is believed all the boats will be fully employed. The arrival of grain at Buffalo since navigation opened is greater than ever before.

The Rebel Invasion.

NEW YORK, June 30.—A special to the Times, Harrisburg, 29th says:—Throughout the day our forces have held a position beyond the Harrisburg fortifications, in anticipation of the enemy's advance, but the rebels have not shown any inclination to make an attack. This morning a few shots were exchanged between the rebels and our own pickets. The opinion is gaining credence that the rebels are manœvering to take Harrisburg by a flank movement. It is reported that they have a pontoon train twelve miles this side of Columbia. This, however, is somewhat doubtful.

"A gentleman just escaped from the rebel lines at Chamberaburg, reports the rebel column moving eastward to the number of 39,000, accompanied by 104 pieces of artillery. Gen. Lee, with his staff officers, was in Chambersburg last Saturday.

"Thirty-three prisoners, captured at Mount Union, were brought into town this morning.

"Gen. Stahl is appointed to the command of the cavalry forces in this Department.

"Another order has been issued by the rebel Gen. Ewell, dated June 23d, relative to restrictions enjoined upon his army and citizens of the country through which the rebels pass. He urges that a ready acquiesence with the demands of the military authorities will serve greatly to lessen the rigors of the war.

"It was confidently believed this morning the enemy would commence an attack to-day. In all probability to-morrow or next day will develop his intended movements. Possibly Lee may contemplate the capture of Baltimore and consider Harrisburg of secondary importance."

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—The excitement to-day was intense. Until a late hour to night the streets were crowded with an excited populace, eagerly inquiring for the news and enlisting in defense of the city and State. At the Navy Yard and most of the workshops of the city, business is either entirely suspended or closed at an early hour, to allow the men to drill. and most of the stores on Market and Chestnut streets are closed early for the same purpose. The city, no doubt, will soon be placed in a state of defense.

PHILADELPHIA, June 30.—A special to the Inquirer from Baltimore, states that a train had arrived from the western terminus of the Western Md. C. R. R. No rebels appeared along the route.

It is ascertained that a large body of Federal cavalry reached Gettysburg, and took possession, capturing a number of rebels. Our army is gradually moving in that direction. Trains on the Northern Central Railroad run to Parkton, 26 miles from Baltimore. No apprehensions are felt for the Baltimore and Washington Railroad. It is stongly protected, also the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore road. Gunboats are in the Gun. powder river and at Havre de Grace and Bush river.

The defences of Baltimore are very strong. The cars from Baltimore to Frederick were obliged to return after reaching near Sykesville, where a large force of rebel cavalry were tearing up the track.

PHILADELPHIA, June 30.—A dispatch from Harrisburg received this morning states that the authorities of Harrisburg have information apparently reliable, that Ewell's corps with a portion of Hill's and Longstreet's will move to-day towards Harrisburg. They number about 40,000 men.

COLUMBIA, Pa., June 30.—S. S. Blair train master on the Northern Centra Railroad, left York this morning. The rebels had all left except their rear guard which was moving off when he left. The rebels are supposed to be moving towards Harrisburg. They left unexpectedly and in a hurry. It was reported that Gen. Pleasanton's outer pickets had been seen within four miles of York. The total demand on York by the rebels amounted to $300,000, the citizens raised $30,000 in cash and subsistance, and the rebels allowed them twenty days to raise the ballance. No private families were molested. The citizens were all treated with respect. The railroad property was not disturbed, with the exception of about 100 old cars which were at the shop awaiting repairs. The railroad south of Glen Rock was not interferred with in any way. The rebel force at York was not over 8,000, with eighteen pieces of artillery. The rebel force at Wrightsville was 3,000 with five pieces of artillery.

HARRISBURG, June 30.—All is quiet. The rebels have retreated beyond Carlisle.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—A letter from the army of the Potomac, received to-night, says Gen. Meade's appointment is well received everywhere, and that he is employed in arranging his plans for the future. Our troops are now in a position to repel an attack or at once assume the offensive.

BALTIMORE, June 30.—Martial law has been declared in Baltimore, and in all counties on the Westere shore of Maryland.

Horse Thief Arrested.

A short time since a man by the name of Wolver was arrested at South Bend and charged with stealing a span of horses and a buggy which were found in his possession. The team was advertised, but the owner did not come forward, and the fellow was released by the operation of a writ of habeas corpus, and decamped, leaving the horses in the hands of his attorney. Subsequently the owner arrived, proved property and returned home with it. Learning that the thief was in Ohio, the Sheriff of South Bend set the Toledo detectives at work finding out his whereabouts, giving them his name, etc. A few days afterwards a letter was received at the Toledo Post Office, requesting that if a letter should be received for Wolver to forward it to Hudson, Mich. Officer Locke immediately started for Hudson, and on his arrival here found that the fellow had been here and had that morning, in connection with another young man, procured a horse and buggy at one of our livery stables and gone to Adrian. They not returning that evening officer Locke and Marshall Vanderpool took the night train for Adrian.—They found the fellows were in bed at the Lawrence house. Soon they came down stairs, when the Officer says the owner of the horse pointed out the thief to him, and he immediately arrested him, but it proved to be the wrong man and the thief slid. The horse owner followed far enough to get his pay for the horse hire, and then the fellow made tracks, and completely eluded the vigilance of the officers. On Saturday officer Locke returned to Toledo On Saturday evening Wolver returned here, and the same livery man took him and his baggage and carried them to Gambleville. On Monday our officers found out the fact of his return and disposition, and about five o'clock P. M Deputy Sheriff Avery and Marshal Vanderpool started in pursuit and arrested him three miles east of Gambleville. On Tuesday Marshall Vanderpool took him to Toledo and turned him over to the Toledo officers The Sheriff of South Bend was telegraphed, and Wednesday morning took charge of the prisoner and proceeded at once to South Bend.—Hudson Gazette.

From Vicksburg.

CHICKSAW BAYOU, June 25.

Port Hudson is not taken. Gen. Grant was deceived by a false report given before the boat landed. The report was brought by the Arizona, which arrived Tuesday night, having passed around Port Hudson by Atchafalaya.

The firing has been quieter to-day, in consequence of the intense heat. We have gained possession of another fort on the left.

CAIRO, June 30.—The dispatch boat Gen. Lyon, arrived from Yazoo Landing the 26th. Fighting had been going on all Thursday in the rear of the city, and at night one of the rebel boats up, causing a terrible concussion.

The steamer Lyon was fired upon at Cypres Bend, on the trip down, by a rebel battery. The fire was returned and the rebels driven off with a loss of several killed and wounded.

MEMPHIS, June 29—The steamer New Kentucky brings news from Gen. Logan's division, that he had taken an important fort from the enemy. He had, by a mine, blown up one corner on Saturday, thus producing a breach in the wall, through which he entered. The rebels fought with reckless courage, but were forced to yield. Gen. Logan had already mounted two heavy guns in the abandoned works.

Heavy firing was going on at Vicksburg at the time. Grant continues to contract his lines, and is daily making a nearer approach to the enemy's works.

☞Heaven help the ma[illegible] thinks he can dodge enemies by try[illegible] pleases everybody. If such an in[illegible] succeeded we should be glad [illegible] Not that we believe [illegible] throughout the world trying to [illegible] to knock his head against; disputing every man's opinion; fighting, elbowing or crowding all who differ from him. That again is another extreme. Other people have a right to their own opinions so have you; don't fall into the error of supposing they will respect you for turning your coat every day to match theirs. Wear your own colors, spite of wind and weather, storm and sunshine. It causes the vacillating and irresolute ten times the trouble to whine and shuffle and twist, that it does honest, manly independence to stand its ground.

ALBANY, June 30.—Gov. Seymour has ordered Inspector General Miller to go to New York immediately and organize thirty regiments in that city and Brooklyn. They will be drilled in artillery as well as infantry practice, with a view of placing them in the fortifications.

☞Gen. Santa Anna, ex-president of Mexico, still resides on the island of Cuba, a few miles from Havana. He denies in one of the papers of that city that he is about to take the field on the side of the French, and against his native country.

4th of July.

So far as we can learn there will be no celebration of the coming Fourth in this County.

Half Fare.

Half-fare tickets will be sold to those who wish to attend the Firemen's Tournament at Toledo or any other celebration on the M. S. R. R. on the 4th of July next.

Tailoring.

In another column will be found the card of DAVID JONES. He is a first rate tailor and prompt in his engagements. Shop over Curtis & McCowen's store.

The University.

The commencement of the University at Ann Arbor took place on Wednesday of last week. We notice that the degree of A. M. was conferred on Cyrus B. Thomas, Principal of the Union School in this village.

Thieves Around.

A horse belonging to Mr. Pease, of Hudson, was stolen on Thursday night. A dwelling house in the same place was entered, but the owner being awake, the burglar took nothing away with him.

Heavy Fleeces.

Forty-two fleeces of fine Merino wool were sold last week at Adrian, by G. W. Reed, which weighed 7 pounds 2 ounces per fleece. Ten two year old ewes bought in Vermont last spring by Dr. J. W. Keeney, of Franklin, for $600, have sheared 11 pounds each of the finest quality of wool.

Photographic Artist.

In our last issue we accidentally omitted to call attention to Mrs. C. M. BISSELL's card. Those wishing Photographs, Ambrotypes, Melaineotypes, &c., can get them taken in the neatest manner possible, by calling on Mrs. B, for one dollar—cheap enough, is'nt it.

That Shower.

For a few weeks this section of country has been visited by quite a severe drouth, accompanied by very warm weather, but Natures thirst was quenched on Monday last by a beautiful fall of rain from "God's floating fountains," which did an inestimable amount of good to all kinds of crops and gardens

Finger Rings.

If a gentleman wants a wife, he wears a ring on the left hand; if engaged, on the second finger; if married, on the third; and on the fourth if he never intends to get married. When a gentleman has "a lady in his eye," and yet is not engaged to her, he wears, in addition to the ring, a complete suit of Clothing from A. Changed Hands.

We understand that our friend WM. ARNEY, has purchased the old Dutch Reformed Church, of Ridgeway, and is about converting it into a Wagon Shop. "Billy," is a good workman, and he has hosts of friends who will be pleased to hear that he will soon be ready to do their work again. He will not hide his light under a bushel but will let it shine in the shape of an advertisement in the Herald. So watch for it.

Mistery.

"Mother," said a little fellow four years old, "if a man is a mister, ain't a woman a mystery?" The greatest mystery in the world to us, is that any one will buy their Dry Goods, Shoes &c., at any other store than R. C Moore's, for he will not be undersold. Call on him before purchasing elsewhere. Henry takes pleasure in showing his beautiful and cheap goods. 1w

Boat Pearl.

[illegible] to learn that those enter[illegible] men, Messrs. PATTERSON and [illegible] about [illegible]culated their little [illegible], entitled THE PEARL, and in the absence of other amusements in our village, on the coming Fourth, they will be on hand with their Little Fairy, at the Globe Mill Pond, on that day, and will do all in their power to aid those of our citizens who wish to enjoy that day apart from the busy scenes of life and the dust and heat of a crowded assembly. As this is the first steam-boat ever launched in our place, may it be liberally patronized.

Commencing.

A commencement has been made on the new Methodist Church and the foundation is laid, and they are now awaiting the brick.—It will be pushed forward to an early completion.

This will be, when completed as is designed, one of the largest and finest churches in this county, and speaks well for the enterprise and public spirit of our Methodist friends.

This is good and we are glad to see it. It shows that they are wafting along on the tide of progress, and are willing to open their purses to promote the objects which they consider beneficial to the world. They propose to show their interest by their works. Men who have no time or money to spend to promote the great interests of the world need not expect that people will have much confidence in their professions. It is active work and deeds that tell the story.

Meeting of the Alumni of the Union School.

The annual meeting of the Alumni of the Tecumseh Union School, took place last Friday afternoon, and as there were but few of our citizens present, very many missed a rich treat of a literary nature. The orator of the day—Mr. Scovel Stacy, of the Michigan University,—being presented by the President, in a pleasing manner introduced his subject, "Earnest Men," and in a pithy and earnest style, showing himself well versed in history, presented interesting sketches from the lives of the Earnest Men of all ages, and therefrom drew inferences that should govern the actions of men in the present age and under the peculiar condition of our country.

He closed his discourse by alluding to the events that had transpired since the last meeting of the Alumni, and with feeling remarks gave just eulogies to the brave departed dead. By request Mr. Stacy also recited his original humorous poem entitled "The Man in the Moon," which was appreciatingly received as containing not only much humor, but also much sound sense.

The events of the day closed with a Alumni Social in the evening at the School Hall, which was well attended, and passed off very pleasantly. The Tecumseh String Band were in attendance through the day and evening and added much to the entertainment by their enlivening music.

Yours, P. W. A.

R. C. MOORE desirous of closing out his stock of Spring and Summer Goods, is making great concessions in prices—call and examine his Stock. He is receiving, every week, something new from New York, and keeps prices down to correspond with present values of all styles of Goods in N. Y. He requests us to announce that he is surprised to learn that his neighbor, "Old Sprouts," after an experience of twenty five years in Blowing, (his whistle) has given up that important branch of his business to his Young Sprouts—Lon and George—and wonders that his Gas has entirely "gin out," as his meter seems to indicate but little waste:

To hold thy Gas too long, will not be just
To others or thyself—for thou wilt "Bust,"
And then thou'lt ruined be, and fix the care
Upon thy friends to cart the off—somewhere.

Letter Breaking.

A Post Master by the name of John Q. Reed, at La Grange, Indiana, was lately tried in Indianpolis, for breaking open letters, and fined $75 and cost of suit. Considerable money, for a year or two past, mailed at this office never reached its destination, the supposition is, that he pocketed it. An honest postmaster is a noble thing, and we take pride in recording that, W. ANDERSON, the postmaster in this village, has the entire confidence of this community, in the distribution of these little missives.

Married.

In Tecumseh, Mich. June 26th 1863 at the residence of Mrs. C. M. Bissell, by Rev. S. E. Wishard, MR. HENRY S. CHEEVER, of Ann Arbor, to MISS. LAURA E. BISSELL of the former place.

No record of the kind has afforded us greater pleasure to make, than this—none more worthy enter the holy bands. May long life, full of joy, be their happy lot. We understand the happy pair are to reside at Ann Arbor where Mr. Cheever has just graduated, with honors at our University.

Died.

In this village, of Erysipelas, Mr. JOHN SAXTON, in the 52d year of his age.

COMMERCIAL.

There had been but little wool in our market until yesterday and prices had ranged from 50 to 65 cents per lb. June 30th there was about 1,400lbs brought in and sold at about 70 cents. Ketcham and Conklin bought about 400lbs. at 70 and 71c. Tindall and Slayton bought some over 1,000lbs. at 69 and 70c. Most of the farmers are holding their wool for 75c. Time only will demonstrate whether they realize their expectations.

As is usual Tecumseh is in the front rank paying the highest price to the farmer for his produce. We will venture the assertion that no town in the State has paid more for wool this season than has been paid here. Although wool has come in so slowly, there is no lack of buyers. A. Anderson, B. J. Bidwell, Ketcham & Conklin, and Tindall & Slayton, are ready to invest and are only waiting for wool growers to moderate their notions somewhat.

In grain there is but little doing and prices are very quiet at our quotations.

Enforcement of Village Ordinance.

THE Common Council of the Village of Tecumseh, at a recent session, enjoined upon the Marshal strict enforcement of the Ordinance against fast driving in the public streets of said village, and directed the Recorder to republish in the Herald the Ordinance against such practices, which it was alledged have recently been greatly disregarded.

The portion of the Ordinance referred to, reads as follows:

"No person, or persons, shall run or race any horse, or horses, or drive any carriage or vehicle of any kind, upon the inhabited or business streets, of said village, at a faster rate than six miles an hour, under a penalty not exceeding the sum of fifty dollars and costs. Cording,

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seam, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances "to survive the wash-tub."

A patented device of great utility to learners, prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it."—Phila. Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder."—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines."—Pennsylvanian.

"This Machine, in the opinion of the committee, fills more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs', as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report.

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine."—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21, 1860.

"After much wear and many washings, the stitching is found to retain all its roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority ower all others"—PhiladelPhia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experience in our own family."—Boston Traveller.

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well-merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette

"We esteem it the best machine for family use. The stitch is unexceptionable."—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

The Peerless New York Mercury
For the New Year.

It is with no fear of War's effect upon their literary fortunes, that the publishers of "The New York Mercury" acknowledge the unwavering loyalty of their two hundred thousand subscribers, and announce to them, and to all, that "The New York Mercury" for this year (1863) will be richer in every luxury of Pelite Literature than ever before. It is no upstart speculation, no temporary "sensation" but a first class literary weekly, which has been familiar to the United States for a quarter of a century; and while the wishy-washy mushroom prints of yesterday or cutting down their talent even while they raise their subscription price, "The New York Mercury maintains all its great staff of Romances, Poets, Humorists, Essayists, Story-Tellers, and Editors, and promises to make it still more greater for 1863.

It is the one paper for every home. Its forty columns of reading matter per week constitute an unparalleled

DETROIT ADVERTISER & TRIBUNE,
PUBLISHED
DAILY, TRI-WEEKLY AND WEEKLY.

The oldest newspaper in Detroit, now in its 34th year—the Advertiser having been established in 1820.

In July last, by the consolidation of the Daily Advertiser and Daily Tribune, a circulation larger than that ever enjoyed by any paper in Michigan was attained. Since then a corps of editors has been secured second to none engaged on any western paper. Some have been employed for years on leading Eastern papers, and bring a rich fund of experience to the columns of the Advertiser & Tribune.

Our expenses for telegraphic dispatches are larger than those of any other in Detroit, and more than seven times the amount paid by any one paper a year ago. In fact we now publish simultaneously with them, besides the regular Associated Press dispatches, all the most valuable of the special dispatches that are sent to the Philadelphia Inquirer Pittsburg Gazette, Cincinnati Gazette, St. Louis Democrat, and Chicago Tribune—the five leading papers in the cities in which they are published, and for enterprise not a whit behind the New York journals. Almost daily it occurs that we obtain news by special dispatches, twelve hours in advance of the Associated Press, of the correctness of which statement we refer to the numerous readers of our Daily. In this city, where both the daily papers are habitually read by all parties, it is generally conceded that the dispatches of the Advertiser & Tribune are the most reliable and satisfactory of any published in Detroit.

We are now sparing no expense and intend to spare none to place the Advertiser & Tribune in the first rank as a newspaper. Particular attention is given to State news, and to intelligence from our soldiers in the army, a correspondent being maintained in every Michigan Regiment.

Politically the Advertiser & Tribune looks to the salvation of the country by the energetic prosecution of the war now waged against the accursed rebellion of the South. On humanitarian grounds, as a war measure, and as a safeguard for the future peace of the nation, it upholds the Presidents Emancipation Proclamation, and all other war measures of the Government; and while it admits the propriety of friendly criticisms, it holds that no direct and active opposition to the Government is consistent with loyalty, or should be tolerated in the North any more than in the States engaged in the rebellion.

As a commercial paper, we aim to make the Advertiser and Tribune the best paper in the State and have employed to conduct this department a man of large experience and reputation. This will make the paper particularly acceptable to farmers, as well as merchants and millers.

Our facilities for printing a large edition have lately been greatly increased by the erection of the fastest press in use in this city, and our circulation is keeping pace with our capacity to print.

TERMS.

DETROIT DAILY ADVERTISER AND TRIBUNE.
To Mail Subscribers $2 00 per Quarter.

Contains twenty-two columns of reading matter including local news, telegraph reports, State and miscellaneous items, army correspondence, copious details of war and foreign news, editorial articles, personal and political items, commercial and marine intelligence, etc. etc.

Detroit Tri-Weekly Advertiser & Tribune
To Mail Subscribers $1 00 per quarter; 10 copies to one address $8 75 per Quarter.
Published every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday

Contains about thirty columns of news, comprising all the most important matter of the daily issue. This edition is well suited to farmers, merchants, and others living at a distance from a post office or who are reached only by tri-weekly mails. It is becoming very popular throughout the State—so much so that it has increased in circulation about one thousand copies within eleven months.

Detroit Weekly Advertiser and Tribune.
$1 50 per year within the State. 20 copies to one address $25 00. Papers sent to soldiers in the army for $1 00 per year.

The Weekly is printed in quarto form, and is as large as any of the New York weeklies. An Old Song.

The following seductive song may amuse some of our readers; but it will be powerless in such prosperous times as the present.—We copy it from the Detroit Courier, which paper gets it from the New England Farmer of December 14th, 1861.

The Michigan Emigrant's Song.

Tune—Joe Anderson my Jo John.

Come all ye Yankee Farmers
Who'd like to change your lot,
Who're spunk enough to travel
Beyond your native spot,
And leave behind the village
Where Pa' and Ma' do stay,
Come follow me and settle
In Michigania.

I've heard of your Penobscot,
Way down in parts of Maine,
Where timber grows in plenty,
But darn the bit of grain,
And I have heard of Quoddy
And your Piscataqua,
But these can't hold a candle
To Michigania.

And you that talk of Varmount,
Why what a place is that?
Be sure the gals are pritty,
And cattle very fat;
But who among her mountains
'Mid clouds and snow would stay,
When he could buy a Prairie
In Michigania.

And there's your Massachusetts,
Once good enough, be sure;
But now she's always laying on Taxation or manure
She costs you pecks of trouble,
But de'll a peck can pay;
While all is scripture measure
In Michigania.

Then there's your land o' Blue Laws,
Where deacons cut the hair,
For fear your looks and tenets
Should not exactly square
Where beer that works of Sunday
A penalty must pay,
While all is free and easy
In Michigania.

What country ever growed up
So great in little time,
Just popping from the nurs'ry
Right into like its prime;
When Uncle Sam did wean her,
'Twas but the other day,
And now she's quite a Lady,
This Michigania.

Upon the rixer Clin on.
Just thro' the country back,
You'll find in shire of Oakland,
The town of Potiac—
Which springing up o' sudden,
Scar'd wolves and bears away,
That used to rove about there,
In Michigania.

And if you follow downwards,
Why Rawchister is there;
And further still Mount Clemens
Looks out upon St Clair;
Besides some other places
Within Macombia,
That promise population
To Michigania.

Or if you'd rather go to A place called Washtenaw
You'll find upon the Huron
Sich lands you never saw
Where ships come to Ann-Harbor
Right through La Plaisance bay,
And touch at Ypsilanty
In Michigania

Or if you keep a going
A great deal farther on,
I guess you'll reach St. Josey's
Where everybody's gone;
Where everything like Jack's bean,
Grows monstrous fast they say,
And beats the rest all hollow
Of Michigania.

Then come, ye Yankee farmers,
Who've mettle hearts like me,
And elbow-grease in plenty,
To bow the forest tree;
Come take a 'Quarter-Section,'
And I'll be bound you'll say,
This country takes the rag off—
This Michigania

A New Method of Divorce.

In Berne, Switzerland, they have a novel method of dealing with matrimonial disputants. Divorces were freely granted, but first the applicant must go through the following test. A small room was prepared in which husband and wife were put—the door being then closed, to remain so for six weeks, except it should be set in motion at the urgent and united request of the wedded pair. The were in the room one stool, one plate, one spoon, a unity of all the requisites, and the solitary bed was of such dimensions that, if they choose to use it together, they must needs lie very close to each other. Of one thing and one only, there was a duplicate, and that was a little treatise on the duties of husbands and wives towards each other. No visitor was permitted to go near them; and they only had a glimpse at intervals of the grim face of the janitor, as he pushed their food through the hole in the door. The bishop states that the test was attended with the most wholesome results. In most cases, the parties were excellent friends in a few days, and a very few could stand out for more than a fortnight. Another very gratifying circumstance was that they had scarcely on record a case in which a second application was made by persons who had already gone through the ordeal.—Bishop Burnett

There is no sterner moralist than pleasure.

Chances for a Laugh.

A very scarce flower—The pink of politeness.

A man should always remember that stealing makes a thief of him.

The man whose word can always be depended upon, is sure to be always honored.

The boy who lost his ballance on the roof found it on the ground shortly afterwards.

A man's enemies are those he should endeavor first to make his friends.

The girls say that the times are so hard that the young men cannot pay their addresses.

Eating one's meat with a silver fork while the butcher's bill has not been paid is called genteel.

If a petticoat government is not more oppressive now than formerly, it is certainly double in extent.

Some people's hearts are shrunk within them like dried nuts; you can hear 'em rattle as they walk.

Why is a woman deformed when she is mending stockings? Because her hands are where her feet ought to be.

When a young lady offers to hem a cambric handkerchief for a rich bachelor, she means to sow in order that she may reap.

A late philosopher says that if anything will make a woman swear, it is looking for her night cap when the light is blown out.

That is what is called a fellow feeling for a man, said a loafer, as a watchman was groping for him in the dark.

"Mr. Jones have you got a match?"—"Yes, sir, a match for the old boy. There she is mixing dough." Jones pointed to his wife and then slid from the front door. The last we saw of Jones he was 'kiting' it down the road, hotly pursued by a red headed lady with a cistern pole. Poor Jones.

An Irishman traveling in a street that was paved, was accosted by a dog with a threatening growl. The traveler attempted to pull up one of the paving stones to throw at him, but it was fast.—'Arrah," said Paddy, what a country is this, where stones are tied and dogs let loose."

"How old did you say your sister was?"
"Twenty-five."
"You must be mistaken, I was under the impression she was only twenty."
'She wears hoop skirts doesn't she?"
"From appearances I should say she did."
"Well, then, twenty-five springs at least have passed over her head."

"What under the sun can be the cause of that bell ringing to-day?" said young Sam to his friend, as they approached a country village.
"If I was to express an opinion on the subject," returned Isaac solemnly, "I should say it is my deliberate conviction that somebody is pulling the rope."

One of our Massachusetts exchanges tells a good story of a jolly fellow who, on the "Glorious Fourth," passing along the streets of Springfield, in that State, saw the inscription, "B. K. Bliss, Apothecary," neatly chiseled on a marble slab in the centre of the sidewalk. Stepping reverently over the stone, he turned round, and reading slowly,—
"B. K. Bliss, apoplexy," he exclaimed, "apoplexy—yes—well—but what in —— did they bury him under the sidewalk for?"

To him that goes to law nine things are requisite:
1. A good deal of money.
2. A good deal of patience.
3. A good cause.
4. A good attorney.
5. A good counsel.
6. A good evidence.
7. A good jury.
8. A good judge.
9. A good luck.
Even with all these a wise man will hesitate before he goes to law.

An Irishman at South Deerfield being on his death-bed, as was supposed, on being informed by his physician that he would probably not recover, exclaimed An' sure, I'd rather give five dollar than die now

A country editor received a remittance, with a request to "send the paper as long as the money lasted." He indulged in a bit of a "spree" the next week, got broke and respectfully announced to his subscriber that according to his own terms his subscription was out

"I'll bet a sheep "said old Meredith to his other half, "that our boy Otho is going crazy—for he is grinning at the plough, and he is grinning at the barn, and he is grinning at the table, and he is grinning to himself wherever he goes." "Poh!" replied the old woman, "don't you know he got a love letter this morning?"

A gay fellow who had taken lodgings at a public house, and got considerably in debt, absented himself, and took new quarters. This so enraged the landlord that he comissioned his wife to go and dun him, when the debtor declared publicly that if she came he would kiss her. "Will he?" said the lady; "will ho? give me my bonnet, Molly; I will see whether any fellow has such impudence!" "My dear, said the cooling husband, pray do not be too rash; you do not know what a man may do when he is in a passion!"

Steve Wilson was the most self-important young man in my neighborhood.—Though recommending others to volunteer, he could not be prevailed upon to enlist until fear of the draft drove him to it. It runs in the Wilson family to be dark skinned, and Steve is decidedly the nearest black of all. I received a letter from a little girl of fourteen which thus mentions Steve:—

"Steve Wilson wrote home that he was not going to fight by the side of a niggar. I don't know why it is unless he is afraid if he gets mixed up "he won't be known."

GREAT REDUCTION!!

IN THE PRICES OF

SINGER & Co's

STANDARD MACHINES

IS WELL KNOWN TO BE THE BEST FOR MANUFACTURING PURPOSS.

No. 1, STANDARD SHUTTLE MACHINE,
(Formerly sold for $00—reduced to $70.)

No. 2, STANDARD SHUTTLE MACHINE
[Formerly sold for $100—reduced to $75.]

SINGER'S LETTER A MACHINE

is the Best Machine in the World For Family Sewing and Light Manufacturing Purposes. Price, with Hemmer, and beautifully ornamented, $50.

We would ask for our LETTER A. MACHINES the special attention of Vest Makers and Dress Makers, and all those who want Machines for light manufacturing purposes. They embody the principles of the Manufacturing Machines, making like them the interlocked stitch and are destined to be as celebrated for Family Sewing and light manufacturing purposes as our manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes in general.

Family Sewing Machines are valuable in proportion to the number of things they can do well. See what ours can do before making a purchase.

There is no doubt as to the value of our machines for manufacturing purposes, but it is only of late that the public began to learn that the essential elements of a machine best adapted to the heaviest work, would also be the elements to be embodied in a Family Machine. It is now well understood that our Letter A Machine is the only Family Machine yet offered to the public which has simplicity, rapidity, durability, and certainty of correct action. While as a general thing the sewing machine people are candid enough to acknowledge that our machines are unequaled for munufacturing purposes, they are almost sure to assert, in the same breath, that Singer's letter A, or family Machines, are not as good as theirs!—This is a mere trick of the trade, and we confidently invite those interested in the subject to examine for themselves, and see what our Letter A Family Machines, with all the recent improvements, are capable of doing. While they will sew the most delicate material to perfection, as already stated, they are also adapted to light manufacturing purposes, and this, be it remembered, can not be said of any of the other family machines yet offered to the public.

The No. 1 and 2 Machines are of great capacity and application for manufacturing purposes.

Our No. 3 Machines are especially adapted to all kinds of light and heavy leather work in carriage trimming, boot and shoe making harness making, etc. They are of extra size with an arm long enough to take under it and stitch the largest sized dashes. There is scarcely any part of a trimmers stitching that cannot be better done with them than by hand. so, too, the saving of time and labor is very great. The table of these machines is twenty-four inches long, and the shuttle will hold six times as much thread as the shuttle of those used for tailoring purposes. The large machines work as fast as the small ones.

We have always on hand Hemming Guages, Silk Twist, Linen and Cotton Thread on Spools, best Machine Oil in bottles, &c.

We manufacture our own Needles, and would warn all persons using our machine not to buy any others We know that there are needles sold of the most inferior quality at higher prices than we charge for the best. The needles sold by us are manufactured especially for our machines. A bad needle may render the working of the best machine almost useless.

Our customers may rest assured that all our Branch Offices are furnished with the "genuine article."

In case of small purchases the money may be sent in postage stamps or bank notes.

Correspondents will please write their names distinctly; It is all-important that we should, in each case, know the Post Office County, and State.

All persons requiring information about Sewing Machines, their sizes, prices, working capacities, and the best methods of purchasing, can obtain it by sending to us, or any of our Branch Offices for a copy of "I. M. SINGER & Co's Gazette," which is a beautiful Pictorial Paper, entirely devoted to the subject, It will be sent gratis.

We have made the above REDUCTION IN PRICES with a two-fold view of benefiting the public and ourselves. The public have been swindled by spurious machines made in imitation of ours. The metal in them, from the iron castings to the smallest piece, is of a poor quality. Their makers have not the means to do their work well. They are hid away in secret places, where it would be impossible to have at their command the proper appliances. It is only by doing a great business and having extensive manufacturing establishments, that good machines can be made at moderate prices. The best designed machines, badly made, are always liable to get out of order, and are sure to cost considerable trouble and money to keep them in repair.

The qualities to be looked for in a machine are—

Certainty of correct action at all rates of speed, simplicity of construction, great durability and rapidity of operation, with the least labor.

Machines, to combine these essential qualities, must be made of the best metal, and finished to perfection. We have the ways and means on a grand scale to do this.

The purchasers of machines, whose daily bread it may concern, will find that those having the above qualities not only work at rapid as well as slow rates of speed, but last long in the finest possible working order.—Our machines, as made by us, will earn more money with less labor than any others, whether in imitation of ours or not, in fact they are cheaper than any other machines a gift.

The Resurrection.

MRS. SARAH H. BRADFORD.

"A seed formed in the hand of a mummy two thousand years old, when planted, bloomed into a beautiful flower."

Two thousand years ago, a flower
Bloomed brightly in far-off land;
Two thousand years ago, its seed
Was planned within a dead man's hand.

Before the Saviour came to earth,
That man had lived and loved and died;
And even in that far-off time
The flower had spread its perfume wide.

Suns rose and set, years came and went,
The dead hand keps its treasure well;
Nations were turned to dust,
While life was hidden in that shell.

The shrivelled hand is robbed at last,
The seed is buried in the earth;
When lo, the life long hidden there
Into a glorious flower bursts forth,

Just such a plant as that which grew
From such a seed when buried low,
Just such a flower in Egypt bloomed
And died TWO THOUSAND YEARS AGO.

And will not He who watched the seed
And kept the life within the shell,
When those he loves are laid to rest,
Watch o'er their buried dust as well?

And will he not from neath the sod
Cause something glorious to arise?
Aye, though it sleep two thousand years;
Yet all that buried dust shall rise.

Just such a face as greets you now,
Just such a form as here we wear,
Only more glorious far, will rise
To meet the Saviour in the air.

Then will I lay me down in peace,
When called to leave this vale of tears,
For "IN MY FLESH SHALL I SEE GOD," E'en though I sleep TWO THOUSAD YEARS.

The Miser's Gold.

BY MAURICE SLINGSBY.

Oral tradition is very common in England. Perhaps, with the exceptions of Germany, there is no other country on the globe that can compete with her in this particular Every church has its legend, every inn its tradition, and every parish workhouse can furnish you with the ground work for a score of novels as vital and as full of human interest, as the story of Oliver Twist or any other. The one I am about to relate comes under the head of orol traditions.

Mathew Osmond was a hardy soldier of thirty, at the date of this story, and one who had seen much active service.—He was quartered with his regiment in the little parish of Stately Bride,—which to cotton—has since grown into an important manufacturing town, when he was unexpectedly informed through the medium of a letter from the honest curate of the parish in which he was born, that his mother, who had been some time dangerously ill and was lying at the point of death desired to see him once more before she died. His poor old mother! He had sadly neglected her of late, and it was with tears in his eyes that he asked leave of absence to visit her and receive her parting blessing. The distance was many leagues, fell and moor, and almost the entire journey was made on foot, as there was no conveyance after the first twelve miles from the barracks. It was just in the beginning of winter, though no snow had yet fallen to render more difficult the sorrowful undertaking which the most solemn of duties required him to perform; and without loss of time (for he could not bear the thought of having a strangers hands close the dear old eyes that gazed on him so fondly both in fancy and manhood,) he started resolutely forth, determined to reach his native village before he slept. It was in the middle of the forenoon when he started and he calculated by walking a league an hour, he should reach home a little before midnight. But it was one in the morning before he came in sight of the village. On reaching the house, he was informed that his mother was still alive, but probably could not survive many hours. His arrival seemed to revive her sinking powers. And the last spark of light and life did not go out till the second day following. He had obtained leave of absence for a week and the funeral occurring three days later, it left him but one day and night to return to his regiment.

Bright and early on the morning of the sixth day, he started forth on his return. The clouds were heavily freighted with snow, and now and then a fierce gust of wind, a harbinger of the coming storm would throw a quantity of minute flakes into his face and eyes, and then go on with a dismal shriek, across the barren heath, leaving the sturdy Osmond far behind, picking his way over the frozen ground, and wishing himself safely back at the barracks. Gradually the flakes increased in size, and the unruly wink pelted them into his face, till he was half blinded with their violence. Still on he trudged hour after hour, in spite of the fiercely accumulating storm. Swiftly it increased in depth, from an inch to half a foot, and all the while the white obscurity around him was as impenetrable as darkness itself. The going was becoming every moment more difficult, the wind blew rudely into his face, and drifted the snow until it was two feet deep in places. He was hungry tired and bewildered.—He had evidently wandered out of his proper course, and after traveling for near three hours without discovering a human habitation, he made up his mind that he was lost in one of those extensive moors so common in the north of England.—Overcome by this conviction, and losing all courage to proceed further on uncertainties, in the midst of his bewilderment he flung himself down to rest, and strove to arrive at some definite conclusion as to where he at present was, and how far out of his proper course. While lying thus sleep gradually stole over him, and he became happily unconscious of present troubles. When he awoke it was nearly dark, but the storm had blown over, and as he crept forth from his comfortable bed of snow—for he found himself buried a foot deep, at least on awaking—he was conscious of a keen, cutting night-wind in place of the pelting storm. But how he should shape his future course was a subject of no little perplexity, and would have been to the most experienced countryman in a similar situation. He at last adopted one of the superstitions of the times, in hopes of extricating himself from his present difficulty. He held his staff as nearly perpendicular as he could, and allowing it to drop which ever way it might, determined to pursue his journey in whatever direction it should point in falling. It fell a little to the south east, and with full confidence in the sign, he took up his line of march in that direction.

After floundering a couple of hours through the heavy drifts that obstructed his course, he became sensible from the appearance of surrounding objects that he had left the confines of the moor, and was now in open country. It was eight o'clock, as near as he could recollect. He walked on for some ten minutes longer, when suddenly his eye was attracted by the glimmer of a distant light. The discovery gave him renewed strength.—One moment a gentle swell would obscure it from his vision, and the next it would appear again, stronger and more brilliant than before. At length, the dark outlines of a house became visible, and in a few minutes after he picked his way through a wicket gate in front. Other lights were now becoming visible, in the distance, which satisfied him that he was approaching the outskirts of a small village. The house before him was that of a ceorle, or small farmer, and he was determined to stop and warm him at least and inquire the distance to the nearest inn.

His summons was responded to by a flaxen headed lad of eight or ten years who conducted Osmond into the presence of his mother, a handsome robust women of thirty, who received him with the utmost kindness, and prepared him a good warm supper. He recounted his adventure on the moor, and inquired the distance to the nearest inn. But the comely matron after listening to his story, would not hear of his journeying a league further for the want of a bed nearer, so she insisted on his remaining at the farm house over night. In the course of their conversation he learned that she was a widow with an only son, and at the age of twenty, to save her father from imprisonment for a paltry debt of twenty pounds, ten shillings, she had been forced to marry Luke Middleton, a miserly old man of sixty, who happened to be her father's creditor. He lived about seven years after this occurrence a miserable penorious old wretch, snarling over the meagre family expenses he was compelled to meet, and growling if his young wife repudiated potatoes and salt as a common diet. He always plead poverty, but his neighbors nevertheless considered him rich. Although he came into possession of his lands by inheritance, he never half cultivated them, because he was to stingy to part with his gold even to pay the price of labor, though he should ultimately reap it back four-fold. He cultivated a small patch of ground with his own hands, and turned the bulk of his farm into grazing lands, which were rented year after year for that purpose, till they were finally overrun with bushes, which in the course of nature might subsequently become valuable for wood, though probably Luke Middleton the miser never thought of it when he was suffering his valuable lands to run to waste for want of suitable cultivation.

But if Luke Middleton's stinginess prevented him from realizing the ideal of a farmer, it did not hinder him from hoarding every farthing that fell into his avaricious hands. He went off at last in a fit, and his son and widow came in for his property; though contrary to her expectations and every one else, but very little money was discovered, and that was found in a stocking which his prudent hand had consigned to a private dove hole in the chimney. After the death of the miser, Mrs. Middleton hired a farm servant, named Mark Severn, who had gone on this particular day on a visit to a sister, in the neighboring village, and would not return till next noon, so that the arrival of the soldier was regarded by the widow, in consequence of certain private reasons, which she did not think proper to impart, with unbounded joy and satisfaction. In the course of the evening, Osmond imparted a history of his own adventures, which gave his hostess great satisfaction, and the buxom widow and the hardy soldier of fortune parted for the night with mutual feelings of friendly esteem and confidence. The fatigues of the day had rendered Osmond exceedingly tired, so that when he struck the bed he was very speedily launched into oblivion. How long he slept he had no means of knowing, but he was aroused some time in the night by a loud thumping on the outside, and some one calling for admittance. For one instant he held his breath and listened. There was a rustling sound at his bed room door, and the next moment he heard the voice of his hostess begging him to arise. He sprang out of bed and slipping on some portion of his attire, quickly opened the door, where he found the frightened lady wringing her hands, in the greatest alarm. The thumping outside was growing louder and more impatient each moment, and some muttered curses at her tardiness were plainly audible.

"Beat down the door!" cried one of the ruffians. "Its plain enough that she don't mean to open it, an' wherefore d'ye stan' wi' yer parley?"

"O dear!" cried Mrs. Middleton, catching Osmond by the hand, "It is known that I have a large sum of money in the house, and I am afraid that these people have come to rob and murder me!"

"Have you got arms in the house?" demanded the soldier.

"Nothing but an old holster pistol, and the flint is gone to that?" replied the widow, trembling.

"Never mind them," cried Osmond firmly, "let them break the door if they will. I have a stout staff here, which will do good service yet.

Let them come on, widow, I will defend you with my life. Keep silent, say not a word, and I will be ready at the door to receive them, if they dare force an entrance."

Scarcely had these words escaped him, when some heavy blows were dealt upon the door in earnest of their intention, and our brave soldier, after re assuring Mrs. Middleton that she was safe so long as he had life to defend her, took up his position where he could command the entrance He was none too soon, however for the door being old and somewhat decayed, soon gave way beneath the lusty blows of the besiegers. The next moment there was a rush into the entry, and the voice of Osmond shouting.

"Take that ye devils! and that! that! THAT!" And then followed some curses and groans, and the sound of one of the party running away.

"Light a candle, widow, and let's see who we have here!" cried the soldier with an air of triumph.

She obeyed. But what was her astonishment on beholding in one of the prostrate men her own servant, Mark Serven! They were both subsequently transported. Mrs. Middleton then informed her deliverer that her little boy in playing about the stable floor some days previously dislodged a plank, and underneath it they had found a small keg of gold and silver coin; and this was the temptation which had induced her own servant to undertake with his two accomplices to rob and murder her.

Tradition rarely leaves a story incomplete, and in this particular instance, it affirms that Mrs. Middleton was so grateful to the gallant Osmond, that she paid twenty guineas to procure his discharge from the army, and afterwards married him out of pure love and admiration.

He Died Poor.

'It was a sad funeral for me,' said the speaker; 'the saddest one I have attended for a year.'

'That of Edmund?'

'Yes.'

'How did he die?'

'Poor, poor as poverty, his life was one long struggle with the world, and at a disadvantage. Fortune mocked him all the while with golden promise, none of which were realized.

'Yet he was very patient and enduring,' remarked some one of the company.

'Patient as a lamb, and enduring as a martyr,' was the reply. 'Poor man! he was worthy a better fate. He ought to have succeeded, for he deserved success.'

'He did not succeed?' questioned the one who had spoked of his perseverance and endurance.

'No sir; he died poor, as I have just said. Nothing that he ever put his hands to succeeded. A very strange fatality seemed to attend every enterprise.'

'I was with him in his last moments,' said the other, 'and I tho't he was rich.'

'No, he left nothing behind, was the reply. 'The heirs will have no concern as to the administration of his estate.'

'He left a good name, and that is something,' said one.

'And a legacy of noble deeds, done in the name of suffering humanity,' said another.

'And precious examples,' said a third.

'Lessons of patience in suffering, of hope in adversity, of Heavenly confidence when no sunbeams fell upon his bewildered path,' was the testimony of another.

'High truths, manly courage, and heroic fortitude.'

'Then he died rich,' was the emphatic declaration. 'Richer than the millionarie who went to his long home the same day, a miserable pauper in all but gold.

'A sad funeral did you say? No, my friends, it was rather a triumphal procession. Not the burial of a human clod, but the ceremonial attendance on the translation of an angel. Did he not succeed? Why his whole life was a series of successes. In every conflict that he had, he came off the victor, and now the victor's crown is upon his brow.

Any grasping, good-for-nothing, soulless man, with a decent share of brains, may gather money, and learn the art of keeping it. But not one in a hundred can bravely conquer in the battle of life as Edmund has done, and step out from the ranks of men a moral hero.

Impudent Questions.

To ask an unmarried lady how old she is.

To ask a layer if he ever told a lie.

To ask a doctor how many persons he has killed.

To ask a merchant whether he ever cheated a customer.

To ask a young lady whether she would like a beau.

To ask an editor the name of his correspondents.

To ask a subscriber if he has paid the printer.

To ask one of our modern ministers if he is acquainted with Christ and his teachings.

"There Shall be no Pain There."

This promise is one of the golden clusters that grow on that vine planted for the healing of the nations, the Bible!—How blessed a promise of the life that is to come is this one, those only can know who have walked long and frequently under the shadow of weariness and suffering.

"No pain there," to struggle with and endure; no burdens laid upon the eager spirit, which the weak frame can not sustain; no work, under which heart and strength fail, and which is at last laid mournfully aside; no long hours of fever and restlessness no overtasked brain and nerves in the homestead of those whom God shall number as his jewels!

So, be comforted ye that mourn!—Green and shining rise the banks beyond the dark valley, and sweet healing is in the winds that wander off from the meadows, freighted with blossoms fairer than the roses and lilies of earth!

Take through your pilgrimage this promise—let it be a new incentive, and comfort to you. There shall be no pain there."

The Richmond Enquirer prophesied that the last two weeks in June were to be the most momentuous of the war. It was a little ahead of the time.

Rough Begining of the Honey-Moon.

On last Friday morning an athletic young farmer, in the town of Weyosburg, took a fair girl, "all bathed in blushes," from her parents, and started for the first town across the Pensylvania line to be married, where the ceremony could be performed without a license. The happy pair were accompanied by a sister of the girl—a tall, gaunt and sharp female of some thirty-seven summers. The pair crossed the line, were married, and returned to Wellsville to pass the night. People at the hotel where the wedding party stopped observed that they conducted themselves in a rather singular manner. The husband would take his sister-in-law, the tall, female aforesaid, into one corner of the parlor, and talk earnestly to her, gesticulating widely the while. Then the tall female would "put her foot down" and talk to him in an angry and excited manner. Then the husband would take his fair young bride into a corner, but he could no sooner commence talking than the gaunt sister would rush in between them and angrily join in the conversation. The people at the hotel ascertained what all this meant about nine o'clock that evening. There was an uproar in the room which had been assigned to the newly married couple. Female shrieks and masculine "swears" startled the people at the hotel, and they rushed to the spot. The gaunt female was pressing and kicking the door of the room and the newly married man, mostly undressed, was barring her out with all his might. Occasionally she would kick the door of the room far enough open to disclose the stalwart husband, in his gentleman Greek Slave apparel. It appeared that the tall female insisted upon occupying the same room with the newly wedded pair; that her sister was favorably disposed to the arrangement, and that the husband had agreed to it before the wedding took place, and was now indignantly repudiating the contract. "Won't you go away, now, Susan, peacefully?" said the newly married man, softening his voice.

"No," said she, "I won't—so there!"

"Don't you budge an inch!" cried the married sister within the room.

"Now—now, Maria," said the young man to his wife, in a piteous tone, "don't go for to cuttin up in this way; now don't?"

"I'll cut up's much as I wanter!" she sharply replied.

"Well," roared the desperate man throwing the door wide open and stalking out among the crowd, "well, jest you two wimmin put on your duds and go right straight home and bring back the old man and woman, and your grandfather, who is nigh on to a hundred; bring 'em all here and I'll marry the whole'd—d caboodle of 'm and we'll all sleep together!"

The difficulty was finally adjusted by the tall female taking a room alone—Wellsville is enjoying itself over the sensation."

The Okolrona (Miss,) News tells the following story:

Old P. is well known in some parts as one who never pays a debt if it can be avoided. He has plenty of money, however, and is a jolly, frollicking old chap, gets drunk occasionally, when of course some friends take care of him. A few days since he fell into the hands of a friend who held a note against him for a small sum, and, as it was the last chance, the friend dived into old P's wallet, took out the amount of the note, and put the note where the money had been. When he awoke to conciousness, he took out his wallet to count how much money he was out, as was his custom, and finding his purse almost depleted, he thundered out;

'How in thunder did I spend so much money?'

'You paid off that note I held,' replied his friend.

'Well,' muttered old P., 'I must have been very drunk."

DREAD OF BEING A GAL.—I was talking with my Sunday school class on the necessity of getting a new heart, and being born again, when I observed a little rosy fellow about five years old, who had been one of my most attentive scholars, with his hands to his eyes, and crying bitterly. I asked him what was the matter, but for some time his sobs would not let him talk audibly. At length he said, conclusively: 'I dont want to be born again, for fear next time I might be a gal'

Constitution of the U. States.

ARTICLE II.

SEC. 1. The executive power shall be vested in the President of the United States of America. He shall hold his office during the term of four years, and, together with the Vice President, chosen for the same term, be elected as follows:

Each State shall appoint, in such a manner as the legislature thereof may direct, a number of electors, equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the State may be entitled in the Congress: but no Senator or Representative, or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States, shall be appointed an elector.

The electors shall meet in their respective States, and vote by ballot for two persons, of whom one at least shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with themselves. And they shall make a list of all the persons voted for, and of the number of votes for each; which list they shall sign and certify, and transmit sealed to the seat of the Government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate. The President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted. The person having the greatest number of votes shall be the President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of electors appointed; and if there be more than one who have such majority, and have an equal number of votes, then the House of Representatives shall immediately choose by ballot one of them for President; and if no person have a majority, then from the five highest on the list the said house shall in like manner choose the President.—But in choosing the President, the votes shall be taken by States, the representation from each State having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shall consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the States, and a majority of all the States shall be necessary to a choice. In every case, after the choice of the President, the person having the greatest number of votes of the electors shall be the Vice President. But if there should remain two or more who have equal votes, the Senate shall choose from them by ballot the Vice President.

The Congress may determine the time of choosing the electors, and the day on which they shall give their votes; which day shall be the same throughout the United States.

No person except a natural born citizen, or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President; neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained to the age of thirty-five years, and been fourteen years a resident within the United States.

In case of the removal of the President from office, or his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of said office, the same shall devolve on the Vice President, and the Congress may by law provide for the case of removal, death, resignation, or inability, both of the President and Vice President, declaring what officer shall then act as President, and such officer shall act accordingly, until the disability be removed, or a President shall be elected.

The President shall, at stated times, receive for his services, a compensation, which shall neither be increased nor diminished during the period for which he shall have been elected, and he shall not receive within that period any other emolument from the United States or any of them.

Before he enter on the execution of his office, he shall take the following oath or affirmation:—

"I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States."

SEC. 2. The President shall be Commander in Chief of the army and navy of the United States and of the militia of the several States, when called into the actual service of the United States; he may require the opinion in writing, of the principal officer in each of the executive departments, upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices; and he shall have power to grant reprieves and pardons for offences against the United States, except in cases of impeachment.

He shall have power, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, to make treaties, provided two thirds of the Senators present concur; and he shall nominate, and by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, shall appoint Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls, Judges of the Supreme Court, and all other officers of the United States, whose appointments are not herein otherwise provided for, and which shall be established by law. But the Congress may by law vest the appointment of such inferior officers, as they think proper, in the President alone, in the courts of law, or in the heads of departments.

The President shall have power to fill up all vacancies that may happen during the recess of the Senate, by granting commissions which shall expire at the end of their next Session.

SEC. 3. He shall, from time to time, give to the Congress information of the state of the Union, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall judge necessary and expedient; he may, on extraordinary occasions, convene both houses, or either of them, and in case he may adjourn them to such time as he shall think proper; he shall receive Ambassadors and other public Ministers; he shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed, and shall commission all the officers of the United States.

SEC. 4. The President, Vice President, and all civil officers of the United States, shall be removed from office on impeachment for, and conviction of treason, bribery or other high crimes and misdemeanors.

The Tecumseh Herald,

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 9, 1863.

The Polish Question.

Busily engaged with our affairs at home and assuredly they have been of sufficient importance to occupy our whole attention, we have scarcely given a thought to what is transpiring across the great waters, among a people whose restless ambition to meddle with the affairs of their neighbors is breeding a political tempest that threatens to involve Great Britain and the continent of Europe in deadly strife.

At this moment we breathe more freely than during many previous days, and while the almost unknown General Meade and his gallant comrades are driving the well known General Lee and his myrmidons back to rebeldom, let us direct our attention, briefly, to men and things in Europe. The following details from the latest English papers present a brief view of the troubles and anxieties which are brooding over Europe at this time:

"The Polish question is unchanged.—Palmerston explains the substance of the proposition of England, France and Austria. They include general and complete amnesty, and national representation for Poland—the Poles alone to fill the official positions from Poland; that perfect liberty of conscience be granted; that the Polish language be used in all public transactions, and that a regular system of recruiting be established. The reply of Russia is anxiously awaited. Very warlike rumors had prevailed in Paris about Poland.

The Times looks on the present position of England in Europe with uneasiness. It says we confess to some of the uneasy and unsettled feelings which took possession of the minds of all reflecting men during the lowering and unsettled year which preceded the Crimean war.—Our anchor is lifted and we are drifting in a current which seems leading to one of two disagreeable alternatives—war if we advance, loss of character if we retreat.—The Times also says the Russians in Par is seem persuaded that war is all but certain."

When Poland was blotted out from the map of Europe, the successive partitions of that devoted kingdom had given Austria 45,000 square miles with 5,000,000 inhabitants; Prussia 57,000 square miles with 2,550,000 inhabitants; and Russia 180,000 square miles, with 4,000,000 inhabitants. About two-thirds of the Russian share of Polish territory was incorporated with the general government, but the remainder known as the Kingdom of Poland, containing about 49,000 square miles, of which Warsaw is the capital, by treaty stipulations received a somewhat liberal constitution from the Emperor Alexander. During the French Revolution of 1830 the Poles attempted by revolution or insurrection to regain their independence, and since that period Russia has disregarded the "treaty stipulations" and the "Kingdom of Poland" is treated as an integral portions of the Russian Empire. Russia insists, if her Polish subjects are to be governed at all, they can only be governed as are the other subjects of her dominions. The other Great Powers of Europe demand the fulfillment of the original treaty stipulations in regard to the so-called "Kingdom of Poland."

The Poles have always been a turbulent people, restless of restraint and difficult to govern even when an independent nation. Whether Russia can safely accede to the demand of England, France and Austria and grant special privileges to one section of her subjects, after those privileges have ceased to exist for nearly thirty years, without endangering the integrity of other portions of her empire, is a question for the Russian government alone to answer. If she accede to the demands of the Great Powers there will be no war. If she refuses, war appears inevitable. We await the issue of the "Polish question" with deep interest. Its denouement involves the fate of Europe.

It is said the first time ever a horse trotted in public in America for a stake was in 1818, when a match was made for $1.000 that no horse could be produced which could trot a mile in three minutes. A horse named Boston Blue won stakes, contrary to general expectation, by trotting the mile in a few seconds less than the time prescribed.

From the 18th Reg.

[We are allowed the privilege of making the following extracts from a letter received from the 18th Reg.:]

NASHVILLE, June 24, 1863.

"We are kept pretty busy, and are on duty every other day. We have very comfortable quarters in the Court House, have good bunks to sleep in, so we can take off our clothes, I have never slept without my pants on since we left Hillsdale, until we came to this city, and I tell you it is quite a luxury to take off one's clothes to sleep.

The 18th is winning golden opinions from the citizens of Nashville, and the commandant of the Post, for their gentlemanly deportment, their fine drill and discipline and for their faithful performance of duty. I am happy to say that we have the name of being the best drilled regiment and do the best guard and picket duty of any regiment around here.

On Sunday, a man supposed to be a rebel spy, attempted to run through the picket lines, he was halted and arrested and after being questioned was sent up to the city under charge of one man; after marching quietly for some time he attempted to escape, by running he was halted, and refusing to stop, the guard fired upon him killing him instantly.—His body was brought to the city but was not identified.

We were inspected and reviewed by Brig. Gen. Granger, yesterday. After he had inspected Co. E, he turned around to Lieut. Hoag and asked what company it was, on being told he replied, loud enough for every one in the company to hear him, that it was the best company he had inspected in the division and that was saying considerable.

Yours Truly, W. W.

Military Notice.

HEADQUARTERS DISTRICT OF INDIANA AND MICHIGAN.

DEPARTMENT OF THE OHIO,
Indianapolis, June 30th, 1863.

General Orders No. 5.

The peace of Indiana has lately been disturbed by violence, murder, and other acts contrary to law, and having their origin in certain secret political societies, clubs, or leagues. The common safety now demands that all such associations should be discontinued, no matter to what political party the may belong. They are a constant source of dread and mistrust; they divide and provoke hostility between neighbors, weaken the dignity and power of courts of justice; expose the country to martial law, and discourage the people from enlisting in defence of the Nation.

No matter how honest or worthy may have been the reason for such societies in the beginning, their very secrecy, and the oaths they impose, do enable wicked men to use them unto unlawful ends, and pervert them into public nuisances.

All good objects can be accomplished openly, and none but the enemies of their country ever need disguise.

It is perfectly plain that such secret organizations are both dangerous and beyond the ordinary grasp of the law: they are, therefore, declared to be hostile, and will be put down by all the military power of the District if need be.

I invoke against said secret societies the good influence and active aid of all men who are friendly to the Union, to discountenance, and peaceably break up such organizations within the limits of this District, and I call upon the members thereof speedily to withdraw from their dark meetings, and openly show that their intentions and acts are such as may well become the true and loyal citizens of a country whose freedom and integrity they will maintain against all enemies whatever, and before the eyes of all the world.

O. B. WILLCOX, Brig. Gen. Comd'g.

Lorenzo Dow, the celebrated itinerant preacher, once came across a man who was lamenting that his ax had been stolen. Dow told the man that if he would come to meeting with him, he would find his ax. At the meeting, Dow had on the pulpit, in plain sight, a large stone. Suddenly, in the middle of his sermon; he stopped, took up the stone and said, 'An axe was stolen in the neighborhood, last night, and if the man who took it don't dodge I will hit him on the forehead with this stone,' at the same time making a violent effort to throw it. A person present was seen to dodge his head, and proved to be the guilty party.

—One of the most unique of recent Yankee inventions is a cane, which is also a lantern, a stout, elegant walking strick, and a brilliant steady light. The lantern is set in the body of the cane about six inches from the top' and so as not to disfigure its proportions of beauty, and can be lit at pleasure by pulling the cane apart, or borne along dead, when the cane, without close observation, is undistinguishably from an ordinary, large-sized walking-stick. it is a useful invention for doctors, watchful, editors of daily papers, young men who 'sit up' late with people who ain't their sisters, and all other class who have to be out nights.

Deeply Interesting Details.

PHILADELPHIA, July 7.—Col. Forney, of the Press received the following highly important dispatch to-night from the army of the Potomac:

HANOVER Pa., July 5th. 5 P. M.—There has been no fighting up to this time to-day. Last evening we drove the enemy back to Gettysburg. Our lines this morning, extend 8 miles around Gettysburg. Our batteries being all on the hill looking on the town from the South. We occupy round top ridge commanding the Chambersburg turnpike, and have cut off all the lines of retreat.—Our forces occupy the strongest possible position. A flank movement on our left is impossible.

At about 8 o'clock last night the Florida brigade, of General Longstreet's corps, with a Brigadier-General in command, advanced to within our lines and gave themselves up with their colors.

A bearer of despatches from Jeff Davis to Gen. Lee has been captured. The despatch orders Lee peremptorily to return to Richmond, and states that the movement into Pennsylvania was wholly against his wishes. We have captured 8000 prisoners.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, July 3.—Semi-Official Report.—The decisive battle has been fought today, and the enemy has been repulsed with a terrific loss. At daylight Lee's right wing batteries opened upon our left, and shortly after those of his centre followed. After half an hour's cannonading, doing but little damage to us, the fire slackened, and only occasional shots were exchanged. Shortly afterward the enemy's left, composed entirely of infantry and sharp-shooters, made at attack on our right wing so suddenly and impetuously that our skirmishers and front lines were driven back from their entrenchments, but by the aid of the batteries in the rear, and the bravery of the 12th corps, we regained the position, capturing a considerable number of prisoners. Several hours of ominous silence followed this repulse. At one o'clock, the enemy fired two shots, apparently the signal for the grandest artillery fight ever witnessed on this continent. Before a moment elapsed, it is estimated at least 80 guns opened upon us. Our batteries returned the fire, and for more than an hour it seemed impossible that man or beast could live.—The range, as exhibited on the two previous days, was wanting on this occasion. Most of their shells exploding far in the rear of our front and generally missing our batteries. Under cover of this Lee advanced his columns of Infantry from their covers and made several desperate attempts to carry the lines by assault, but each successive attempt was repulsed with terrible heavy loss to them. Some of our batteries, whose ammunition being expended and the men exhausted, ceased to fire, and on the approach of the reserve batteries, withdrew to the rear. The enemy, only seeing the batteries withdrawing, and mistaking this for a retreat, made a rapid infantry charge up the hill and obtained a position in our lines and cutting to pieces and almost annihilating small infantry supports; but before they had time to rejoice at their imaginary success, the fresh batteries poured in a deadly fire of canister and case shot. The infantry reserves joined on either flank of the gap, charged them and added greatly to their destruction. They were completely surprised, and hundreds threw down their arms and asked for quarter. Nearly the entire brigade of Gen Dick Garnet surrendered, and Garnet himself, wounded, barely made his escape. Long street was mortally wounded, and captured; he is reported to have died in an hour afterwards. About 4:30 P. M. the artillery of the enemy slackened, and had entirely ceased at 5. The latest shots they fired were far beyond their original position, and the infantry column had withdrawn to their covers. We took upwards of 10,000 prisoners. The enemy captured but few if any of our men.

The rebel prisoners report that Gen. A. P. Hill was killed outright upon the field, and that their officers suffered far greater casualities than in any previous engagement. So terrific was the fire, that the small house where Gen. Mead's staff were quartered was perforated by several shots. Many of the staff horses were killed around the house. Gen. Butterfield was struck in the breast, and it is feared, internally injured by a piece of shell that exploded in the building.—Several of our general officers were wounded in the engagement. Gen. Hancock was wounded in the leg. Gens. Gibbon, Warren, and Hunt, were wounded, in consequence of excitement and difficulty in ascertaining their locations.—The names of many prominent officers reported as killed or wounded cannot be ascertained to-night. Too much credit cannot be given to our batteries, which for hours stood to their guns under a boiling sun and surrounded by the missiles of death, retiring only to give their positions to others, when their cassons were exhausted.

The infantry engaged also nobly did their duty, and the enemy to-day, at their hands, have received the greatest disaster ever administered by the Union forces. All officers award the highest honor to Gen. Meade for his able generalship since he assumed command, and particularly for coldness, decision and energy on this memorable 3d of July.

PHILADELPHIA, July 5th.—The Journal publishes the following in an extra: Baltimore 5th.—The war correspondent of the Journal has just arrived from yesterday's battle field. He states the route of Lee was thorough and complete. Gen. Meade has not only captured 20,000 rebels, but recaptured all our own troops, who were previously in the hands of the rebels.

HARRISBURG, July 6.—The authorities here were in ecstacies over the news received to-day. The Potomac river has risen six feet within the past 48 hours, which must necessarily destroy all fords, and there being no bridges within striking distance of Lee's army, all means of retreat must be cut off.

A dispatch received to-night by Gen. Couch states that Gen. Gregg, with a force of Gen. Pleasanton's cavalry, had an engagement to day at Fayetteville in which he took 4.000 prisoners. Fayetteville is between Cashtown and Chambersburg in the east of South Mountain. After disposing of his prisoners, Gen. Gregg took an interior route and advanced in the direction of Greencastle.

The militia under Gen. Smith are within supporting distance of Gregg and rapidly advancing upon the rebels.

A person who represented himself as Longstreet's Adjutant General, was captured near Hagerstown on Friday, and arrived here to-day. He states that Longstreet and Lee both opposed the invasion of Maryland and Pennsylvania, fearing it would be disastrous, but Davis would not listen, and gave orders, promising to send 30,000 reinforcements under Beauregard. When the Adjutant was captured, he was on his way to Culpepper to ascertain what had become of Beauregard's troops, and was very anxious to know whether any one here had any knowledge of them.

A gentleman who left Gettysburg, states that Longstreet is dead and within our lines. Everything looks as though Lee's army would be forced to turn and give battle or surrender.

PHILADELPHIA, July 6th.—The Washington Star says it is estimated at Gettysburg that Lee had lost up to yesterday morning, by desertion since crossing the Potomac, an aggregate of 60,000 men.—He is clearly cut off from taking either of the lower and short routes leading to Virginia, and must be endeavoring to make for the Potomac at Hancock. We have strong hopes he will not be able to get back into Virginia, neither with his artillery nor transportation; and the men with which he may himself escape, will not number a fourth of his boastful and over confident army.

BALTIMORE, July 6th.—What is considered as positive information is received here that Gen. Ewell expired to-day at a house two miles from Fancytown, his wound was received at Gettysburg.

WASHINGTON, July 6.—The President has decided that the application of Stephens and Ould for a personal interview could not be granted; that communications would be received through the ordinary channels.

Another despatch states the head of the rebel army passed through Greenwood, twelve miles north-east of Hagerstown on Sunday noon. The rebel Gens. Barksdale and Garnett were killed. The enemy is reported to have built trestle bridges across the Potomac, above Williamsport. If so, it is feared their main force may escape.

PHILADELPHIA, July 7.—The Press a despatch from Gettysburg the 5th stating that the 12th, corps is now hastening through Williamsport to cut off the rebels. Part of Pleasanton's force have gone towards Frederick.

HANOVER, Pa., July 6.—Our cavalry still are harrassing the rebels rear. Lee is endeavoring to gain the position in South Mountain Gap. Lee's men and animals are said to be exhausted. Another battle is imminent.

PHILADELPHIA, July 7.—The Inquirer has a despatch from Carlisle, July 6th, stating that the rebels were at Williamsport Sunday evening. Sedgwick was in their rear with 25,000 fresh troops.

FREDERICKSBURG, Md., July 6.—The iron bridge is so nearly destroyed as to be impractible for the retreating rebels.—Portions of the rebel army passed through South Mountain, but the Potomac is high and their pontoons are destoyed. Kilpatrick is after the rebels sharply.

INDIANOPOLIS, July 8.—Reliable information received here to-night states that 4000 rebels crossed into Indiana and are marching on Corydon with artillery. In a skirmish with the home guard forty of the latter were killed.

From Vicksburg.

MEMPHIS, July 1.—Official advices from Grant's army to the 28th say that the Vickaburg garrison is very active and is making a desperate resistance to the progress of the seige, with the hope that relief will soon reach them. Additional reinforcements are said to be on the way from Bragg to Johnston, and the latter is perfecting his arrangements to attack Grant's rear. Marmaduke, Price and Kirby Smith's forces are combined to get some point on the bank of the Mississippi. Probably an attempt will be made to capture Miliken's Bend, and stop navigation. Everything is quiet in this sec- Gen. Hurlbut is vigilant, watching closely all the movements of the enemy in the country adjacent to the south of his lines. The weather is extremely hot.

NEW YORK, July 3.—The Times prints the following special: "Rear of Vicksburg, Wednesday, June 24.—Up to yesterday. skirmishing has been going on along the whole line of our rear front, or rather that portion of it from Snyder's Bluff to the Big Black Railroad crossing. There being every indication of a fight imminent, the rear front was put in order to resist the assault. The night before we lost a picket of 300 near Bear Creek, seven miles from Snyder's Bluff. On the same day the 4th Iowa Cavalry was attacked by a superior force of rebel cavalry on the Bridgeport Ferry road. They were repulsed after a hard fight.

Yesterday Gen. Osterhaus was attacked at the Big Black, and a severe battle ensued. The rebels fought with great obstinacy and spirit, and were, after a long engagement, repulsed with great slaughter.

The guns of the Cincinnati have been removed by Gen. Steel, and put in position as a land battery. They opened this morning.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Secretary Welles has received a dispatch from Admiral Porter that VICKSBURG SURRENDERED JULY FOURTH!

CAIRO, July 7.—A dispatch boat from Vicksburg arrived bringing news that Pemberton sent a flag of truce on the 4th, offering surrender, if allowed to march his men out. Grant said that none could leave except as prisoners of war. Pemberton then unconditionally surrendered.

Battle at Helena, Ark.

CAIRO, July 7.—Between 8,000 and 10,000 rebels, under Holmes, Prior and Marmaduke, made an attack on Helena on the morning of the 4th. They advanced in three columns, but the roughness of ground was such as to prevent the rebels from bringing up their artillery and they attempted to carry the works by assault. Their centre column charged in the direction of Fort Curtis and took three lines of rifle pits. Their flank attack was not so successful, which subjected the centre to an enfilading fire, which swept them down in great numbers.—They were soon surrounded and captured. One whole brigade, or what was left of it, numbering 840, fell into our hands, seven hundred and forty of which arrived here this morning. Among them were Col. Lewis, 4th Mo., Cols. Johnson and Bell. Gen. Prentiss was aware of the contemplated attack, and was prepared.—He had about 4,000 men, and was also assisted by the gunboat Tyler.

The rebels behaved remarkably well in regard to the college ground at Carlisle, Penn. Some of them said they were graduates or the University, and others that their fathers had graduated there. They camped in the college grounds, and were even careful to build their fires on the gravel walks and not on the grass plats. A professor in the college describes the discipline of the rebel army as being perfect.

—Richmond papers of the 24th, announce the capture of the rebel iron clad steamer Fingal, which has been blockaded in Charleston harbor. Our gunboats are supposed to have attacked the Fingal, when she was making an effort to escape, and attack our wooden blockading vessels. The fight lasted only thirty minutes and the Fingal was badly damaged.

Brig. General Baxter Not Killed.

A letter from General Baxter, received by his brother here, dated on the evening of July 1st, after the battle, in which he was reported killed, says: "We have had a battle to-day and I have come out unhurt. I lost my entire staff who were on the field.—My A. A. G. wounded, A. J. G. Thomas killed, Lieut. Knaggs missing, also an Orderly severely wounded. I lost of about 1200 men taken into action 656, killed, wounded and missing."

Col. Jeffords Killed.

Our brave Michigan 4th has lost another Colonel, killed upon the field of battle. We have just received the painful intelligence that in the sanguinary battle of Friday last, at Gettysburg, Col. JEFFORDS was killed by a bayonet thrust while rescuing the battle flag of the regiment from a rebel officer who had seized it in a hand to hand encounter with the enemy. The flag was finally rescued and the rebels repulsed. No other officers of the regiment from this section are yet reported as either killed or wounded.

Celebration.

The second celebration of the fall of Vicksburg came off last evening in this place with great spirit. The rejoicings of our people were unbounded. The booming of cannon, ringing of bells and the soul stirring appeals of several who addressed the vast assemblage, from a stand erected directly in front of this office, aroused the patriotism of the people to an intensity that we have never before seen equaled. Bonfires, added to the light produced by the illumination of most of the business houses, diffused a pleasing and happy influence over the proceedings of the evening, all of which passed off without the least accident to mar the happiness enjoyed on the occasion.

Rebel Fotification in Tecumseh.

Chicago street, in this village, on the morning of the 4th of July, was well fortified by the young rebels, by drawing together some 8 or 10 wagons and buggies, and filling them with boxes, hogsheads, crates, barrels, signs, &c., &c., to the height of 10 or 12 feet. In the morning a little loyalist made his appearance and undertook to storm the battery with a couple of cows. And seriously to be regretted, was repulsed, but without any great loss. The enemy not having the right wing guarded he made a desperate charge, by twisting the cows tails, and forced his way through by the walk, upon which the litte rebbels skedaddled.

Soon after this an inspection was made by the commanders and chiefs of the Federal army, that had property estray, in different portions of the town, when they commenced taking possession of the same, also, ordering a flag of truce to be sent to the young rebels, that they surrender, or submit to the articles in such case made and provided, and that was to make whole the property taken. The little rebs, thinking "descretion the better part of valor," employed one of our excellent expressmen to cart the fortification back from where they took it from.

Since our last report until to day, June 8th, Wool has brought readily 65 and 71c. in our market. But the glorious news of the surrender of Vicksburg and the complete route of Lee's army in Pennsylvania, has changed the aspect of things, and Wool buyers are waiting further developments before investing largely at the high rates paid thus far for Wool this season.

It is our individual opinion that in any event the price of Wool will rule much higherh than it as for many years past.

We have no change to note in our farm products, and our market has been very quiet, farmers having been busy in their hay and cornfields.

WILCOX & GIBBS, SEWING MACHINE.

Price, with Hemmer and Feller, $40.

THE WILCOX & GIBBS' Sewing Machine is the best Machine, without regard to price, for

Family Sewing,
Braiding,
Hemming,
Felling,
Tucking,
Cording,

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seem, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances "to survive the wash-tub."

A patented device of great utility to learners, prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it.—Phila. Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder.—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines, Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines.—Pennsylvanian.

"The Machine, in the opinion of the committee, fills more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Willcox & Gibbs', as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultur al Society's Report.

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21, 1860.

"After much wear and many washings, the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others."—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experienc in our own family."—Boston Traveller.

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well-merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette.

"We esteem it the best machine for family use. The stitch is unexceptionable."—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN,—County of Lenawee, ss.—At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, on Monday, the first day of June, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty three.

Present, Robert R. Beecher, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of John Fisher, deceased. On reading and filing the petition duly verified, of John Fisher junior, son of deceased, praying, among other things, that the last will of said deceased, now on file in this court, may be admitted to probate and that said petitioner may be appointed administrator of said estate.

Thereupon it is ordered that Monday, the thirteenth day of July next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petioner, give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

DETROIT ADVERTISER & TRIBUNE.

PUBLISHED DAILY, TRI-WEEKLY AND WEEKLY.

The oldest newspaper in Detroit, now in its 34th year—the Advertiser having been established in 1829.

In July last, by the consolidation of the Daily Advertiser and Daily Tribune, a circulation larger than that ever enjoyed by any paper in Michigan was attained. Since then a corps of editors has been secured second to none engaged on any western paper. Some have been employed for years on leading Eastern papers, and bring a rich fund of experience to the columns of the Advertiser & Tribune

Our expenses for telegraphic despatches are larger than those of any other in Detroit and more than seven times the amount paid by any one paper a year ago. In fact we now publish simultaneously with them, besides the regular Associated Press dispatches, all the most valuable of the special dispatches that are sent to the Philadelphia Inquirer Pittsburg Gazette, Cincinnati Gazette, St. Louis Democrat, and Chicago Tribune—the five leading papers in the cities in which they are published, and for enterprise not a whit behind the New York journals. Almost daily it occurs that we obtain news by special dispatches twelve hours in advance of the Associated Press, of the correctness of which statement we refer to the numerous readers of our Daily. In this city, where both the daily papers are habitually read by all parties, it is generally conceded that the dispatches of the Advertiser & Tribune are the most reliable and satisfactory of any published in Detroit.

We are now sparing no expense and intend to spare none to place the Advertiser & Tribune in the first rank as a newspaper. Particular attention is given to State news, and to intelligence from our soldiers in the army, a correspondent being maintained in every Michigan Regiment.

Politically the Advertiser & Tribune looks to the salvation of the country by the energetic prosecution of the war now waged against the accursed rebellion of the South. On humantarian grounds, as a war measure, and as a safeguard for the future quiet of the nation, it upholds the Presidents Emancipation Proclamation, and all other war measures of the Government; and while it admits the propriety of friendly criticisms, it holds that no direct and active opposition to the Government is consistent with loyalty, or should be tolerated in the North any more than in the States engaged in the rebellion.

As a commercial paper we aim to make the Advertiser and Tribune the best paper in the State and have employed to conduct this department a man of large experience and reputation. This will make the paper particularly acceptable to farmers, as well as merchants and millers.

Our facilities for printing a large edition have lately been greatly increased by the erection of the fastest press in use in this city, and our circulation is keeping pace with our capacity to print.

TERMS.

DETROIT DAILY ADVERTISER AND TRIBUNE.
To Mail Subscribers $2 00 per Quarter.

Contains twenty-two columns of reading matter including local news, telegraph reports, State and miscellaneous items, army correspondence, copious details of war and foreign news, editorial articles, personal and political items, commercial and marine intelligence, etc. etc.

Detroit Tri-Weekly Advertiser & Tribune

To Mail Subscribers $1 00 per quarter: 10 copies to one address $8 75 per Quarter.

Published every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Contains about thirty columns of news, comprising all the most important matter of the daily issue. This edition is well suited to farmers, merchants, and others living at a distance from a post office, or who are reached only by tri-weekly mails. It is becoming very popular throughout the State—so much so that it has increased in circulation about one thousand copies within eleven months.

Detroit Weekly Advertiser and Tribune.

$1 50 per year within the State. 20 copies to one address $25 00. Papers sent to soldiers in the army for $1 00 per year.

The Weekly is printed in quorto form, and is as large as any of the New York Weeklies. It is made up of articles carefully selected from the daily edition, and contains besides, a carefully prepared review of the news of the week, full commercial reports, a story, and a large amount of interesting miscellany, poetry, etc.

Every one wanting a good State paper should send for the

Are you suffering from a complicated disease, with your system out of order, with pain and uneasiness in your bowels, loss of appetite, nervousness, languor, and sickness in your stomach? If so, you should be cured by the timely use of the well known remedy. Take Ayer's Pills and cleanse out the foul humors that are the cause of your sickness. Let them purge away the impurities that are the point now of your disease, restore health and strength to your shattered system. It is health, again, they stimulate the functions of the body into vigorous activity, purify the vitals of disease, and remove the obstructions which make it.

disease. A cold settled somewhere, in the body, and obstructs its natural functions. These, if not relieved, react upon themselves and the surrounding organs, producing general aggravation, suffering, and disease. While in this condition, oppressed by the derangements, take Ayer's Pills, and see how directly they restore the natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true and so apparent in this trivial and common complaint, is also true to a score of the deep-seated, and dangerous distempers. The same purgative effect expels them. Caused by similar obstructions and derangements of the natural functions of the body, they are rapidly, and many of them surely, cured by the same means. None who know the virtues of Ayer's Pills, will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Statements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well knows public persons.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

ASA MORGRIDGE.

As a Family Physic.

From Dr. E. W. Cartwright, New Orleans.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic we possess. They are mild, but very certain and effectual in their action on the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Edward Boyd, Baltimore.

DEAR BRO. AYER: I cannot answer you what complaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say all that we ever treat with a purgative medicine. I place great dependence on an effectual cathartic in my daily contest with disease, and believing as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

PITTSBURG, PA., May 1, 1855.

DR. J. C. AYER. Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. PREBLE,
Clerk of Steamer Clarion.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the Liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I sincerely rejoice that we have at length a purgative which is worthy the confidence of the profession and the people.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., 7th Feb., 1856.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their ready yielding action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them. Fraternally yours, ALONZO BALL, M. D.,
Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Relax, Worms.

From Dr. J. G. Green, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best aperients I have ever found. Their alterative effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhœa. Their sugar-coating makes them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 23, 1853.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Fits, etc.

☞ From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Madrid, Canada.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. If others of our fraternity have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the progenitor of others that are worse. I believe costiveness to originate in the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.

From Mrs. E. Stuart, Physician and Midwife, Boston.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills, taken at the proper time, are excellent promotives of the natural secretion when wholly or partially suppressed, and also very effectual to cleanse the stomach and expel worms. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hewitt, of the Methodist Episc. Church.

PULASKI HOUSE, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 6, 1856.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr MacKenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By perseverance in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, Baton Rouge, La., 5 Dec. 1855.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease which had afflicted me for years. LINCOLN STEPHENS.

☞ Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skillful hands is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

The Peerless New York Mercury For the New Year.

It is with no fear of War's effect upon their literary fortunes, that the publishers of "The New York Mercury" acknowledge the unwavering loyalty of their two hundred thousand subscribers, and announce to them, and to all, that "The New York Mercury" for this year (1863) will be richer in every luxury of Polite Literature than ever before. It is no upstart speculation, no temporary "sensation" but a first class literary weekly, which has been familiar to the United States for a quarter of a century; and while the wishy-washy mushroon prints of yesterday or cutting down their talent even while they raise their suqscription price, "The New York Mercury maintains all its great staff of Romancers, Poets, Humorists, Essayists, Story-Tellers and Editors, and promises to make it still more greatest for 1863.

It is the one paper for every home. Its forty volumes of reading matter per week constitute an unparalleled

We are ruined Abram ruined, but the way the matter run,
We thought 'twas big nig, little nig, whole nig or none.

Yes! I know that you are ruined Jeff with your country all lain waste,
But you know I have oftimes told you, that you had on too much haste,
You had one eye already out, and of course that left but one,
To watch your big nig, &c.

No doubt that I did wrong Abe, but do you think that it was fair,
For them damn. black abolitionists to place you in that chair,
Like the frogs 'twas death to us, Abe, but for you no doubt 'twas fun,
For 'twas big nig &c.

Jeff. you know the constitution, gives the right to our mankind,
To elect whoever they desire, if the majority they can find,
But you flew in a passion Jeff, and fired off your gun,
And now 'tis big nig. &c

You have niggared round and round, you are an abolition set,
And with your nigger proclamation, our slavery has upset,
But I guess that 'twould our better Abe, if I never had begun,
To fight for the big nig &c.

Jeff. your fences are knocked down, and your money is very poor,
And as 'tis written death to traitors I think you're way is sure,
You have made yourself a victim, and you shall hang beneath the sun,
For the big nig, &c.

Abe this world is full of trouble, oh, how the people strive,
But you are some like me Abe, you'l ne'er get out alive,
Johny Brown was hung you know, and you thought he weighed a ton,
For the big nig, &c.

Jeff you've tried for intervention but your credit is out of joint,
There's some would like to help you Jeff, but they could'nt see the point,
You'll find out the yankee nation, had rather fight than run,
For the big nig, &c.

Well Abe, I've made your taxes high, I've got you well in debt,
I have made some sorry faces among your yankee set.
I have made it cost you well I think, for all your victories won,
For the big nig, &c.

Yes Jeff, you've run us some in debt, but what is that to you,
You have sacrificed your birth right, with your God forsaken crew,
And history will record you as a traitor number one,
For your big nig, &c. [A. BERDAN.

For the Girls.

Ladies—caged birds of beautiful plumage but sickly looks—pale pets of the parlor, who wegitate in an unhealthy atmosphere like a potato germinating in a dark cellar—why do you not go out in the open air and warm sunshine, and add lustre to your eyes, bloom to your cheeks, elasticity to your steps, and vigor to your frames? Take morning exercise, let loose your corset strings, and run up the hills for a wager, and down again for fun; roam the fields, climb the fences, leap the ditches, wade the brooks, and after a day of healthy exercise and unrestrained liberty, go home with an appetite acquired by healthy enjoyment.—The blooming and beautiful young lady—rosy cheeked and bright eyed—who can darn a stocking, mend her frocks, command a regiment of pots and kettles, feed the pigs, milk the cows and be a lady when required, is the girl that young men are in quest of for a wife. But your pining, screwed up, wasp-wasted, doll-dressed, consumption mortagaged, music murdering, and novel devouring daughters of fashion and idleness—you are no more fit for matrimony than a pullet is to look after a brood of fourteen chickens. The truth is, my dear girls, you want less fashionable restraint and more liberty; more kitchen and less parlor, more leg exercise and less sofa, more pudding and less pianno, more frankness and less mock-modesty. Loose your waist strings, breathe in the pure atmosphere, and become something as good and beautiful as nature designed.

The Golden days of Youth.

What a feeling of regret steals over the heart, as the joyous days of youth fly as heaven-like dreams across our imagination, to think that they are lost to us forever! When there are a few moments for contemplation from the toils of the busy world how readily do we embrace it, brief though it be, to indulge in the pleasing remembrance of the past, to compare it with the present, and trust for a bright realization of "things long sighed for" in the future! What a glorious thing is youth! full of warm confidence, high hopes, and generous feelings, flowing from the heart like a gush of music from an angel's harp. How keen are its enjoyments, how novel its sensations, how exquisite its appreciation of the true and beautiful! What music is there to compare with out-pourings of a youthful and generous heart. What height is there for a youthful heart prompted by a noble ambition, impossible to climb? But the transient dream of youth soon fades away, and age comes creeping on us so imperceptibly, that we start and sigh for days now lost, when we feel the icy hand upon us that comes to chain us for its own.

"With time we begin to analyze our sensations, examine the petals of the flower of our youth, and let the odor escape till one by one the leaves fade and fall, and the withered stem is left in the gazer's hand."

An editor in Maine has never been known to drink any water. He says he never heard water was used as a general remedy but once—in the time of Noah—when it killed more than it cured.

"Never strike a child upon the head. Providence has provided other and more appropriate places for punishment."

Careful Wife—Don't Charles, go to Boston, with that hole in the elbow of your shirt:

A lady who read of the extensive manufacture of odometers, to tell how far a carriage had been run, said she wished some Connecticut genious would invent an instrument to tell how far husbands had been in the evening when they 'just stepped down to the postoffice,' or 'went out to attend a caucus.'

A western negro being told that the baths at Chicago were intended for folks to 'wash in,' paid his quarter and was left in the bath room. As he did not make his appearance when there above an hour, he was angrily called by the bath keeper, when he opened the door and exhibited the walls of the room covered with the clothes he had washed and hung up to dry, and said: Look here, mister, how you talk, I'd like to see you wash and hang out two dozen pieces, in less time than I have been at it.

The landlord of a hotel entered, in an angry mood, the sleeping apartment of a boarder, and said:

'Now, sir, I want you to pay your bill, and you must; I've asked you often enough, and I tell you now that you don't leave my house till you pay it!'

'Good,' said the lodger, 'just put that in writing; I will stay with you as long as I live.'

A letter from an officer of the African squadron says; the discovery of coal in Liberia, all the hilly ranges abounding with it, will bring wealth but civilization to Africa. The only drawback is the want of proper harbor for vessels along the coast.

A young apprentice to the shoe making business asked his master what answer he should give to the often repeated question, "Does your master warrant his shoes?" 'Answer Thomas,' said the master, 'that I warrant them to prove good; and if they don't, I'll make them good for nothing.

An amusing thing occurred in the Twenty-fourth Ohio. A few days since a soldier, in passing to the lower part of the encampment, saw two others from his company making a rude coffin. He inquired who it was for.

"John Bunce," said the others.

"Why," replied he, "John is not dead yet. It's too bad to make a man's coffin when you don't know if he is going to die or not."

"Don't trouble yourself," replied the others. Dr. Coe told us to make his coffin, and I guess he knows what he gave him."

BLOOD PURIFIER
and
BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
	Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

AYER'S

CATHARTIC

PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system deranged, and your feelings uncomfortable? These symptoms are often the prelude to serious illness. Some fit of sickness is creeping upon you, and should be averted by a timely use of the right remedy. Take Ayer's Pills, and cleanse out the disordered humors—purify the blood, and let the fluids move on unobstructed in health again. They stimulate the functions of the body into vigorous activity, purify the system from the obstructions which make disease. A cold settles somewhere in the body, and obstructs its natural functions. These, if not relieved, react upon themselves and the surrounding organs, producing general aggravation, suffering, and disease. While in this condition, oppressed by the derangements, take Ayer's Pills, and see how directly they restore the natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true and so apparent in this trivial and common complaint, is also true in many of the deep-seated and dangerous distempers. The same purgative effect expels them. Caused by similar obstructions and derangements of the natural functions of the body, they are rapidly, and many of them surely, cured by the same means. None who know the virtues of these Pills, will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Statements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well-known public persons.

From a Forwarding Merchant at St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

ASA MORGRIDGE.

As a Family Physic.

From Dr. E. W. Cartwright, New Orleans.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic we possess. They are mild, but very certain and effectual in their action on the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Edward Boyd, Baltimore.

DEAR BRO. AYER: I cannot answer you what complaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say all that we ever treat with a purgative medicine. I place great dependence on an effectual cathartic in my daily contest with disease, and believing as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

PITTSBURGH, PA., May 1, 1858.

DR. J. C. AYER. Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. PREBLE,
Clerk of Steamer Clarion.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the Liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I sincerely rejoice that we have at length a purgative which is worthy the confidence of the profession and the people.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., 7th Feb., 1856.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them. Fraternally yours, ALONZO BALL, M. D.,
Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Relax, Worms.

From Dr. J. G. Green, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best aperients I have ever found. Their alterative effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhœa. Their sugar-coating makes them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 21, 1859.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Fits, etc.

From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Madison, Tennessee.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. I (others of our fraternity have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join me in recommending it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although had enough in itself, is the progenitor of others that are worse. I believe ninety-nine hundredths of all the ills that flesh is heir to originate in the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.

From Mrs. E. Stuart, Physician and Nurse, Boston.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills taken at the proper time, are excellent preventives of the nightmare when wholly or partially suppressed, and also very effectual to cleanse the stomach and expel worms. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

PULASKI HOUSE, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 6, 1856.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not write and inform you. A cold settled in my limb, and I became a sufferer from excruciating neuralgic pains, which defied all other treatment. Notwithstanding my [illegible] the best physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of an excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. My perseverance in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, Baton Rouge, La., 8 Dec. 1857.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured, by your Pills, of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SIDELL.

☞ Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands, dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. The contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.

The Peerless New York Mercury

For the New Year.

It is with no fear of War's effect upon their literary fortunes, that the publishers of "The New York Mercury" acknowledge the unwavering loyalty of their two hundred thousand subscribers, and announce to them, and to all, that "The New York Mercury" for this year (1863) will be richer in every luxury of Polite Literature than ever before. It is no upstart speculation to temporary "sensation" but a first class literary weekly, which has been familiar to the United States for a quarter of a century; and while the wishy-washy mushroom prints of yesterday or cutting down their talent even while they raise their subscription price, "The New York Mercury maintains all its great staff of Romancers, Poets, Humorists, Essayists, Story-Tellers and Editors, and promises to make it still more greater for 1863.

It is the one paper for every home. Its forty columns of reading matter per week constitute an unparalleled

CONSERVATORY OF THE ENTERTAINING, and its Novels, Miscellaneous Tales, Beauties of verse Gossip Feuilletons, Broadsides of Humor, and Polished Editorials, combine to editomize all the charms of

WIT AND SENTIMENT!

The husband reads it to his wife, the mother to her children, the lover to his sweetheart, the soldier to his companions, and the village schoolmaster to the circle around the stove. It is familiar to the sight of every man, woman, and child in our country, and has regular subscribers in several countries in Europe. "The New York Mercury" is also identified with the grandest patriotism of the age for several members of its brilliant Staff hold high rank in our noble army, and have made themselves as famous with the sword as with the Pen. The great illustrating artist of "The New York Mercury," the inimitable DARLEY, gives the paper the highest attributes of Fine Art; and yet this largest literary weekly of the day promises to surpass itself in all these respects during the New Year!

THE NEW YORK MERCURY, is sold by all newsmen and periodical dealers in America. To subscribers, it is regularly mailed every Saturday morning, for $2 a year; three copies for $5; six copies for $9; eight copies for $12 with an extra copy, FREE, to the getter up of the club. We take the notes of all solvent banks at par. Payment must invariably be made in advance.

GREAT REDUCTION!!

IN THE PRICES OF

SINGER & Co's

STANDARD MACHINES

IS WELL KNOWN TO BE THE BEST FOR MANUFACTURING PURPOSS.

No. 1, STANDARD SHUTTLE MACHINE
(Formerly sold for $90—reduced to $70.)

No. 2, STANDARD SHUTTLE MACHINE
(Formerly sold for $100—reduced to $75.)

SINGER'S LETTER A MACHINE

is the Best Machine in the World For Family Sewing and Light Manufacturing Purposes. Price, with Hemmer, and beautifully ornamented. $50

We would ask for our LETTER A. MACHINES the special attention of Vest Makers and Dress Makers, and all those who want Machines for light manufacturing purposes. They embody the principles of the Manufacturing Machines, making like them the interlocked stitch and are destined to be as celebrated for Family Sewing and light manufacturing purposes as our manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes in general.

Family Sewing Machines are valuable in proportion to the number of things they can do well. See what ours can do before making a purchase.

There is no doubt as to the value of our machines for manufacturing purposes, but it is only of late that the public began to learn that the essential elements of a machine best adapted to the heaviest work, would also be the elements to be embodied in a Family Machine. It is now well understood that our Letter A Machine is the only Family Machine yet offered to the public which has simplicity, rapidity, durability, and certainty of correct action. While as a general thing the sewing machine people are candid enough to acknowledge that our machines are unequaled for manufacturing purposes, they are almost sure to assert, in the same breath, that Singer's letter A, or family Machines, are not as good as theirs!—This is a mere trick of the trade, and we confidently invite those interested in the subject to examine for themselves, and see what our Letter A Family Machines, with all the recent improvements, are capable of doing. While they will sew the most delicate material to perfection, as already stated they are also adapted to light manufacturing purposes, and this, be it remembered, can not be said of any of the other family machines yet offered to the public.

The No. 1 and 2 Machines are of great capacity and application for manufacturing purposes.

Our No. 3 Machines are especially adapted to all kinds of light and heavy leather work in carriage trimming, boot and shoe making harness making, etc. They are of extra size with an arm long enough to take under it and stitch the largest sized dashes There is scarcely any part of a trimmers clothing that cannot be better done with them than by hand, so, too, the saving of time and labor is very great. The table of these machines is twenty-four inches long, and the shuttle will hold six times as much thread as the shuttle of those used for tailoring purposes. The large machines work as fast as the small ones.

We have always on hand Hemming Guages, Silk Twist, Linen and Cotton Thread on Spools, best Machine Oil in bottles, &c.

We manufacture our own Needles, and would warn all persons using our machine not to buy any others We know that there are needles sold of the most inferior quality at higher prices than we charge for the best. The needles sold by us are manufactured especially for our machines. A bad needle may render the working of the best machine almost useless

Our customers may rest assured that all our Branch Offices are furnished with the "genuine article."

In case of small purchases the money may be sent in postage stamps or bank notes.

☞ Correspondents will please write their names distinctly, It is all-important that we should, in each case, know the Post Office County, and State,

☞ All persons requiring information about Sewing Machines, their sizes, prices, working capacities, and the best methods of purchasing, can obtain it by sending to us, or any of our Branch Offices for a copy of "I. M. SINGER & Co's Gazette," which is a beautiful Pictorial Paper, entirely devoted to the subject, It will be sent gratis.

We have made the above REDUCTION IN PRICES with a two fold view of benefiting the public and ourselves. The public have been swindled by spurious machines made in imitation of ours. The metal in them, from the iron castings to the smallest piece, is of a poor quality. Their makers have not the means to do their work well. They are hid away in secret places, where it would be impossible to have at their command the proper appliances. It is only by doing a great business and having extensive manufacturing establishments, that good machines can be made at moderate prices. The best designed machines, badly made, are always liable to get out of order, and are sure to cost considerable trouble and money to keep them in repair.

The qualities to be looked for in a machine are—

Cerrainty of correct action at all rates of speed, simplicity of construction, great durability and rapidity of operation, with the least labor.

Machines, to combine these essential qualities, must be made of the best metal and finished to perfection. We have the ways and means on a grand scale to do this.

The purchasers of machines, whose daily bread it may concern, will find that those having the above qualities not only work at rapid as well as slow rates of speed, but last long in the finest possible working order—Our machines, as made by us, will earn more money with less labor than any others, whether in imitation of ours or not. In fact they are cheaper than any other machines a gift.

For the Herald.

A Requiem.

FOR THE DEAD AT GETTYSBURG,

Near the far-away Gettysburg,
'Neath the forests dark shade,
Our soldier companions,
On the field have been laid.
There no sound is heard,
Save the wild mountain bird,
And the howl of the wolf as it creeps;
No stone marks the spot
But 'twill ne'er be forgot,
Where our brothers alone now sleep.

Tho' we may not linger,
Around their sad homes,
Our sad thoughts will oft wander,
Where e'er we may roam,
To the place where they lie;
But ne'er will our eyes,
See the willows that o'er them weep,
No stone marks the spot,
But 'twill ne'er be forgot,
Where our brothers alone now sleep.

On the bloody field of battle,
They have laid them to rest,
And their souls we trust are happy,
In the land of the blest,
Where wars never come—
Where death has no home,
Nor sorrow to cause us to weep,
No stone marks the spot,
But 'twill ne'er be forgot,
Where our brothers alone now sleep.

Bread upon the Waters.

A SKETCH FROM LIFE.

Ah, Jacob, now you see all your hopes are gone. Here we are, worn out with age—all our children removed from us by the hand of death, and ere long we must be the inmates of the poor house. Where now is all the bread you have cast upon the waters?"

The old, white-haired man looked up at his wife. He was, indeed, bent down with years, and age sat trembling upon him. Jacob Manfred had been a comparatively wealthy man, and while fortune smiled upon him he had ever been among the first to lend a listening ear and a helping hand to the call of distress; but now misfortune was his. Of his four boys not one was left. Sickness and failing strength found him with but little, and they left him penniless. Various misfortunes came in painful succession.—Jacob and his wife were alone and gaunt poverty looked them coldly in the face.

"Don't repine, Susan" said the old man "True, we are poor, but we are not yet forsaken."

"Not forsaken; Jacob? Who is there to help us now?"

Jacob Manfred raised his trembling fingers toward heaven.

"Ah, Jacob! I know God is our friend, but we should have friends here. Look back, and see how many you have befriended in days long past. You cast your bread upon the waters with a free hand, but it has not yet returned to you."

"Hush Susan, you forget what you say. To be sure, I may have hoped that some kind hand of earth would lift me from the cold depths of utter want; but I do not expect it as a reward for anything I may have done. If I have helped the unfortunate in days gone by, I have had my full reward in knowing that I have done my duty to my fellows. Oh! of all kind deeds I have done for my suffering fellows, I would not for gold have one of them blotted from my memory. Ah, my fond wife, it is the memory of the good done in life that makes old age happy.—Even now I can hear again the warm thanks of those whom I have befriended, and again I shall see their smiles."

"Yes, Jacob;" returned his wife in a lower tone, "I know you have been good and in your memory you can be happy; but alas! there is a present upon which we must look—there is a reality upon which we must dwell. We must beg for food or starve!"

The old man started, and a deep mark of pain was drawn across his features.

"Beg," he replied, with a quick shudder. "No, Susan—we are—"

"We are what, Jacob?"

"We are going to the poor house!"

"Oh God! I thought so," fell from the poor wife's lips, as she covered her face with her hands. "I have thought so, and I have tried to school myself to the thought; but my heart will not bear it."

"Do not give up, Susan," softly urged the old man laying his hand upon her arm. "It makes but little difference to us now. We have not long to remain on earth, and let us not wear out our last days in useless repinings. Come, come."

"But when—when shall we go?"

"Now—to-day."

"Then God have mercy on us."

"He will," murmured Jacob.

That old couple sat for a while in silence. When they were roused from their painful thoughts, it was by the stopping of a light cart in front of the door.—A man entered the room where they sat. He was the porter of the poor house.

"Come, Mr. Manfred," he said, "the guardians have managed to crowd you into the poor house. The cart is at the door, and you can get ready as soon as possible."

"Jacob Manfred had not calculated the strength he needed for this ordeal. There was a coldness in the very tone and manner of the man who had come for him, that went like an icebolt to his heart, and with a deep groan he sank back in his seat.

"Come, be in a hurry," impatiently urged the porter.

At that moment a carriage drove up to the door.

Is this the house of Jacob Manfred?"

"This question was asked by a man who entered from the carriage. He was a kind looking man about forty years of age."

"That is my name, sir," said Jacob.

"Then they told me truly," uttered the new comer. "Are you from the work-house?" he continued, turning toward the porter.

"Yes."

"Are you after these people."

"Yes."

"Then you may return. Jacob Manfred goes to no poor house while I live.

The porter gazed inquisitely into the features of the man who addressed him, and then left the house.

"Don't you remember me, exclaimed the stranger, grasping the old man by the hand.

"I cannot call you to memory now.

"Do you remember Lucius Williams?"

"Williams!" repeated Jacob, starting up from his chair, and gazing earnestly into the face of the man before him.

"Yes, Jacob Manfred—Lucius Williams. That little boy whom, thirty years ago, you saved from the house of correction; that poor boy whom you kindly took from the bonds of the law, and placed on board one of your own vessels.

"And are you—

"Yes—yes—I am the man you made. You found me a rough stone from the hands of poverty and bad example. It was you who first brushed off the evil, and who first led me to the sweet waters of moral life and happiness. I have profited by the lessons you gave me in my early youth, and the warm spark which your kindness lighted up in my bosom, has grown brighter ever since.—With an affluence for life I have settled down to enjoy the remainder of my days in peace and quietness, with such good work as my hands may find to do. I heard of your losses and bereavements. I knew that the children of your own flesh were all gone, but I am a child of your bounty—a child of your kindness and now you shall still be my parent.—Come my more than father—and you my mother, come. You made my youth all bright, and I will not see your old age doomed to darkness.

Jacob Manfred tottered forward, and sank upon the bosom of his preserver—He could not speak his thanks, for they were too heavy for utterance. When he looked up again, he sought his wife.

"Susan, he said, in a choking, trembling tone, "my bread has come back to me!

"Forgive me, Jacob."

"No, no, Susan. It is not I who must forgive you—God holds us in his hands.

"Ah! murmured the wife, as she raised her streaming eyes to heaven, "I never will doubt him again.

A gentlemen from Boston chanced to find himself among a little party of ladies, away down East, recently, in the enjoyment of some innocent social play. He carelessly placed his arm about the slender waist of as pretty a damsel as Maine can boast of, when she started and exclaimed, "Begone sir! don't insult me!" The gentleman at once apoligized for his seeming rudeness, and assured the fair one that he did not mean to insult her. "No?" she replied archly; "well, if you didn't you may do it again."

"Gentlemen of the jury," said a Western lawyer, "would you set a rat trap to catch a bear, or make fools of yourselves by trying to spear a buffalo with a knitting needle? I know you would not. Then how can you be guilty of convicting my client of man slaughter for taking the life of a woman?" The prisoner was acquitted.

A Model Wife.

Zachary Hodgson was not naturally an ill tempered man. It was want of reflection more than a corrupt and ungenerous heart, that led him to consider his wife in the light of an inferior being, and to treat her more like a slave than an equal. If he met with anything to ruffle his temper, his wife was sure to suffer when he came home. His meals were always ill cooked; and whatever the poor woman did to please him was sure to have a contrary effect. She bore his ill humor in silence a long time; but finding it to increase, she adopted a method of reproving him for his unreasonable conduct, which had the happiest effect.—One day, as Zachary was going to his usual avocation after breakfast, he purchased a large codfish, and sent it home with directions to his wife to have it cooked for dinner. As no particular mode of cooking was prescribed, the good woman well knew that whether she boiled it, or friend it, or made it into a stew her husband would scold her when he come home. But she resolved to please him for once, if possible, and therefore cooked portions of it in several different ways. She also, with some little difficulty, procured an amphibious animal from a brook at the back of the house, and put it into the pot. In due time her husband came home—some covered dishes were placed on the table; and with a frowning, fault finding look, the moody man commenced the conversation.

"Well, Sally, did you get the fish I bought?"

"Yes, my dear."

"I should like to know how you have cooked it—I will bet anything that you have spoiled it for my eating. (Taking off the cover.) I thought so. Why in the name of common sence, did you fry it? I would as soon eat a boiled frog."

"Why, my dear, I thought you would like it best fried."

"You did not think any such thing.—You know better. I never liked fried fish—why didn't [illegible]?"

"My dear, the [illegible] we had fresh fish, you know I [illegible], and you said you liked it better fried. I did it merely to please you; but I have boiled some also. So saying, she lifted a cover, and lo! the shoulders of the cod, nicely boiled were neatly deposited on a dish; a sight which would have made an epicure rejoice, but which, alas! only added to the ill-nature of her husband.

"A pretty dish this! Boiled fish? chips and porridge! If you had not been the most silly of woman kind, you would have made it into a stew."

"My dear, said she. "I was resolved to please you. There is your favorite dish."

"Favorite dish, indeed," grumbled the disconsolate husband; "I dare say it is an unpalatable, wishy-washy mess. I would rather have a boiled frog than the whole of it."

This was a common expression of his, and had been anticipated by his wife, who, soon as the preference was expressed uncovered a large dish at her husband's right arm, and there was a bull frog, of portentous dimensions and pugnacious aspect, stretched out at full length! Zachary sprang from his chair, not a little frightened at the unexpected apparition.

"My dear," said his wife, in a kind entreating tone, "I hope you will at length be able to make a dinner."

Zachary could not stand this. His surly mood was overcome, and he burst into an immoderate fit of laughter. He then acknowledged that his wife was right, and declared she should not again have reason to complain of him; and he faithfully kept his word.

A poor widow's little boy wanted a slate at school, but she couldn't afford to buy him one. The next day, seeing one in his hands, she inquired in some surprise, "Why, Tommy dear, where did you get that slate?" "I heard you say, when papa died," he replied, "that now he had gone we must look above when we wanted anything, so I went up and got this slate off the roof.—I wish I had a frame for it."

—A New Jersey paper tells of a well known character, who frequently figured on juries in New York. While on a jury as soon as they had retired to their room to deliberate, he would button up his coat and "turn in" on a bench, exclaiming—"Gentlemen, I'm for bringing in a verdict for plaintiff (or defendant, as he had settled his mind,) and all creation can't move me. Therefore, as soon as you have all agreed with me, wake me up, and we'll go in

There is no disputing this fact, it shines in the face of every little child. The coarse, bawling, scolding woman, will have coarse, bawling, scolding woman will have coarse, vicious, bawling children. She who cries on every occasion, "I'll box your ears—I'll slap your jaws—I'll break your neck," is known as thoroughly through her children, as if her unwomanly conduct were openly displayed in the most public streets!

These remarks were suggested by the conversation in an omnibus—that noble institution of men and manners—between a friend and a school master. Our teacher was caustic mirthful, and sharp. His wit flashed like the polished edge of a diamond, and kept the "buss" in a roar The entire community of insiders—and whoever is intimate with these conveyances can form a pretty good idea of our numbers—inclusive of the "one more," so well known to the fraternity, turned their eyes, ears and heads one way, and finally our teacher said:

"I can always tell the mother by the boy. The urchin who draws back with doubled fists, and lunges at his playmate, if he looks at his askance, has a very questionable mother. She may feed him and clothe him, cram him with sweet meats and coax him with promises, but if she gets mad she fights. She will pull him by the jacket; she will give him a knock in the back; she will drag him by the hair; she will call him all sorts of wicked names, while passion plays over her red face in lambert flames that curl and writhe out at the corners of her eyes.

"And we never see the courteous little fellow with smooth looks and gentle manner—in whom delicacy does not detract from courage or manliness, but we say,—"That boy's mother is a true lady."—Her ways are soft, loving and quiet. If she reproves, her language is, "My son"—not "you little wretch—you torment of my life—you plague—you scamp!

She hovers before him as the pillar of light before the wandering Israelites, and her beams are reflected in his face. To him the word mother is synonymous with everything pure, sweet and beautiful. Is he an artist? In after life, the face that shines with holy radiance on his canvass, will be the mother's face.—Whoever flits across his path with sunny smiles and soft, low voice, will bring mother's image freshly to his heart. She is like my mother, will be the highest meed of his praiser. Not even when the hair turns silver, and the eye grows dim, will the majesty of that life and presence desert him.

"But the ruffian mother—alas! that there are such—will form the ruffian character of the man.

Farmer's Boys.

Some one, we do not know who, says a farmer's boy should learn how to do the following things.

1. To dress himself, black his own boots, cut his brother's hair, wind up a watch, sew on a button, make a bed, and [illegible] his clothes in perfect order.

2. To harness a horse, grease a wagon and drive a team.

3. To carve and wait on the dinner table.

4. To milk the cows, shear the sheep, and dress a veal or a mutton.

5. To reckon money, and keep acounts accurately, and according to good books keeping rules.

6. To write a neat appropriate, briefly expressed letter, in a good hand, and fold and subscribe it properly.

Two sisters named Munzia and Maria Granata, fought a duel at Naples a few weeks ago, actuated by jealousy.—The combat took place with the national weapon—the knife—and one of the sisters was killed on the spot, while the other, who still survives, received as many as eighteen wounds.

Two old gentlemen of our acquaintance were complimenting each other on their habits on Temperance.

Did you ever, neighbor, said one, see me with more than I could carry?

No indeed, was the reply, not I. But I have seen you when I thought you had better have gone twice after it.'

Never trust with a secret a married man who loves his wife, for he will tell her, and she will tell her sister, and her sister will tell everybody.

The Greeks buried their dead in jars. Hence the expression: "He's gone to pot."

A Hint for Ladies.

Most of our fair readers have a decided aversion to that part of their duty which falls under the "patching and darning" denomination. They are of the opinion that "a rent may be the accident of a day; a darn premeditated poverty." But if they only knew how pretty a well executed piece of repair looks, when you see in its warp and woof the bright threads of economy, and independence, and womanly thrift, crossing and recrossing one another, they would lay aside embroideries and crochet work, and take up instead, the mending basket.

We rode down town the other day, when the only other occupants of the stage were a young gentleman and a lovely girl of, we should think, about eighteen. She was the prettiest, fleshest looking girl one would want to see—there were no tell-tale traces of midnight parties and headachy mornings in those peach blossom cheeks and clear, bright eyes: and all the numberless little items of her dress were as fresh and trim as she herself—from the pink bonnet strings down to the neatly fitting gloves and delicate gaiter boots. If we had been an old bachelor, or a young one either, we would certainly have fallen in love with that girl, particularly after we had discovered that she was as industrious as pretty. And how do you suppose we found it out? The handkerchief that day in her lap told us so. The neat little darn elaborately executed in its corner, with the small white stitches and skillful handiwork, had a tongue quite audible to our ears. Time and patience, and wise economy had been there. The gentlemen sitting opposite saw the little token also; we noticed his eye turning from the handkerchief to the blooming face, and back to the handkerchief, and we knew perfectly well what he was thinking of—the good wife that young lady would make, and how neat her husband's cravats and stockings would be! Poor fellow, the edges of his shirt bosom were a little frayed, and one or two buttons were missing, whose detection the most skillful arrangement of his cravat ends could not conceal. Perhaps he had a wife who did not believe in mending and darning—perhaps he none at all. However that may have been, his admiring eyes appreciated the darn on the handkerchief more than if it had been the richest and most sight destroying embroidery—not for what it was, but what it betokened. Girls, don't shrink from a mended place as if it were a plague spot; the longer your old things last the better able you will be to have new ones bye-and-bye. Sensible people read your character in little things; and nobody will think the worse of you, whatever may be your station in life, for the exercise of economy and thrift. A stitch in time saves nine, and sometimes it saves a great deal more than that.—English paper.

A Boy's Letter.

"Now, Bob, I'll tell you what I want. I want you to come down here for the holidays.

Don't be afraid. Ask your sister to ask your mother to ask your father to let you come. It's only nine miles. The two prentices, George and Will, are here to be made farmers of; and brother Nick is took home from school to help in agriculture we like farming very much, it's capital fun. Us four hav got a gun and go shooting. It's a famous good one, and shure to go off if you don't full cock it.—Tiger is to be our shooting dog as soon as he has left off-killing sheep. He's a real savage, and worries rats beautifully.

Before father comes down we mean to bait our bull with him. There's plenty of New Rivers about, and we're going a fishing as soon as we mend our top joint.

We've a pony, too, to ride upon, when we catch him; but he's lose in the paddock, and has neither maine or tail to signify, to lay hold of, isn't it prime, Bob? You must come too. If your mother won't give your father leave to allow you, run away. Remember your turn up Goswell street to go to Lincolushire, and ask for Widdlehefen hall.

There's a pond full of frogs but we wont pelt them till you come; but let it be before Sunday, as there's our own orchard to rob, and the fruit to be gathered on Monday. If you like eating raw eggs, we know where the hens lay, and mother don't afid I'm bound there's lots of bird's nests. Do come, Bob, and I'll show you the wasps nests, and everything that will make you comfortable. I dare say you could borrow your father's volunteer musket of him without his knowing it; but be sure to bring the ramrod, as we have mislaid ours by firing it off.'

Constitution of the U. States.

ARTICLE III.

SEC. 1. The judicial power of the United States, shall be vested in one Supreme Court, and in such Inferior Courts as the Congress may from time to time ordain and establish. The Judges both of the Supreme and inferior Courts, shall hold their offices during good behaviour; and shall, at stated times, receive for their services a compensation, which shall not be diminished during their continuance in office.

SEC. 2. The judicial power shall extend to all cases, in law and equity, arising under this Constitution, the laws of the United States, and treaties made, or which shall be made under their authority; to all cases affecting Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls; to all cases of Admiralty and Maratime jurisdiction; to controversies to which the United States shall be a party; to controversies between two or more States; between a State and citizens of another State; between citizens of different States; between citizens of the same State, claiming lands under grants of different States, and between a State or the citizens thereof, and foreign States, citizens or subjects.

In all cases affecting Ambassadors, other public Ministers and Consuls, and those in which a State shall be party, the Supreme Court shall have original jurisdiction. In all the others cases before mentioned, the Supreme Court shall have appellate jurisdiction, both as to law and fact, with such exceptions, and under such regulations as the Congress shall make.

The trial of all crimes, except in cases of impeachment, shall be by jury; and such trial shall be held in the State where the said crimes shall have been committed within any State, the trial shall be at such place or places as the Congress may by law have directed.

SEC. 3. Treason against the United States shall consist only in levying war against them, or in adhering to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort. No person shall be convicted of treason unless on the testimony of two witnesses to the same overt act, or on confession in open Court.

The Congress shall have power to declare the punishment of treason; but no attainder of treason shall work corruption of blood, or forfeiture, except during the life of the person attainted.

ARTICLE IV.

SEC. 1. Full faith and credit shall be given in each State to the public acts, records and judicial proceedings of every other State. And the Congress may, by general laws, prescribe the manner in which such acts, records and proceedings shall be proved, and the effect thereof.

SEC. 2 The citizens of each State shall be entitled to all privileges and immunities of citizens in the several States.

A person charged in any State with treason, felony, or other crime, who shall flee from justice, and be found in another State, shall, on demand of the executive authority of the State from which he fled, be delivered up, to be removed to the State having jurisdiction of the crime.

No person held to service or labor in one State, under the laws thereof, escaping into another, shall, in consequence of any law or regulation therein, be discharged from such service of labor; but shall be delivered up on claim of the party to whom such service or labor may be due.

SEC. 3. New States may be admitted by the Congress into this Union; but no new State shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other State; nor any State be formed by the junction of two or more States, or parts of States, without the consent of the Legislatures of the States concerned as well as of the Congress.

The Congress shall have power to dispose of and make all needful rules and regulations respecting territory or other property belonging to the United States; and nothing in this Constitution shall be so construed, as to prejudice any claims of the United States, or of any particular State.

SEC. 4. The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union, a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them against invasion; and on application of the Legislature or of the executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened) agaist domestic violence.

ARTICLE V.

The Congress, whenever two thirds of both Houses shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this Constitution, or, on the application of the Legislatures of two-thirds of the several States, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which in either case shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of this Constitution, when ratified by the Legislatures of three-fourths of the several States, or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the Congress: Provided, That no amendment which may be made prior to the year one thousand eight hundred and eight, shall in any manner affect the first and fourth clauses in the ninth section of the first article; and that no State, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the Senate.

ARTICLE VI.

All debts contracted and engagements entered into before the adoption of this Constitution, shall be as valid against the United States under this Constitution, as under the Confederation.

This Constitution and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in pursuance thereof; and all Treaties made, or which shall be made under the authority of the United States shall be the Supreme Law of the Land: and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, any thing in the Constitution or Laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding.

The Senators and Representatives before mentioned, and the members of the several State Legislatures, and all Executive and Judicial officers, both of the United States and of several States, shall be bound by oath or affirmation, to support this Constitution; but no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the United States.

ARTICLE VII.

The ratification of the Conventions of nine States, shall be sufficient for the establishment of this Constitution between the States so ratifying the same.

DONE in Convention, by the unanimous consent of the States present, the seventeenth day of September, in the Year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty-seven, and of the Independence, of the United States of America the twelfth. IN CONVENTION,
Monday, September 17, 1887.
PRESENT,

The States of New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Mr Hamilton from New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia:

RESOLVED, That the preceding Constitution be laid before the United States in Congress assembled and that it is the opinion of this Convention, that it should afterwards be submitted to a convention of delegates, chosen in each State by the people thereof, under the recommendation of its Legislature, for their assent and ratification; and that each convention assenting to, and ratifying the same, should give notice thereof to the United States in Congress assembled.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this Convention, that as soon as the conventions of nine States shall have ratified this Constitution, the United States in Congress assembled should fix a day on which Electors should be appointed by the States which shall have ratified the same, and a day on which the Electors should assemble to vote for President, and the time and place for commencing proceedings under this Constitution. That after such publication the Electors should be appointed, and the Senators and Representatives elected: that the Electors should meet on the day fixed for the election of the President, and should transmit their votes certified, signed, sealed, and directed, as the Constitution requires, to the Secretary of the United States in Congress assembled; that the Senators and Representatives should convene at the time and place assigned; that the Senators should appoint a President of the Senate, for the sole purpose of receiving, opening and counting the votes for President, and that after he shall be chosen, the Congress, together with the President, should, without delay, proceed to execute this Constitution.

By the unanimous order of the Convention. GEORGE WASHINGTON,
WILLIAM JACKSON Sec'ty.] President.

Robbery in Addison.

On Wednesday a negro named William Johnson entered the houses of Mrs. Goff and George Griggs (colored) in Addison, during the absence of the parties, and took from the first ten dollars belonging to Mrs. G., and twenty-five dollars belonging to a Mr. James, who boarded at Goff's. At the house of Mr. Griggs he pried open a satchel and took out a suit of new clothes, and then decamped.—The facts became known in the evening when the parties returned home, and Johnson was suspected. On Thursday morning, Mr. W. W. Osborn, of that village, started in pursuit of the thief.—He traced him to Locust Corners, thence to this village, where he learned that he had taken the cars for the east on Wednesday, the day he committed the theft. He has probably made tracks for Canada, where he formerly lived.—Hudson Gaz.

☞ Horace Greeley, in an article in the Independent, over his own signature, says:

"We ought now to be near the end of our great struggle, and our government may, without compromising its dignity, not merely welcome, but openly invite, proposals from North Carolina, Georgia, Texas, and other revolted States, for a peaceful restoration of the Union. Let us all be prepared—nay, we shall, we must already be—to welcome peace whenever it can be achieved without a sacrifice of duty, of principle, of honor, of plighted faith."

Opposed to the Union.

"The recent Victories, almost to a certainty, place it in the power of the Administration to obtain an honorable peace."—Free Press 11th July.

The Administration will "OBTAIN an honorable peace." The brilliant Victories, thus far secured, have been "obtained" by the Admistration, in spite of the Free Press and its followers, and against the Opposition of Northern Copperhead Leaders, en masse. The co-operating influences of Northern Copperheads with the rebel army have not been sufficient—active and determined as that co-operation and effort has been—to prevent the brave ROSACRANS, and untiring, heroic GRANT, the greater than all his predecessors, MEADE, and other Union Generals, from "obtaining" victories, nor can all the Copperhead Opposition of Democratic Leaders prevent them, under the direction, of the Administration, from "obtaining" further victories and an "honorable peace."

We cut the above from the Detroit Ad. & Trib. of the 13th inst., not however for any partisan purpose but simply to lay before our readers the opinion of that journal which is so full of hope and encouragement to every lover of constitutional liberty throughout the land.

The courage exhibited in the above extract is worthy of the great object to be attained, but if it be true that the Free Press and its followers, together with the Northern party holding the same political opinions, are in active and determined co-operation with the rebel army, we fear that few will be able to share in its enthusiasm. If it be true that one half of the northern people are united with the southern rebels in their purpose to overthrow this government, loyal men may well stand appalled at the vastness of the power with which they have to contend, and not only so, but we fear that if our enemies at the South should obtain the knowledge contained in the above extract, that it would have the effect to inspire them with such hopes of success as would enable them more persistantly to continue in the nefarious work they have undertaken.

We must therefore confess that the only hope we have in the success of the Union cause is [illegible] Ad. & Tribune is mistaken with [illegible] to the sentiments of the Northern Democrats or followers of the Free Press. We had an idea that this party were not en masse opposed to the Union cause; we had an idea that thousands of them were offering up their lives on the battle field for the maintainance of the laws and the constitution of their country; it is this thought that inspires us with hope, it is the belief that the mass of the northern people cannot be drove into opposition to the glorious old flag, that gives us faith in the ultimate success of our cause.

But on the other hand, if we should ever be so unfortunate as to find one-half of the northern people alienated from the old constitution and joined to the rebel cause, then indeed might the stoutest heart well dispair of the republic.

The Draft.

WAR DEPARTMENT, Wash.,
Provost Marshal Gen's. Office, July 12

CIRCULAR 44.

To answer the inquiries made to this office it is announced:

1st. That any drafted person paying $300 under section 13 of the enrollment act, is hereby exempt from further service under that draft but not from any subsequent draft.

2d. Any drafted person furnishing a substitute is exempt from military service for the period which said substitute is mustered into the service.

3d. A substitute once mustered into the service cannot be drafted while in the service.

4th. A drafted man cannot pay exemption or hire a substitute after he has presented himself to the board for examination.

5th. Men who on the 3d of March, 1863, were in the military service of the United States, as substitutes under the draft of 1862 and whose term of service have since expired, are not liable to the present draft, but the persons for whom they were substituted are liable to draft the same as though they had not been drafted and furnished substitutes.

6th. In serving the notice as required by circular No. 42 from this office, a reasonable time to report shall in each case be granted by the Board of Enrollment to the men in the State who have been or may be drafted. JAMES B. FRY.

Wheat Crop in Europe.

The past week has been showery and of variable temperature. We have now had our compliment of moisture, and some fears are begining to be entertained that we shall get too much, especially should the rain be heavy upon the Wheat now, in many places coming into bloom. But immense good to the crops generally has ensued though the beneficial rainfall was too late for the crop of Grass on early lands, and the first cut of Clover is said to be hardly worth the labor of gathering. For the second, however, there is now a good chance both for Fodder and Seed, and the late grass lands are likely to yield abundently. The weather on the Continent has not lately been propitious, and it is the more confirmed that Hungary has suffered from drouth. There have also been recent frosts in Northern Germany, which have blackened the Potato haulm and injured the Rye. In France the storms have done local hurt, and in Algeria where they are in full harvest, with fine crops, there are apprehensions of too much rain. Prices on the continent have therefore hardened in many places. France is one 1s to 1s, 6d, per quarter dearer for Wheat, and orders coming thence to London have stopped the tendency to decline here. Belgium and Holland are getting dearer, from the exhaustion of stocks; and there, also more genial weather is much desired.—Our own markets though not overdone with samples, s how greatly increased sales over last year, and prices have been sustained with difficulty, there still being no disposition to speculate."—Mark Lane Express.

Forty Dollars Bounty.

By a recent order from the War Department all men who have heretofore served in the Union army for a period of nine months or longer, enlisting in the regular army for five years service, within ninety days, shall receive, a premium, advance pay and bounty, of four hundred and two dollars, as follows, viz; Premium paid for enlistment, two dollars; advance pay after muster, thirteen dollars; advance bounty paid at depot after being accepted, twenty-five—total forty dollars; Bounty to be paid at the first pay day after twelve months service, fifty dollars. Bounty to be paid at the first pay day after twelve months service, fifty dollars. Bounty to be paid at the first pay day after two years service, fifty dollars.—Bounty to be paid at the first pay day after three year's service fifty dollars.—Bounty to be paid at the first pay day after four years service fifty dollars.—Bounty to be paid at the expiration of the service, seventy-five dollars. The bounty of four hundred dollars aforesaid shall be allowed and paid to all now in the regular army whose terms expire within one year, and who shall re-enlist within two months before the expiration of their present terms of service.

A Fighting Quaker.

Capt. Nicholas Halleck Mann of Ulster county, N. Y., is a Quaker, over six feet high, and "in for the war." He commanded a squadron of cavalry at the Aldie fight. When the National force was overborne by superior numbers and left Gen. Kilpatrick in the hands of the enemy, Capt. Mann rallied with noble words his flying troopers, placed himself at their head, and far in advance dashed through and over and down the rebel ranks, his sabre flashing to the right and left until the General was released, and the gallant Captain lay bleeding and helpless by the side of his dead horse within the rebel lines. By a miracle he escaped death, and is now in the Emory hospital, counting the days that must elapse before he is again in the saddle.—Two cousins of the same persuasion are in the same troop, and their gentle "thee and thou" language gives little indication of the patriotic fire that lives within.

THE NUMBERS OF LEE'S ARMY.—A fair estimate taken from various sources, and collected, shows that Lee's whole army before the battle of Gettysburg, amounted to 170 regiments of infantry, numbering 85,000, 24 regiments of cavalry, numbering 14'000. To which add for artillery and pioneers, 10,000. Total, 109,000, viz: Gen. Robert E. Lee, commanding; 1st corps, Lieut. Gen. J. Longstreet; 2d corpse, Lieut. Gen. Richard S. Ewell; 3d corps Lieut. Gen. Ambrose P. Hill; cavalry Maj. Gen. J. E. B. Stuart Of these it is stated there have been lost by death, prisoners and stragglers, about 40,000, leaving him still with an army of between 60,000 and 65,000 men. Of these probably 10,000 to 15,000 may be on duty in detachments, so that Meade will have to contend with at least 50,000 men, in a very desperate condition, especially if we may believe the reports that arrived yesterday afternoon that Ewell's whole supply trains had been captured.

☞ Eight changes have been made in the army of the Potomac since its organization. The rebel army of Northern Virginia has had only two commanders since the commencement of the war.

CHAMBERSBURG, July 14.—The rebel army, which recently invaded Maryland and Pennsylvania, commenced its retreat over the Potomac at Williamsport, on Sunday at noon. Its rear passed over at 8 o'clock Tuesday morning.

All the ammunition trains crossed on midday four miles below Williamsport.—In all, the train consisted of about 7,000 wagons. Most of the wagons forded the river at Williamsport. Lee passed over Monday evening about 8 o'clock.

On monday evening Stuart made a feint of an attack on the earthworks, one and a quarter miles west of Hagerstown, for the purpose of covering the retreat at night.

This engagement commenced about 6 and ended at 8 o'clock. The rebels had sharp-shooters and two cannon, and some shells were thrown.

Our cavalry charged through the woods on the rebel's left and drove the rebels.—We used no large guns. The rebel' loss is unknown, but must have been more severe than ours. We lost twelve wounded and one killed.

Our forces reached Williamport half an hour after the rebels crossed. Between 10 and 12 heavy firing was heard in the direction of Falling Waters, about six miles below Williamsport.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—The following dispatch has just been received:

Headquarters Army of the Potomac,
July 14—5 P. M.

To H. W. Hallack, Gen in Chief:

My cavalry now occupies Falling Waters, having overtaken and captured a brigade of infantry, 1,500 strong, 2 guns 2 caissons, 2 battle flags, and a large number of small arms. The enemy is all across the Potomac.

Signed, G. G. MEADE.

FORTRESS MONROE, Suly 14.—Fort Powhattan on James River was taken possession of by our fleet yesterday. All the men and guns had been removed.

The gunboat Union has just arrived from Charleston, bound to New York.—She reports all of Morris Island captured, except Fort Wagner. The enemy's loss in killed, wounded and prisoners is between 700 and 800.

The attack commenced last Friday morning The steamer Union left Monday afternoon, at which time the siege of Fort Wagner was progressing with every prospect of a speedy capture. Five monitors were engaged.

Gen. Grant had finished paroling rebel prisoners on the 8th inst. The number 31,277.

Immediately after the surrender of Vicksburg Gen. Sherman moved in the direction of the Big Black river with a large army. On the following day he met Johnston drawn up in line of battle. A sanguinary engagement took place, resulting in Johnston's defeat and the capture of 2000 prisoners.

Gen. Frank Blair is reported in possession of Jackson.

A rumor was in circulation that Port Hudson surrendered to Banks on the 5th, with 18,000 prisoners."

CINCINNATI, July 14.—The Commercial says: "Mr. Swinton, of the N. Y. Times, arrived last night direct from Rosecrans' headquarters, main body.—Bragg's army had retreated from Chattanooga to Atlanta. The presumption is that the bulk of his forces have been sent to Richmond to garrison that place.—Rosacrans has taken 4000 prisoners during the late forward movement. Our army is in high spirits and splendid condition."

NEW YORK, July 14.—The Post says: Bodies of rioters to-day visited large manufacturing establishments, forcing laborers to join them and forbidding the loading of ships, &c. Up to 3 p. m. several houses have been sacked, including Mayor Updyke's. Conflagrations are occurring momentarily and the mob which seem to be divided into seperate crowds, are bent on the plunder, pillage and robbery of persons.

The merchants have held a meeting, and about 200 have just marched up Broadway to enroll themselves as a special police. There have been several collisions between the military and police, in which the rioters have got worsted.

Detatchments of troops, with two pieces of ordinanc, under Col. O'Brien, charged on the rioters at 9 o'clock in the 14th district. Three rounds of blank catridges were fired from the cannon, and the mob hastily dispersed, threatening to come back soon with arms.

A company of infantry was stoned, in Pitts street, when the Lieutenant ordered the company to fire, which it did, killing several of the rioters, the rest fleeing.

The mob this afternoon, (July 14th.) got as far down town as Fulton Street Ferry, visiting many vessels, compelling men aboard to join them and stealing what they wanted. A full force of Government employees is at the New York Post Office to night with arms and two cannon.

It is understood that Mayor Opdyke has pledged all necessary power to act in the city to Gov. Seymour.

Charleston.

PHILADELPHIA, July 13.—The Bulletin says "We learn from Washington on excellent authority, that an attack on Charleston was to have begun on Thursday last. A fleet of iron-clads, under Admiral Dahlgren, was rendezvousing at Port Royal and Edisto, at last accounts. A number of wooden vessels have been furnished with Whitworth guns, and otherwise fitted to take part in the attack.—Gen. Gilmore has command of a large land force, which is to co-operate with the Navy. The present plan is, first to attack and take the batteries on Morris Island. If they were captured, it was expected that their big guns would be turned upon Fort Sumter, and the iron clads be thus aided in reducing the Fort."

Morgan's Raid.

CINCINNATI, July 13.—Morgan left Moore's Hill, on the Ohio and Mississippi road at 1 o'clock this morning, and passed over the Indianapolis and Cincinnati road at a point thirty-five miles from here and reached Harrison, Hamilton county, Ohio, about noon. At half past 5 he was within sixteen miles of Hamilton, moving slowly on that place.

Gen. Hobson, with a strong force, was four hours behind him. The damage done to the Ohio and Mississidpi road was three bridges destroyed, a water station burned, and some track removed. The damage to the Indianapolis and Cincinnati road is slight—one water tank burned.

Naval Artillery.

The Commander-in Chief of our South Atlantic blockading fleet, is not so wedded to his 15-inch guns, as to be insensible to the progress of ordnance ideas.—There is now in course of construction, and almost ready for an experiment, a gun devised by him, which, if successful, will not only be in keeping with modern theories, but which will revolutionize Naval artillery. Some idea may be formed of the magnitude of the innovation from the fact that the new piece is intended to burn twice as much powder as the immense 21 ton gun, which now consumes 35 pounds at a single discharge. There is also being constructed, under the supervision of Ericsson, the inventor whose name is associated with the origin of a new Navy, a tremendous cannon, calculated to withstand, on shipboard, the explosion of 90 pounds of gunpowder

While our beautiful American woman are fond of imitating the follies of their charming sisters across the water in all matters of extravagant dress, late hours, and domestic duties, we wish that as a compensating good, they would also imitate European ladies of birth and fashion in their cultivation of athletic pursuits. Think of a walk over hill and dale, bog and rock, of twenty four miles—and this was done by a Dutchess, a beautiful, delicate looking woman.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATION
"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED"
COMPOUND

Fluid Extract Buchu

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the
BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATER or CALCEOUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflamation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, or CHILDREN.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEEKNESS

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power.
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot Hands,	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin,	Pallid Countenance,

These symptoms, if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITZ, EPILEPTIC FITS,

In one of which the patient may expire Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases."

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION,

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering, but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

Requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system, which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Female,

OLD OR YOUNG, SINGLE, MARRIED, OR CONTEMPLATING MARRIAGE.

In many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the Laws of Newspapers.

The Courts have settled the following points

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscription.
2. If subscribers order the discontinuance of their paper, the publishers may continue to send them till all that is due be paid.
3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their paper from the office which they are directed, they are held responsible till they have settled their bill and ordered their papers discontinued.
4. If subscribers move to other places without informing the publisher, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.
5. Refusing to take a paper from the office, or removing and leaving it uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.
6. A postmaster neglecting to inform the publisher when a paper is not taken from the office makes himself liable for the subscription price.

MR. SHERER is about to bid farewell to Tecumseh, and take up his residence in Detroit. May the sun shine on his prosperity, in the City of the Straits.

We tender our thanks to JAMES—of Cambridge—for the interest he has taken for us, and the Herald, since we have been in Tecumseh. If one quarter of the subscribers, were as mindful as he he has been, Tecumseh might brag of as good a paper, as any city or town in the State. He has forwarded to us several new subscribers, and with the names the money. Acts of this kind will not go unrewarded, as printers, not only at home, but abroad, will appreciate him. We wish him success in all his undertakings.

The Steamer Pearl.

AND—"OF GREAT PRICE."

We were very politely invited, last Friday evening, by Mr. JOHN STEELE, one of the proprietors of the boat, to "jump in and take a ride"—so about 7 o'clock P. M. we wended our way to Mr. WM. HAYDEN'S mill pond, about half a mile from the centre of the city. After arriving there, the first object we discovered was the little "Duck" bending around the Peninsula, from her round house, in gallant style. In a few moments after she hauled up to Mr. Hayden's dock, fronting the Globe Mills. The next thing we heard, from the conductor, was, "all aboard" for Pleasant Falls and intermediate ports—distance to the Falls about two miles—(and we would remark here that passengers are limited to sixteen.) She was soon on her way across the "fresh deep" (pond) to Hayden River, and passed over looking like a beautiful Swan Arrived at the mouth of the river in about 3 minutes, where, owing to some few breakers, she was check mated from the rate of 10 miles to 6 per hour. Passing the breakers, the excellent engineer—Mr. John Alvord put on the steam again and away we went until we arrived at Chalk Bay; a survey was taken of this place, and then on we went again—pell mell, to Lone Oak, where we were hailed with, Ship Ahoy? but on rounding too, we found we were deceived, as no Ahoy made his appearance. From this point to the Falls, she made the big and little fishes skedaddle faster than our soldiers did the rebels out of Pennsylvania,—by the by, she caught a good sized one in her paddles and threw it into the boat.

At the head of navigation—the Falls—we took a view of the beautiful scenery around that place; then again came the call, "all aboard" for Tecumseh—which was soon responded to—the signal rung and away we went for "Sweet Home," arriving there about 9 o clock P. M., all safe and sound, and highly delighted with the trip.

Our own citizens, and the people in the country, to fully appreciate the pleasure of the excursion, should, by all means, "go and take a ride"—Price only 10 cents the round trip.

To the proprietors of the PEARL,—Mr. S. PATTERSON and J. STEELE—we say, your enterprise entitles you to the respect and patronage of the community in which the boat was built—being wholly of home manufacture. See July 2 - 30

Tecumseh Herald.

We copy the following from the St. Cloud Union, (Minnesota) whose local editor is Mr. GEO. S. SEAFORD, formerly of this village. We are much obliged to you, George, for your good wishes:

"We are in receipt of Vol. 14, No. 1, of the Tecumseh, Mich, Herald, dressed in a new suit and otherwise improved. This paper brings many very pleasant reminiscences; having passed many years arranging its type into different positions and charging the patrons for our humble efforts we naturally welcome its "good news from home." In Minnesota Sixteen years has passed since we set the first type, and read the editorial of J. S. CASTLE, our much esteemed instructor, who, after serving some forty-two years, dons his specs, brushes the white locks, quietly picks up the stick and listens to the familiar click, as the type assumes their proper position to inform the reader of transpiring events. Tecumseh has reason to be proud of her paper, and the publisher deserves, what we sincerely hope he may receive, a generous support."

M. S. & N. I. R. R.

It does our soul good when we find prompt, energetic, kind-hearted and humane men, in employ where the great public have an interest, to make a record of their fine qualifications. Mr. J. J. Adams, of Tecumseh, the Auditor of the road may always be found, like the bright sun in its meridian, at his post. Mr. Wellman, of this place, and Mr. C. H. Putnam, of Sturgis Station, freight agents, are moddle men.—and not forgetting the gentlemanly conductor on the Jackson Branch, who, we are certain, no man, woman or child, riding in his train, can whisper aught against. There are others, no doubt, equally as good, but we are not so personally acquainted with them. And with the energy and foresight of Hon. J D. Campbell, is it to be wondered at that this road has now ordered six thirty-six ton locomotives to be manufactured without delay, and a large number of freight cars manufactured? Not at all.

Sabbath Schools.

On Sabbath, 12th July, the Sunday Schools of Ridgeway Concert, met in concert at Ridgeway. About 250 children were present—275 were reported in regular connexion with the schools, (5 in number).—The teachers are represented to be quite dilligent, and the schools prosperous. A special committee is to be appointed in each school to "gather the children in," and increase the attendance.

The singing of the children, led by the choir under the direction of W. W. SANFORD, was in advance of the past. The pastor, Rev. J. G. WHITCOMB, read and commented on the 19th chapter of Proverbs, and then addressed the concert, on the object and beneficial results of liberal teaching and practice. The meeting was then adjourned to meet August 9th, at Macon Church.

Runaways.

Last Friday evening, while the Steamer Pearl was laying at her dock, taking in passengers, a gentleman drove up in a buggy, jumped out leaving his horses untied. Just as the Pearl started, so did the horses and run a short distance, then leaving a crippled buggy behind. No further damage.

There was one at Adrian a few days since, throwing a lady almost as high as a kite.—When she came down, a gentleman standing near by, run to pick her up, supposing she must be killed, but before he reached the spot she was erect, remarking to him that she was not much hurt—buggy, however, all gone to smash and horse out up badly.

Another one happened some where near Round Lake, by which a lady by the name of Compton had her leg broken.

TECUMSEH, JULY 14th, 1863

MR. EDITOR—Dear Sir:

Please allow me to insert the following card in your valuable paper.

Last Saturday evening we were unexpectedly but very agreeably surprised with a visit from our friends

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. WISHARD,
" " " DREW,
" " " LILLY,
" " " BIDWELL,
" " " H C CONKLIN,

" " " HICKS,
" " " LEBABRON,
" " " BILLS,
" " " ADAM,
" " " A. D. HALL,

Rev Mr. Wishard, in behalf of the others, in pleasing and appropriate remarks presented Mr. Strong one elegant set of silver, consisting of Tankard, two Goblets lined with gold, and a Slop Bowl, as a token of their appreciation of his services as leader of the choir of the Presbyterian Church during his residence in Tecumseh. The donors will please accept from us our warmest thanks for this useful and elegant gift, and be assured we shall ever cherish in our hearts this act of friendship and esteem wherever Providence may cast our lot.

Mr. & Mrs. J. S. STRONG,

Something very Late.

G. T. KETCHAM started for the East about four weeks ago People generally supposed he was merely going for pleasure, but on stepping into his store yesterday, we were convinced that he had combined business with pleasure, as he had just been opening the largest stock of PHOTOGRAPH ALBUMS ever received in this County. He has them ranging in price from 50 cents to $10. Everybody can be suited there. They were bought of Anthony in New York, and coming directly from headquarters, they can be sold about 20 per cent cheaper than ever before offered. He also has a good assortment of PHOTOGRAPHS, embracing all of our prominent Generals, Mr. & Mrs. Tom Thumb Com. Nutt and Miss Minnie Warren, Autumn Leaves, American Birds, &c, &c.—Now is the time for everybody to "pitch in."

Poem.

On our first page will be found a short poem, entitled, "A Requiem for the Dead at Manassas." We substituted Gettysburg in place of Manassas. The author is unknown to us, as they were written for the Herald before we took charge of it. There are a number of other original communications, which have not made their appearance, of a reputable character and should have a hearing if not so highly polished. One of the great writers, in his day—WILLIS GAYLORD CLARK—wrote his first verses for a country paper, and at that time wrote for our humble self a "Carriers Address,"—some 40 years ago. We shall encourage young writers, when their composition will bear it.

Flora Temple.

Two young men from Dundee, came to town one day last week, and got pretty well yorked. Having rather a lazy horse, they set their wits to work how to make a Flora Temple out of him. The idea soon developed itself—they purchased a bunch of fire-crackers—divided it in two, then fastened them to the thills and set them on fire and jumped into the buggy to await the effects. Soon, crack! crack!! crack!!! and off goes Flora at the rate of about a mile a minute. The last we saw of Flora and the "bricks," was passing Judge Stacy's residence, about half a mile from the starting post, going at the above speed.

☞ The Ladies of Tecumseh and vicinity, are invited to meet at 2 o'clock, on Tuesday afternoon next, at the second room, up stair, in Richard's new store, for the purpose of making slippers or other articles for the wounded soldiers.

☞ Our neighbor, B. J. BISWELL, has added quite an improvement to his store, in painting &c. A little brushing up with paint adds materially to the beauty of a town.

Roback's Stomach Bitters.

It has long been the aim of the physicians to find a combination of medicines having the requisite stimulating and tonic properties to relieve and cure the common complaints of Billiousness, Liver disorders, Languor, Headache, Lowness of Spirits, Indigestion, Jaundice, Fever and Ague, &c., which are the diseases incident to this climate. The remedy has been discovered by Dr. Roback, and in the above complaints, and there is but one voice from the people, and that is in favor of these truly wonderful Stomach Bitters. We advise all who are afflicted and need an agreeable tonic for the troubles above indicated, to commence at once using the Bitters. See advertisement. 8w4

Pop.

And there they sat a popping corn,
John Stiles and Susan Cutter;
John Stiles as fat as any ox,
And Susan as fat as butter!

And there they sat and shelled the corn,
And raked and stirred the fire,
And talked of different kinds of ears,
And hitched their chairs up nigher.

Then Susan she the popper shook,
Then John he shook the popper—
Till both their faces grew as red
As the saucepans made of copper.

And then they shelled, and popped and ate
All kinds of fun a poking—
While he haw-haw'd at her remarks
And she laughed at his joking.

And still they popped, and still they ate,
John's mouth was like a hopper—
And stirred the fire and sprinkled salt,
And shook and shook the popper.

The clock struck nine—the clock struck ten
And still the corn kept popping—
It struck eleven and—then struck twelve
And still no signs of stopping!

And John he ate, and Sue she thought
The corn did pop and patter—
Till John cried out, "The corn's a fire!
Why Susan, what's the matter!

Said she, "John Stiles it's one o'clock—
You'll die of indigestion!
I'm sick of all this popping corn!
Why don't you pop the question.

Spurgeon and the Yankee.

A gentleman from England relates an anecdote of Mr. Spurgeon that is too good to be lost. The great preacher, to illustrate "personal effort," one day told a story of a Yankee who boasted that he could whip the whole English nation.

"And how could you do it?" said a bystander.

"Why," said the Yankee, "I would take one Englishman at a time, and then another, and so on, until all were whip

" close of the sermon there came a tall solemn looking person who hailed from the State of Maine, and presented to Mr. Spurgeon a letter of introduction.—Soon Mr. Spurgeon addressed the new comer by saying:

"Well, my American friend how did you like my illustration of individual power, drawn from your countryman?"

"Oh, I was quite pleased with it, because it was so true."

"So true, so true," said Mr. Spurgeon, "what do you mean, sir?"

"I know a Yankee that did it once," was the reply

"And what was his name," Mr. Spurgeon asked.

"The name, sir, was George Washington; perhaps you have heard of him!"

Mr. Spurgeon joined in a hearty laugh, and allowed that the Yankee was too much for him.

Home and Wife on Saturday.

Happy is a man who has a little home, and a little angel in it of a Saturday night. A house, no matter how little, provided it will hold two or so—no matter how furnished, provided there is hope in it; let the wind blow—close the curtains!

What if they are calico or plain, without border or tassel—or any such thing? Let the rain come down—heap up the fire. No matter if you havn't a candle to bless yourself with, what a beautiful light glowing coals make, reddening, sleeting, sunset radiance through the little room—just enough to talk by; not loud as in the hurrying world—but softly, whisperingly, with pauses between them, for the storm without and the thoughts within to fill up.

Then wheel the sofa round before the fire, no matter if the sofa is a settee, uncushioned at that, if so, may be it is just long enough for two or, say two and a half in it. How sweetly the music of silver bells from time to time falls on the listening ear then! How mournfully swell the chimes of the "days that are no more!"

Under such circumstances, and such a time, one can get, at least sixty-nine and a half statute miles nearer "kingdom come" than any other point in this world laid down in Malte Brun.

May be you smile at this picture, but there is a secret between us, viz: it is a copy of the picture rudely drawn, but true as the Pentateuch, of an original in every human heart.

Our little Bobby of four years old had been lectured by his aunt on the evil of disobedience to parents, and the example was shown him of a boy who disobeyed his mother, and went to the river and got drowned.

"Did he die?" said Bobby, who had had given the story due attention.

"Yes," was the serious reply.

"What did they do with him?" asked Bobby, after a moment's reflection.

"Carried him home," replied the monitor with due solemnity.

After turning the matter over in his mind, as it was hoped profitably, he looked up, and closed the conversation by asking:

"Why didn't they chuck him in again?"

We can not too often impress the fact, that two men with first rate implements will do as much as three men with poor ones, while the difference in the cost is not great. To be short of good implements is the worst economy, especially in these times of scarcity of help, and high wages.

Prentice laughs at the heading, 'Astounding Robbery," which frequently appears in connection with some fraud on the government. He says he occasionally sees cases of astounding honesty, but robbery no longer astounds.

Chances for a Laugh.

I think, said a farmer I should make a good Congressman; for I use their language, I received two bills the other day with the request for immediate payment one I ordered to be laid on the table, the other to be read that day six months.

The meanest man in the world lives in West Troy. In helping him out of the river once, a man tore the collar of his coat. The next day he sued him for assault and battery.

It was a maxim of General Jackson's 'Take time to deliberate; but when the hour for action arrives, stop thinking go in.

To prevent fish from smelling in summer—cut their noses off. This will do as well in winter.

The best capital for a young man is a capital young wife. So a gentleman informs me who has just tried it.

Nothing is more favorable to love than a little discord—as the frost makes the grapes tender and richer.

A city editor about closing up his form for the next week remarked with gravity: 'I have several little articles yet in my head, which I must get out,' meaning some paragraphs for his paper. Quickly responded his juvenile apprentice: 'Better let me run and get you a fine-tooth comb!'

A pretty woman is like a great truth or a great happiness, and has no more right to bundle herself under a veil or any other abomination, that the sun has to put on green spectacles.

A lady asked a gentleman the other day why so many tall gentlemen were bachelors. The reply was, "that they were obliged to be corner wise in bed to keep their feet in, and that a wife would be in the way."

"What ails your eye, Joe?"

"I told a man he lied."

A bright-looking little fellow at a Sunday school was asked, "What is a conscience?" He answered very properly, "an inward monitor." 'And what is a monitor?' "O, one of the iron-clads."

I have a brother—a wee little chap—who sometimes says things we think very odd. One day, as he was disposing of some bread and milk, he turned around to his mother and said' "Oh, mother I'm full of glory!" There was a sunbeam on my spoon, and I swallowed it!"

'Biddy, bring me some salt.' 'Sure and I will your riverance.' Forthwith appeared Biddy with the article in her hand. Said the master: 'Never again bring me anything in your hand. You should have brought it on a plate. The evening meal being over, the bell was again rung, and the faithful domestic again appeared. 'I want my slippers.' Biddy went, and returning bearing in her hand a plate, upon which were the priest's slipper's.

A Western editor sums up the peculiarities of a cotemporary as follows:

"He is too lazy to earn a meal, and too mean to enjoy one. He never was generous but once, and that was when he gave the itch to an apprentice boy: so much for his goodness of heart! Of his industry he says the public may judge, when he states that the only time he ever worked was when he mistook castor oil for honey."

A GOOD ANSWER.—"What under the sun can be the cause of that bell ringing to day?" said young Sam to his friend, as they approached a country village.

"If I express an opinion on the subject," returned Isaac solemnly, "I should say it is my deliberate conviction that somebody is pulling the rope."

A friend in describing the sulphur waters of Virginia, says they taste more like a decoction of leather breeches than any other drink he is acquainted with.

A man should be virtuous for his own sake, though nobody were to know it; as he would be clean for his own sake, tho' nobody were to see him.

"Your pen wants mending," as the shepherd said to the stray sheep.

"My heart is thine," as the cabbage said to the cook-maid.

"You don't pass here," as the counter said to the bad shilling.

Cause and Effect: "I'll bet a sheep,' said old Milgribs to his other half, "that our boy Otho is going crazy, for he is grinning at the plow, and he is grinning at the barn, and is grinning to himself wherever he goes." "Poh!" replied the old woman, "don't you know he got a love letter this morning?"

"Well how do you like the looks of 'the varmint?" said a "south-wester" to a "down-easter," who was gazing with round eyed wonder, and evidently for the first time, at a huge alligator with wide-opened jaws, on the muddy banks of the Mississippi. "Wal," replied the Yankee, "he ain't what you may call a hansum critter, but he has got, a great deal of openness when he smiles!"

A gentleman residing on First street proposed to wear his dress coat, the other day, but found that his wife, who was absent, had locked it up so carefully that it was as good as hid. On her return he accosted her. "Say, if you should die, where should I find my dress coat?" The wife, thinking the garment would not be needed at her funeral, declined to sanction its use for a second courtship, and didn't tell him.

Persons who are always innocently good humored and cheerful are very useful in the world. They not only maintain peace and happiness, but spread a glow of sunshine among those with whom they associate.

Love is to domestic life what butter is to bread—it possesses little nourishment in itself, but gives substantials a relish, without which they would be hard to swallow

and

BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,

Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,

Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

DETROIT ADVERTISER & TRIBUNE.

PUBLISHED

DAILY, TRI-WEEKLY AND WEEKLY.

The oldest newspaper in Detroit, now in its 34th year—the "Advertiser having been established in 1829.

In July last, by the consolidation of the Daily Advertiser and Daily Tribune, a circulation larger than that ever enjoyed by any paper in Michigan was attained. Since then a corps of editors has been secured second to none engaged on any western paper. Some have been employed for years on leading eastern papers, and bring a rich fund of experience to the columns of the Advertiser & Tribune

Our expenses for telegraphic despatches are larger than those of any other in Detroit and more than seven times the amount paid by any one paper a year ago. In fact we now publish simultaneously with them, besides the regular Associated Press dispatches, all the most valuable of the special dispatches that are sent to the Philadelphia Inquirer Pittsburg Gazette, Cincinnati Gazette, St. Louis Democrat, and Chicago Tribune—the five leading papers in the cities in which they are published, and for enterprise not a whit behind the New York journals Almost daily it occurs that we obtain news by special dispatches twelve hours in advance of the Associated Press, of the correctness of which statement we refer to the numerous readers of our Daily. In this city, where both the daily papers are habitually read by all parties, it is generally conceded that the dispatches of the Advertiser & Tribune are the most reliable and satisfactory of any published in Detroit.

We are now sparing no expense and intend to spare none to place the Advertiser & Tribune in the first rank as a *news*paper Particular attention is given to State news, and to intelligence from our soldiers in the army, a correspondent being maintained in every Michigan Regiment.

Politically the Advertiser & Tribune looks to the salvation of the country by the energetic prosecution of the war now waged against the accursed rebellion of the South. On humanitarian grounds, as a war measure, and as a safeguard for the future quiet of the nation, it upholds the Presidents Emancipation Proclamation, and all other war measures of the Government; and while it admits the propriety of friendly criticism, it holds that no direct and active opposition to the Government is consistent with loyalty, or should be tolerated in the North any more than in the States engaged in the rebellion.

As a commercial paper we aim to make the Advertiser and Tribune the best paper in the State and have employed to conduct this department a man of large experience and reputation. This will make the paper particularly acceptable to farmers, as well as merchants and millers.

Our facilities for printing a large edition have lately been greatly increased by the erection of the fastest press in use in this city, and our circulation is keeping pace with our capacity to print.

TERMS.

DETROIT DAILY ADVERTISER AND TRIBUNE.

To Mail Subscribers $2 00 per Quarter.

Contains twenty-two columns of reading matter including local, news, telegraph reports, State and miscellaneous items, army correspondence, copious details of war and foreign news, editorial articles, personal and political items, commercial and marine intelligence etc. etc.

Detroit Tri-Weekly Advertiser & Tribune

To Mail Subscribers $1 00 per quarter; 10 copies to one address $8 75 per Quarter.

Published every Tuesday Thursday and Saturday

Contains about thirty columns of news, comprising all the most important matter of the daily issue. This edition is well suited to farmers, merchants, and others living at a distance from a post office, or who are reached only by tri-weekly mails. It is becoming very popular throughout the State—so much so that it has increased in circulation about one thousand copies within eleven months.

Detroit Weekly Advertiser and Tribune.

WILCOX & GIBBS,

SEWING MACHINE.

Price, with Hemmer and Feller, $40.

THE WILCOX & GIBBS' Sewing Machine is the best Machine, without regard to price, for

Family Sewing,
Braiding,
Hemming,
Felling,
Tucking,
Cording,

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seam, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances to survive the wash-tub."

A patented device of great utility to learners, prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it."—Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder.—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines.—Pennsylvanian.

"This Machine, in the opinion of the committee, fills more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs', as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21, 1860.

"After much wear and many washings, the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others."—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experience in our own family."—Boston Traveller.

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well-merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette

"We esteem it the best machine for family use. The stitch is unexceptionable."—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

GREAT REDUCTION!!

IN THE PRICES OF

SINGER & Co's

STANDARD MACHINES

IS WELL KNOWN TO BE THE BEST FOR MANUFACTURING PURPOSS.

No. 1, STANDARD SHUTTLE MACHINE (Formerly sold for $90—reduced to $70.)

No. 2, STANDARD SHUTTLE MACHINE (Formerly sold for $100—reduced to $75.)

SINGER'S LETTER A MACHINE

is the Best Machine in the World For Family Sewing and Light Manufacturing Purposes. Price, with Hemmer, and beautifully ornamented, $50.

We would ask for our LETTER A. MACHINES the special attention of Vest Makers and Dress-Makers, and all those who want Machines for light manufacturing purposes. They embody the principles of the Manufacturing Machines, making like them the interlocked stitch and are destined to be as celebrated for Family Sewing and light manufacturing purposes as our manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes in general.

Family Sewing Machines are valuable in proportion to the number of things they can do well. See what ours can do before making a purchase.

There is no doubt as to the value of our machines for manufacturing purposes, but it is only of late that the public began to learn that the essential elements of a machine best adapted to the heaviest work, would also be the elements to be embodied in a Family Machine. It is now well understood that our Letter A Machine is the only Family Machine yet offered to the public which has simplicity, rapidity, durability, and certainty of correct action. While as a general thing the sewing machine people are candid enough to acknowledge that our machines are unequaled for manufacturing purposes, they are almost sure to assert, in the same breath, that Singer's letter A, or family Machines, are not as good as theirs!—This is a mere trick of the trade, and we confidently invite those interested in the subject to examine for themselves, and see what our Letter A Family Machines, with all the recent improvements, are capable of doing. While they will sew the most delicate material to perfection, as already stated, they are also adapted to light manufacturing purposes, and this, be it remembered, can not be said of any of the other family machines yet offered to the public.

The No. 1 and 2 Machines are of great capacity and application for manufacturing purposes.

Our No. 3 Machines are especially adapted to all kinds of light and heavy leather work in carriage trimming, boot and shoe making harness making, etc They are of extra size with an arm long enough to take under it and stitch the largest sized dashes. There is scarcely any part of a trimmers stitching that cannot be better done with them than by hand, so, too, the saving of time and labor is very great. The table of these machines is twenty-four inches long, and the shuttle will hold six times as much thread as the shuttle of those used for tailoring purposes The large machines work as fast as the small ones.

We have always on hand Hemming Guages, Silk Twist, Linen and Cotton Thread on Spools, best Machine Oil in bottles, &c.

We manufacture our own Needles, and would warn all persons using our machine not to buy any others We know that there are needles sold of the most inferior quality at higher prices than we charge for the best. The needles sold by us are manufactured especially for our machines. A bad needle may render the working of the best machine almost useless

Our customers may rest assured that all our Branch Offices are furnished with the "genuine article."

In case of small purchases the money may be sent in postage stamps or bank notes,

Correspondents will please write their names distinctly, It is all-important that we should, in each case, know the Post Office County, and State,

All persons requiring information about Sewing Machines, their sizes prices, working capacities, and the best methods of purchasing, can obtain it by sending to us, or any of our Branch Offices for a copy of "I. M. SINGER & Co's Gazette," which is a beautiful Pictorial Paper, entirely devoted to the subject, It will be sent gratis.

We have made the above REDUCTION IN PRICES with a two-fold view of benefiting the public and ourselves. The public have been swindled by spurious machines made in imitation of ours. The metal in them, from the iron castings to the smallest piece, is of a poor quality. Their makers have not the means to do their work well. They are hid away in secret places, where it would be impossible to have at their command the proper appliances. It is only by doing a great business and having extensive manufacturing establishments, that good machines can be made at moderate prices. The best designed machines, badly made, are always liable to get out of order, and are sure to cost considerable trouble and money to keep them in repair.

The qualities to be looked for in a machine are—

Certainty of correct action at all rates of speed, simplicity of construction, great durability and rapidity of operation, with the least labor.

Machines, to combine these essential qualities, must be made of the best metal and finished to perfection. We have the ways and means on a grand scale to do this.

The purchasers of machines, whose daily bread it may concern, will find that those having the above qualities not only work at rapid as well as slow rates of speed, but last long in the finest possible working order.—Our machines, as made by us, will earn more money with less labor than any others, whether in imitation of ours or not. In fact they are cheaper than any other machines as a gift.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system deranged, and your feelings uncomfortable? These symptoms are often the prelude to serious illness. Some ill of sickness is creeping upon you, and should be averted by a timely use of the right remedy. Take Ayer's Pills, and cleanse out the disordered humors—purify the blood, and let the fluids move on unobstructed in health. Again. They stimulate the functions of the body into vigorous activity, purify the system from the obstructions which make disease. A cold settles somewhere in the body, and obstructs its natural functions. These, if not relieved, react upon themselves and the surrounding organs, producing general aggravation, suffering, and disease. While in this condition, oppressed by the derangement, take Ayer's Pills, and see how directly they restore the natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true and so apparent in this trivial and common complaint, is also true in many of the deep-seated and dangerous distempers. The same purgative effect expels them. Caused by similar obstructions and derangements of the natural functions of the body, they are rapidly, and many of them surely cured by the same means. None who know the virtues of these Pills, will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Statements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known public persons.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

ASA MORGRIDGE.

As a Family Physic.

From Dr. E. W. Cartwright, New Orleans.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic we possess. They are mild, but very certain and effectual in their action on the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Edward Boyd, Baltimore.

DEAR BRO. AYER: I cannot answer you what complaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say all that we ever treat with a purgative medicine. I place great dependence on an effectual cathartic in my daily contest with disease, and believing as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 1, 1855.

DR. J. C. AYER. Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. PREDLE, Clerk of Steamer Clarion.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the Liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I sincerely rejoice that we have at length a purgative which is worthy the confidence of the profession and the people.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., 7th Feb., 1856.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and Hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them. Fraternally yours, ALONZO BALL, M. D., Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Relax, Worms.

From Dr. J. G. Green, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best aperients I have ever found. Their alterative effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhœa. Their sugar-coating makes them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit, in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 24, 1856.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Fits, etc.

From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Montreal, Canada.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. I others of our fraternity have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join me in publishing it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the progenitor of others that are worse. I believe costiveness to originate in the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.

From Mrs. E. Smart, Physician and Midwife, Boston.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills, taken in the proper time, are excellent purgatives to use in costiveness when wholly or partially suppressed, and always efficacious to cleanse the stomach and regulate the bowels. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, of the Methodist Episc. Church.

PULASKI HOUSE, Savannah Ga. Jan. 6, 1856.

HONORED SIR: I should be unmanly for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse until by the advice of your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Meshrole, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By persevering in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, Baton Rouge, La., 5 Dec., 1855.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDDELL.

Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands is dangerous in a public pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.

Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass.

"A 100 Year's to Come."

Where will be the birds to sing,
A hundred years to come?
The flowers that now in beauty spring,
A hundred years to come?
The rosy lip,
The lofty brow,
The heart that beats
So gaily now—
O! where will be love's beaming eye,
Joy's pleasant smiles and sorrow's sigh,
A hundred years to come.

Who'll press for gold this crowded street
A hundred years to come?
Who'll tread your church with willing feet
A hundred years to come?
Pale trembling age
And fiery youth,
And childhood with
Its brow of truth,
The rich and the poor, on land and sea,
Where will the mighty millions be
A hundred years to come?

We, all within our graves shall sleep
A hundred years to come!
No living soul for us will weep
A hundred years to come!
But other men
Our lands will till,
And others then
Our streets will fill;
While other birds will sing as gay,
As bright the sunshine as to-day,
A hundred years to come!

Fanny and I.

"No, John Blaiklie, I shall never marry you," I said in a tone which I meant should be particularly severe. "Let the conversation end here."

Mr. John Blaiklie laughed in my face, which, by the way, was just what he ought to have done. The consequence was that I grew angry in a moment.

"You can laugh as much as you please," I continued. "There is a certain class of people in the world that characterize themselves by laughing at their own folly. You have heard of them, haven't you?"

"Oh, yes!"

Again John Blaiklie laughed a happy good natured laugh, which did not testify very strongly for the depth of his anguish at my decision. Of course I grew more and more piqued; nothing more could have been expected of me

"You are very gentlemanly, Mr. Blaiklie," I said, in a tone which I meant should be very sarcastic.

"And I am aware of that, too, my little Bessie," he answered good-naturedly.

"Cousin Fannie admires you very much," I said significantly, for a moment forgetting my anger.

"She does?"

He grew suddenly thoughtful, and bent his large, honest, blue eyes to the floor.—Then, as if a new resolution had suddenly become fixed in his mind, he arose, saying:

"You are quite sure of this Bessie, quite sure?"

"Yes, quite sure. If you wish to try your luck in that direction, you may be certain of success."

"Thank you, Miss Bessie. I will try."

"Miss Bessie!" In all his life John Blaiklie had never addressed me in that way before. I stared at him in very surprise. He did not appear to notice me, but went towards the door, saying, a little sadly I thought, as he paused at the threshold;

"I have troubled you, not importunately, Bessie, but because, until now, I have been ignorant of your true feelings. The future shall speak for itself. Good morning!"

"Good morning!" I faltered forth, still staring at him in blank amazement. For a moment I could not really believe that he had gone, not until his footsteps grew faint in the distance, and, looking out of the window, I could but dimly see his tall figure through the thick mass of shrubbery that lay between the house and the road; that I drew a long sigh, not of relief, I am sure, as might have been expected from a young lady who had suddenly found herself ridded of an annoying lover; but a sigh which puzzled my own heart to define. I do not know what first put the thought into my head that I should not marry John Blaiklie. From my childhood, even, I had been taught to look upon him as my future husband. Through the whole neighborhood our engagement had grown to be such a settled affair, and of such long standing, that the people forgot to tease us about it, and passed by us as indifferently as though we had been a married couple for years, instead of interesting, engaging young persons. But somehow, as I said before, I cannot tell why it came to me, the idea that marrying John Blaiklie was not the best way of settling myself for life, after all; and so, working upon this, I grew to believe that I did not love him, and not loving him, what could I do but assure him that I should never be his wife? And that assurance I gave him as I have already shown.

But after he left me that morning, I felt anything but comfortable; indeed, the tears came constantly to my eyes, and though I tried as well as I could to keep them down, they conquered me at last, and sinking down in my chair I gave up and had a good hearty cry. I felt a little better after that, and tried to persuade myself in my own mind, that I had done just the best thing I could do for the insurance of John's and my own happiness. But the worst was yet to come.

The next Sabbath John attended cousin Fannie to church This was such a new and strange order of things, that it set the whole congregation to staring.—Cranston could not sleep under anything so incomprehensible, and for that Sabbath at least, good Parson Green preached to a wakeful set of hearers. But they could only conjecture as to the cause of the change, and conjecture they did without leaving but little time for any mental speculation. Some were ready to declare that cousin Fannie had supplanted me in John's affection, and that I was breaking my heart in a secret kind of a way about it; others said that the fault rested with me, and that I was looking in another and higher direction for a lover. But I had the truth, and most sacredly did I guard it. It grew to be a very plain truth before the summer was gone. As time wore away, and I saw plainly into the depths of my own heart, I knew that for a childish, girlish whim, I had put the happiness of a lifetime away from me.—But I could only wear a brave face, and keep my secret from the curious, prying gaze of those who were searching for it.

I did not even meet John, but twice during that summer were we thrown into each other's company for a sufficient length of time to exchange a dozen words. Once we met at a pic nic. From the moment that I stepped upon the grounds I knew that he was intending to speak to me.—Perhaps I felt it by the way he watched me as I went from place to place. When he came to my side it seemed that the whole party hushed their voice, heart and soul to listen to us. He smiled at this, and commenced talking in a pleasant, gossipy way about the weather, appearing not to notice my flushed face and slightly disturbed manner.

"Are you enjoying the best of health this summer?" he asked, at length, with, I thought, a faint touch of mischief in his face.

"The very best of health, Mr. Blaiklie," I answered curling my lip. "Perhaps you have been informed to the contrary, however," I continued, more in answer to his smile than aught else. "Cranston gossips, have I believe given me the credit of bearing up under a settled heart disease"

"They are inferior judges, Bessie. Do not class me among them."

"I never have," I answered dryly.

"No, I suppose not," he said, smiling again. "This is a beautiful grove!"

"Very!" I answered, feeling that it was my turn to smile now.

"Have you noticed the arrangements made for dancers?"

I shook my head.

"Come this way, then, if you please."

He offered me his arm, which I took without thinking to thank him. For a little moment I forget that the right of claiming his attention was not mine. It seemed so like old times to be walking by his side, watching his face and listening to the tones of his voice. Before I could help it, I found myself sighing long and deeply. If John noticed it he was very forbearing, for by look or word he did not reply to it; but I thought that the silence was a little too long for an ordinary one, and so I made a bold push to break it. Again I forgot myself.

"What a nice place this is!" I said.—Do you remember, John, how crazy I used to be about dancing? My father used to say if my heart would always keep as light as my feet, life would go easily with me."

"Yes, yes, I remember," he replied, I thought a little sadly. "Will you dance with me to day?"

"Oh, yes, certainly."

I was glad to have him ask me that.—Of all the persons in the world I best loved to dance with him. I had told him so a hundred times, too, so that he knew well enough what my smile meant. We danced together so many times that day, that the Cranston people—or at least all of them that attended the pin nic—grew big-eyed with wonder. Noticing how close they watched us, John said as he led me to a seat for the last time:

"We are saving our good townsfolk from a good deal of sin, Bessie; because while they are speculating about such innocent sort of people as you and I, they cannot be talking about worse ones. We are getting famous!"

I was happier that night after I returned home, than I had been for weeks before. But my happiness was of short duration, for after the supper was cleared away, and while I sat by an open window, recalling the events of this day, my mother said to me:

"Your Aunt Hastings was here to-day and she said that John Blaiklie was finishing his house on the hill. Did you hear anything about it at the pic nic?

"No," I said scarcely above a whisper.

"And she said if Fannie was going to marry John, she kept it dreadful sly; for besides piecing up a few squares of patchwork she had not made the first step towards getting ready. What do you think about it?"

"I think she will be ready as soon as the house is," I answered, turning my face towards the window, that she might not notice the expression of my features.

"Well, take it altogether, Bessie, it's a queer piece of business."

I did not answer, only let my forehead droop low upon the window seat. Seeing this mother came up to me, and rested her hand upon my head, and said:

"Poor child?"

How from my heart I blessed her for her quiet sympathy. The next two weeks that followed were sad and tedious ones to me.

Every way that I turned news of John Blaiklie's approaching marriage with cousin Fannie was poured into my ears; and even Fannie herself, who had always been very prudent about it, seemed pleased in telling me of the arrangements that was going on up at John's new house—of this piece of furniture he had selected, of the carpets which had been left to her judgment exclusively and of the beautifully toned seraphine that John's uncle had presented him for the little parlor.

"You will be very happy," I said one day, in answer to all this.

Fannie looked up suddenly into my face, I thought a quizzical expression drifted across her features.

"How pale you look, Bessie," she said, "what is the matter with you?"

"Nothing, I am sure," I answered with some little show of spirit.

"I am glad of it; but, indeed, you do look downright ill. Won't you go up to the new house with me to night—perhaps that will make you feel better. I believe you keep to closely in the house. But you need not shake your head, you will go. John will be there, and we will have a pleasant time of it."

And I went in spite of myself, a hough every step towards the house that was once to have been mine, was like very torture to me. Oh, what a pleasant time it was and how simply and tastefully furnished, from the cunning, neatly grained kitchen to the well carpeted parlors!—Everything was just as I had planned it a hundred times, in a laughing, jocose way to John. Had he indeed remembered it all on purpose to torture me now? It seemed so.

"Do you like the house, Bessie?" he asked, as if divining my very thoughts.

"Very much, indeed," I answered.—Everything is neat and tasteful. Is it too early to wish you joy?" I asked, feeling that he was expecting me to say something.

"No, not too early, but it may be too late."

I looked up into his face; it's expression puzzled me.

"I do not understand you clearly," I said. "But never mind," I added, noticing that Fannie had gone from the room, I have a wretched headache to night, and hardly know what I am saying."

Headache! when all the time it seemed as if my heart was breaking!

"Where is Fannie?" I asked a moment after, seeing that she did not return.

"Gone home!" he answered in the coolest tone imaginable.

"What and left me here!"

"Yes, and left you here!" Are you frightened?"

"Not much—my poor head—I will go."

"Wait a moment, if you please," he said detaining me. "I have something to say to you."

Something to say to me! Did he know that every kind word that he spoke to me pierced my heart like a barbed arrow?

"This house is ours, if you wish it.—Bessie," he began in a slightly embarrassed way. "I am afraid you made a hard decision in casting me off forever. It seems to me that I know your heart better than you know it yourself."

I looked up into his face. It seemed to me that I was dreaming. I told him so between my sobs and tears.

"God forbid!" he said, taking both my hands in his. "But the past summer has been a wretched reality of doubt and despair to me. Tell me, Bessie, is it ended here?"

I could not answer him in words, only go closer to his side, and nestle my hands fondly in his.

"This shall be your home then, Bessie," he said, kissing me. "But remember, my dear, I cannot allow my house to go without an encumbrance, as the newspapers say. Does that idea please you?"

"O yes!" I answered. And John believed me. And why shouldn't he?

Things worth Remembering.

1. If you hitch horses to a worm fence, always select an inside corner, because your horses will tangle their halters in the projecting rails of an outside corner.

2. There, as well as elsewhere, if you tie with a loop knot, do not consider your horses tied unless the end of the halter is put through the loop.

3. Never rest a scoop shovel against a fanning mill.

4. Do not prop a barn door open with a pitchfork, for a gust of wind may break door and fork.

5. Plan your garden so that it may be cultivated by a horse. Much labor may be thereby saved, and the culture will be more thorough.

6th. When plowing in warm weather if you desire to rest your team, stop on an eminence, if such there is, and always with your horses' head to the breeze.—Five minutes in a favorable position, is better than ten in an unfavorable one.

7. Label all packages of seed or medicine. A lady last spring offered me a package of what she said was choice lettuce seed; when I reached home I found that it contained melon seed.

8. A variety of farm product fill up the season, occupies the time of permanent help to advantage, and on the principle of "having two strings to one's bow," and of "not having too many eggs in one basket" is more sure.

9 One of the greatest and most common defects in road repairing is a failure to even the surface. A turnpike left in hillocks is long a rough road to travel, and the little basins hold water, consequently they become mud holes.

10. Industry, carefulness and skill are the elements of success. More happiness is found associated with active habits than ever was, or ever will be found in connection with indolence.

PETER HATHERWAY.

P. S.—I wish that Supervisors everywhere—at least where I travel—would remember the 9th item.

A Nigger Story.

Two darkies had bought a mess of pork in partnership, but Sam having no place to put his portion in consented to intrust the whole to Julius' keeping.—The next morning they met, when Sam says:

"Good mornin" Julius, anything happen strange or mysterious down in your vicinity, lately?"

"Yaas, Sam, most a strange thing happened at my house las' night. A mystery—all a mystery to me."

"Ah, Julius, what was dat."

"Well, Sam, I tole you now. Dis mornin' I went down cellar to get a piece of hog for dis darkey's breakfast, and I put my hand down in the brine an' felt all around, but no pork dare—all gone.—Couldn't tell what bewent with it; so I turned up the barrel, an' Sam, true as preachin de rat had eat a hole clear froo the bottom of de barrel and dragged the pork all out!"

Sam was petrified with astonishment, but presently recovering himself, he said:

"Why didn't the brine run out ob de same hole."

"Ah, Sam, dat's de mystery—dat's de mystery."

The most astonishing instance of a man's regard for his word was recently given by a man who killed his wife, whom he did not like. When asked "why he didn't go off and leave her instead of killing her," he replied, jocosly, that "he promised on the wedding day to live with her until death should part them, and he wasn't the man to break his word."

A Spread Eagle Toast.

Our Nation: Begotton amidst the storms of the sixteenth century, its infantile movements were dim and indistinctly seen on the may Flower, on the rock of Plymouth, at Jamestown, on the plains of Monongahela, and on the heights of Abraham; the "capricious squalls" of its infancy was heard in the tea party of Boston, in Faneuil Hall, on the plains of Concord, Lexington and Bunker Hill; in his boyhood, he ran barefooted and bareheaded over the fields of Saratoga, Trenton, Princeton, Monmouth and Yorktown, whipping his mother and turning her out of doors; in his youth he strode over the prairies of the boundless West, and called them his own, paid tribute to the despots of Barbary in powder and ball, spit in his father's face from behind cotton bales at New Orleans, whipped the mistress of the ocean, revelled in the halls of Montezuma, straddled the Rocky Mountains, and with one foot upon golden sand and the other upon codfish and lumber, defied the world; in his manhood, clothed in purple and fine linen, he rides over a continent in cushioned cars, rides over the ocean in palace steamers, sends his thought on wings of lightning to the world around, thunders at the door of the Celestial Empire and at the portals of distant Japan, slaps his poor decrepit father in the face, and tells him to be careful how he peeks into any of his pickaroons, and threatens to make a sheep pasture of all the land that joins him. What he will do in old age, God only knows. May he live ten thousand years, "and his shadow never be less."

Doubtful Compliment.

One of the particularly pleasant stories told by Mr. Gough of his experiences in England, is that of his once being nearly floored with an 'H,' though it was not so much the misplaced H that hit him, as that which accompanied it. He was about to deliver an address to a large audience on the theme of Temperance, and the chairman, a rotund Englishman, undertook to introduce him. Happening to recollect the miracle of Samson getting water from the jaw bone with which he had slain the Philistines, and thinking to turn it to account, he said:—

'Ladies and gentlemen, I have the honor to introduce to you the distinguished lecturer, Mr. John B. Gough, who will address us on the subject of temperance. You know that temperance is thought to be rather a dry subject; but to-night as we listen to our friend the horator from hover the hocean, we may 'ope to 'ave the miracle of Samson repeated, and to be refreshed with water from the jawbone of a hass!'

☞ Your petty quarrels with your offending neighbors will never bring about any favorable or valuable results. Quarrelling never does any good; but a downright, vigorous contest is sometimes productive of beneficial consequences. Old Tom Benton once said, in the Senate of the United States, when Jeff. Davis, and Butler, of South Carolina, were trying to fasten a quarrel upon him; "Mr. President, sir—I never quarrel, sir. But, sir, I sometimes fight, sir. And whenever I do fight, sir, a funeral follows, sir!" The old war horse was immediately let alone, and was no more molested by his quarrelsome fellow-senators. Perhaps you might take a valuable hint from that distinguished statesman.

A Vicksburg letter to the Cincinnati Commercial says:

"Probably the best sharpshooter in the army is Lieutenant Foster, of the Twenty Third Indiana, attached to General Stephenson's brigade, of Logan's division. When the army took up its present position, Foster obtained permission to sharp-shoot on his own hook. He immediately dug a hole in the earth, within very short range of the rebel works, and there he has passed most of the time since. He is a dead shot, and never fails to 'drop' the unfortunate rebel who shows himself within eight hundred yards of him. Every morning before daylight Foster goes to his little fort, which is known as Coon-skin Hole, from the nature of the material of which his shooting cap is composed. He has killed more rebels since the 19th ult. than any company of sharpshooters in the army."

'I say, Sambo, were you ever intoxicated?' 'No, Julius, nebber; was you?' Well, I was, Sambo.' 'Didn't it make you feel good, Julius?' 'Yah; but golly! next morning I thought my head was a wood shed, and all de niggers in Christendom were splitting wood in it.'

Amendments to the Constitution of the U. States.

ARTICLE IV.

The right of the people to secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue, but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized.

ARTICLE V.

No person shall be held to answer for a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases arising in the land or naval forces, or in the militia when in actual service in time of war or public danger; nor shall any person be subject for the same offence, to be twice put in jeopardy of life or limb; nor shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself, nor be deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process of law; nor shall private property be taken for public use, without just compensation.

ARTICLE VI.

In all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, by an impartial jury of the state and district wherein the crime shall have been committed, which district shall have been previously ascertained by law, and to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation; to be confronted with the witnesses against him; to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor, and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense.

ARTICLE VII.

In suits at common law, where the value in controversy shall exceed twenty dollars, the right of trial by jury shall be preserved, and no fact tried by a jury, shall be otherwise re-examined in any Court of the United States, than according to the rules of common law.

ARTICLE VIII.

Excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishments inflicted.

ARTICLE IX

The enumeration in the Constitution of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people.

ARTICLE X.

The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people.

ARTICLE XI.

The judicial power of the United States shall not be construed to extend to any suit in law or equity, commenced or prosecuted against one of the United States by citizens of another State, or by citizens or subjects of any foreign State.

ARTICLE XII.

The Electors shall meet in their respective States and vote, by ballot, for President and Vice President, one of whom, at least, shall not be an inhabitant of the same State with themselves; they shall name in their ballots the person voted for as President, and in distinct ballots the person voted for as Vice President, and they shall make distinct lists of all persons voted for as President, and of all persons voted for as Vice President, and of the number of votes for each, which lists they shall sign and certify, and transmit, sealed, to the seat of the Government of the United States, directed to the President of the Senate; the President of the Senate shall, in the presence of the Senate and House of Representatives, open all the certificates, and the votes shall then be counted; the person having the greatest number of votes for President, shall be President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of Electors appointed, and if no person have such a majority, then from the persons having the highest numbers not exceeding three, on the list of those voted for as President, the House of Representatives shall choose immediately, by ballot, the President; but in choosing the President, the votes shall be taken by States, the representation from each State having one vote; a quorum for this purpose shell consist of a member or members from two-thirds of the States, and a majority of all the States shall be necessary to a choice. And if the House of Representatives shall not choose a President whenever the right of choice shall devolve upon them, before the fourth day of March next following, then the Vice President shall act as President, as in the case of the death or other Constitutional disability of the President. The person having the greatest number of votes as Vice President, shall be the Vice President, if such number be a majority of the whole number of Electors appointed; and if no person have a majority, then from the two highest numbers on the list, the Senate shall choose the Vice President; a quorum for the purpose shall consist of two thirds of the whole number of Senators; and a majority of the whole number shall be necessary to a choice. But no person constitutionally ineligible to the office of President shall be eligible to that of Vice President of the United States.

ARTICLE XIII.

If any citizen of the United States shall accept, claim, receive, or retain any title of nobility or honor, or shall, without the consent of Congress, accept and retain any present, pension, office or emolument of any kind whatever, from any Emperor, King, Prince, or foreign power, such person shall cease to be a citizen of the United States, and shall be incapable of holding any office of trust or profit under them, or either of them.

[NOTE.—The 11th article of the amendments to the Constitution, was proposed at the second session of the third Congress; the 12th article, at the first session of the eighth Congress; and the 13th article, at the second session of the eleventh Congress.]

A Queer Speech.

In the Congressional Globe of the third session of the Thirty-fourth Congress, page 25, will be found a speech delivered in the United States Senate by the Hon. Benjamin F. Wade, of Ohio.

"But Southern gentlemen stand here, and in almost all their speeches speak of the dissolution of the Union as an element of every argument, as though it were a peculiar condescension on their part that they permitted the Union to stand at all. If they do not feel interested in upholding this Union—if it really trenches on their rights—if it endangers their institutions to such an extent that they cannot feel secure under it—if their interests are violently assailed by means of this Union—I am not one of those who would ask them to continue in such a Union. It would be doing violence to the platform of the party to which I belong. We have adopted the old Declaration of Independence as the basis of our political movement, which declares that any people, when their Government ceases to protect their rights, when it is so subverted from the true purposes of government as to oppress them, have the right to recur to fundamental principles, and if need be, to destroy the Government under which they live, and to erect on its ruins another, more conducive to their welfare. I hold that they have this right. I will not blame any people for exercising it, whenever they think the contingency has come.

"I certainly shall be the advocate of that same doctrine whenever I find that the principles of this Government have become so oppressive to the section to which I belong that a free people ought no longer to endure it. You will not then find me backward in being the advocate of disunion; but that contingency never having come, I have never yet opened my mouth in opposition to the Union. I have never entertained a thought disloyal to this Union. But I now say, for Heaven's sake act and not talk. I am tired of this eternal din of "dissolution of the Union," which is brought up on all occasions, and thrust into our faces, as though we of the North had some peculiar reasons for maintaining the Union that the Southern States have not. I hope the Union will continue forever. I see nothing at present which I think should dissolve it; but if the gentlemen see it, I say again that they have the same interest in maintaining this Union, in my judgment, that we of the North have. If they think they have not, be it so. You cannot forcibly hold men in this Union; for the attempt to do so, it seems to me, would subvert the first principles of the Government under which we live."

A Day of Thanksgiving.

PROCLAMATION BY THE PRESIDENT.

It has pleased Almighty God to hearken to the supplications and prayers of an afflicted people, and to vouchsafe to the army and the navy of the United States on the land and on the sea, so signal and so effective successes as to furnish reasonable grounds for augmented confidence that the Union of these States will be maintained, their Constitution preserved, and their peace and prosperity permanently preserved; but these victories have been accorded not without sacrifice of life, limb and liberty, incurred by brave, patriotic and loyal citizens. Domestic affliction in every part of the country follows in the train of these fearful bereavements. It is meet and right to recognize and confess the presence of the Almighty Father and the power of His hand equally in these triumphs and these sorrows.

Now, therefore, be it known that I do set apart Thursday, the sixth day of August next to be observed as a day of National Thanksgiving, praise and prayer, and I invite the people of the United States to assemble on that occasion in their customary places of worship, and in the form approved by their own conscience, render the homage due to the Divine Majesty for the wonderful things He has done in the Nation's behalf, and invoke the influence of His Holy Spirit, to subdue the anger which has produced and so long sustained a needless and cruel rebellion; to change the hearts of the insurgents; to guide the counsels of the Government with wisdom adequate to so great a National emergency, and to visit with tender care, and consolation throughout the length and breadth of our land, all those who, through the vicissitudes of marches, voyages, battles and sieges, have been brought to suffer in mind, body, or estate, and finally to lead the whole nation through paths of repentance and submission to the Divine will, back to the perfect enjoyment of union and fraternal peace.

The Tecumseh Herald,

TECUMSEH, MICH., JULY 23, 1863.

Charleston.

The rebels, from the tone of their journals, must be shaking in their boots.—The Charleston Mercury, received in Richmond on the 16th inst., has the following on the situation of affairs around that city:

"It appears to us that it is useless to attempt to disguise from ourselves the situation. By whose faults we got into it, it is vain now to inquire, and the Federals having obtained possession of the South half of Morris Island, there is but one way to save the city of Charleston, and that is the speedy and unflinching use of the bayonet. If the fight on Morris Island is to be a fight by engineering and cannon merely, the advantage is with the enemy. With their iron clads on the water, and their men in occupation of the land, it is likely to be merely a question of time. The fall of Fort Wagner will end in the fall of Charleston. Fort Sumter, like Wagner, will then be assailed by both land and sea, and the fall of Wagner will be that of Sumter. Gen. Gilmore, commander of the department, is the man who reduced Fort Pulaski. Charleston must be saved as Richmond was. For three days our forces stormed the successive batteries of the enemy and saved Richmond. A greater part of the soldiers who achieved these triumphs by the bayonet had never before been in a charge. The Yankees have as yet few or no formidable works. They have but a few thousand troops, and if our soldiers and officers here are not equal to the kind of fighting fought by the army of Virginia, and tried by the Yankees against such strong works as Fort Wagner and Secessionville, then Charleston falls. This, it appears to us, is the only course of safety, and we may add too for the economy of lives. Other means may protract the fighting for days and weeks and postpone the termination of the struggle. No other means in our opinion will save the city. We believe it can easily be saved with promptness and energy and dash. It is too late for engineering. Hesitation and delay are fatal."

The Mobile Advertiser says:

The Confederacy has seen darker days and emerged from them. It is not dark enough to justify the prudent of those who are ready to submit and anxious for peace and the security of their property on the basis of submission, in showing their hands as yet. There have been some signs of this white feather fluttering during the few past gloomy days. Let us warn such that it is base to feel, and dangerous to be premature in the utterance of such sentiments. The land has made too many sacrifices for its freedom to falter at the last hour. The timid and faithless must not be allowed to fetter the footsteps of the revolution. It must roll on to triumph, although its wheels have to roll over them and their fortunes. Vicksburg has fallen with the least possible harm to us. If it had held out only twenty-four hours longer, Johnston's army would have, without any doubt, been cut to pieces. Johnston was on the Big Black, and on Saturday his army bivouacked with the orders to move on Grant's entrenchments at 2 o'clock in the morning. Before the hour arrived, news of Pemberton's capitulation was received. From what has been learned of Grant's position, it is now known that if Johnston's force had been doubled and trebled it could never have got through the works of Gen. Grant. The country for miles was defended by fallen timber. Every gorge and ravine was a fortified work, bristling with cannon, and converted into a slaughter-pen. We are confidently informed that it took some of our paroled officers at Vicksburg fifteen hours to ride 15 miles through felled timber and around excavations and embankments made by the enemy.

☞ A newspaper correspondent captured by the rebel guerillas near Frederick last week, was rescued by two other quill drivers who gallantly charged upon the guerillas, and all three rode away full of triumph, exulting over some rich "items."

NEW YORK, July 18.—The troops from the Forts and Navy Yard have been returned to their original localities. Three regiments of Militia are expected to arrive this evening

☞ A three year old Spanish Merino buck, belonging to M. Van Gleson, of Dallas, Clinton county, has sheared 17 pounds of wool of one year's growth.

☞ 12,000 wounded have thus far been removed from Gettysburg. They were sent mostly to the eastern cities.

EDITOR HERALD,

In receiving an occasional number of your excellent paper, I am reminded that you may be pleased to hear from the 3d Cavalry. The single copy I received is in eager demand with the boys, many to see who have got married or died, what is in the items, and last, but not least, the advertisements, as in them appear many familiar names.

You have learned ere this, that we left Jackson, Tenn., about four weeks since, for this place, where we are now encamped. That section of the country has been abandoned, as there is no longer any military necessity for holding it.—We are much nearer Memphis and Vicksburg.

The country is held mainly by cavalry. Grant has use for the Infantry in the trenches around Vicksburg. The cavalry are men who know no fear; armed as they are with Colt's Carbine and revolver, each one feels a host, of himself; in skirmishing or driving pickets, he can choose his position, and feel that he is good for ten shots, and before they are expended, the enemy prefer to get out of the way, if he is able to do so. A man, with the real dash and coolness of a cavalry officer, can accomplish wonders, as is shown by Grierson who made the greatest raid on record. He started from this place, and kept on, until he reached the Gulf and rested in New Orleans. He exercised, however, no little strategy; he detached Col. Hatch, who now commands our brigade, and with 400 men fought his way back to camp, thereby making a diverse in favor of Grierson, leading the enemy from his track and allowing him to proceed on his excursion.

Col. Mizner, commanding the cavalry division, made an extensive raid of five days, in the interior of Mississippi, returning a few days since, and damaged the rebels by destroying a large quantity of subsistance, and bringing into camp a large number of negroes who will be converted into good soldiers.

The work of organizing, drilling, and arming negroes has been going on here, in earnest, for some time. The deep rooted prejudice, against the theory, is fast disappearing, by its being put in practice by the strong arm of the government, and by taking a common sense view of the matter. Adjutant General Thomas, on his trip through the western army, told the troops of this division, not from the stump, but a cotton bale, the policy of the Government in regard to arming the negroes,—and it is now being enforced with energy. A few dissenting officers sent in their resignations, which were not accepted, but they were dishonorably discharged from the service. No more officers have attempted to resign for the reason named.

The 4th was celebrated by firing a salute from all the batteries, and in receiving the glorious news that—"Vicksburg is ours."

Letter from the Mich. 4th.

We take the following extract, from a letter, written by Rev. George Duffield, to his brother in Detroit—while visiting the battle field at Gettysburg:

"One incident occurred while I was visiting those men which I have left for a seperate paragraph. Hallo! 4th Michigan, said Sergeant Smith, how are you? And sure enough there was the old 4th in the person of Hugh Crawford, Co. D. When he learned that I was from Adrian and bore the same name as his old Lieut. Colonel, his joy seemed to be as great as my own. While fighting on the right of Sugar Loaf Hill he was wounded in the head and over the right eye, but not so much so but that he was still able to bear his tall form erect and to make good time in walking. Of course he talked about Col. Woodbury and Malvern Hill, and about the old 4th in the late battle. His own company D went in with 34 and came out with 5. Some one he said had told him that the entire regiment now numbered only forty eight officers and all. He was in haste to get to the depot, but he did not get away until he had the very best of what I had still remaining, and if "4th Michigan's" pockets were not heavier when he left than when he met us, it must be ascribed to the fact that paper is not so heavy as gold."

☞ There were three members of the 24th Mich. reg. in battery B, 4th U. S. Artillery, at the time the Government was anxious to fill up the Artillery companies after the first battle of Fredericksburg. They were Adolphus Shepherd, Wm Irving and R. Morris. They were with their battery in the great battle of Gettysburg. Letters received from the two latter since the battle give the information that Shepherd was killed whilst gallantly fighting with his gun. In his last moments he asked that his Bible might be sent home to his sister. It will be recollected that his brother lost a leg in the first battle of Bull Run. Mrs. Shepherd's only remaining son now 15 years of age, is on one of the Mississippi gunboats.—Ad. & Trib.

From the 18th Reg.

NASHVILLE, Tenn, July 14th.

EDITOR HERALD:

Were it not that I knew the deep interest your readers have in this regiment, I would not venture to claim their attention to things so tome as am about to write, especially, when contrasted with the mighty deeds that our armies have just been performing, and which they are now executing.

You have heard of the advance of Rosecrans, and how that the forces of Bragg waste away before him like the snow under the vernal rain and sunshine. Desertions are quite frequent in his army and hundreds of prisoners are brought here nearly every day.

Our regiment sends guards for the trains which take the prisoners from here to Louisville. I was one of 48 detailed to take 310 prisoners through on the 3rd inst. These were quite a robust set of men and all of us agreed that they were as good material as our own regiment, and would be a fine looking set of soldiers if they had only been dressed, washed and combed.

They seem to have had plenty of something to eat and bragged much, not only of their own good health, but of the health of the confederate army in general, as contrasted with ours. When some one doubted this one of the prisoners replied, "you do not hear our men cough as yours do." They were in fine spirits, said that they had been treated well by our boys and would not fail to reciprocate the kindness if any of our boys ever fell into their hands.

Marching through Nashville some in clear tones struck up that very pretty tune and song "The bonny blue flag that bears a single star," and no one interrupted this overflow of what they no doubt considered patriotism. We could afford to be magnanimous. Insolence to the captive is scarcely less disgusting in the eyes of an honorable man, than coward ice in the presence of an armed foe. In our army you will sometimes find one who would like to mock those who thus are in their power, but such are the sentiments of the great body of the soldiers that scarcely dare those who would insult, say a word.

We got to Louisville all right, and failed to meet the ubiquitous John Morgan whom the prisoners said they expected would halt us before we got through, and make their guards prisoners. As we shall see they were not far wrong in their calculations as to his whereabouts, though it then seemed ridiculous to us.

We went to the Soldier's Home, established by the Sanitary Commission, for the benefit of soldier's passing through Louisville, or stoping there without their regiment. It is a most useful Institution and finely conducted. That night, for the first time since we went into camp, to the most of us, we put off our daily clothes and stretched ourselves on hard straw beds it is true, but still on beds and between clean, white sheets

Next day was the 4th, and as there was no transportation for us, we stayed over and the guard who was there when we came, though it started off on the cars for Nashville, the train soon put back, a rumor of Morgan being on the road with a large force having been circulated. The city was very quiet, and though our boys had full liberties in the city, and though liquors of all kinds could be had none was seen drunk and few seemed to have imbibed at all.

The warm reception that we had at New Albany was in strong contrast with the coldness and even disdain with which the soldier is met every where in Kentucky. It is evident to me that Kentuckians look upon both the administration of Lincoln and Davis as evils; some preferring the one and others the other, while many are quite puzzled which to consider the lesser evil. We started back to Louisville about noon and found the city all alive with military preperations. All business was suspended and every able bodied man was joined to some company. That night one half of us was called out to patrol the city, and the next morning we started for Nashville, which we reached about 6 o'clock, to the great joy of our comrads who had heard every sort of rumor about us.

D. BOYD.

☞ A notorious thief, known as Hank Coar, entered the pasture of Henry Moon, of DeWitt Clinton County, on the 17th ult., and took a valuable horse. A short distance south of Marshall he stole a buggy and harness. Bills were posted offering a reward for his detection, and Under Sheriff Brunson sent in search. After a long chase, he tracked the rascal to LaGrange Indiana, and arrested him, also securing the horse, which had been exchanged for another.

PHILADELPHIA, July 19.—Three companies of the 7th Michigan Cavalry encountered a large body of Stuart's rebel cavalry on the Alexandria Railroad on Saturday. A desperate fight ensued.—Our loss was 20. The rebels were routed.

The 30 days' regiments for the emmergency in Penn. are returning home.

The New York Riot.

A messenger brought information to the Seventh regiment Armory, at 6 o'clock on Wednesday evening, that the mob was in great strength in the First avenue, between Eighteenth and Nineteenth streets, apparently organizing, preparatory to moving upon a maurading expedition. Col. Winslow, of the fifth regiment, (Duryeau Zouaves,) then in command of the Armory, immediately ordered a detachment of volunteers under arms, consisting of three companies, comprising an aggregate of one hundred and fifty men, and a battery of two howitzers. Placing himself at the head of this force, and taking with him Major Robinson and Col. Jardine, of the 10th regiment (Hawkins Zouaves)—the latter in command of the battery—Col. Winslow led his command at the double quick to the scene of the disturbance. Passing down Nineteenth street, the howitzers were brought into position, promptly unlimbered, and trained up and down 1st Avenue, while the infantry formed into line to support them. The locality abounds in tenement houses, where the class of persons live of which the mob is composed, and into these buildings the mass of the rioters took refuge on the appearance of the soldiers. From the roof and windows of every house the mob at once opened an attack, delivering a brisk and persistant fire upon the military of musketry and pistols, as well as a volley of bricks and other missiles. To this assault the soldiers replied, and the howitzers raked the avenue up and down with canister, of which ten rounds were discharged. It is estimated that this fire killed as many as thirty persons, and the effect was a partial dispersion of the rioters, although some of the more bold among them lurked behind the corners of the buildings, whence they would sally out, discharge their guns, and again go to cover.

The infantry force, meanwhile, although uniformed, and just enrolled for the emergency, stood gallantly up to the work, loading with rapidity and firing with precision at the rioters wherever they showed themselves, at windows, or upon roof, or at the street corners. The mob in this instance, however, clearly had the small force of soldiers at an advantage. Col. Winslow had not men enough to make a charge upon the buildings, and as many as ten of his little command, after twenty minutes' fighting, had already fallen—several being killed outright. He reluctantly, therefore, ordered a retreat, which was conducted with veteran coolness, notwithstanding the fact that the soldiers marched through Nineteenth street they were followed for some distance by the howling mob, who were left masters of the field. Unfortunately Col. Winslow found it impossible to bring away all the killed, and a few of the bodies were left in the hands of the frenzied mob. Among the dead were a Captain and Lieutenant, both of whom had served with the Duryeau Zouaves, and Col. Jardin was wounded in the thigh He was taken to the house of a surgeon in Nineteenth street, whose door it was necessary to force, and there left to be taken care of.

The mob in this instance seemed to be remarkably well organized, firing at the word of command.

About 11 o'clock the riot in Nineteenth street and first avenue was renewed.—Capt. Putnam and Capt. Shelby, of the United States army, with two field pieces and 150 men, repaired to the scene.—They were assaulted with stones and brickbats from the tops of houses and from windows. They fired upon the mob and cleared the streets. The brickbats came so thick from the houses that it became necessary to give the order to turn the fire on the buildings. Five rounds of grapeshot were fired with destructive effect. It is impossible at this late hour to give the number killed. The troops remained on the ground until 12 o'clock, at which time perfect quiet reigned in the neighborhood.

THE LAST FIGHT BETWEEN THE MOB AND THE MILITARY.

At 5 Thursday evening, intelligence was sent to Police Headquarters that the mob, between First and Second avenues, in the neighborhood of Twenty-ninth street, had renewed their operations in great force, and that they were robbing and plundering all the stores in that vicinity.

A military force was speedily sent to the spot, but when they arrived there they found the rioters were too strong for them, and after contesting the field for half an hour, they were ordered to withdraw. A Sergeant who had command of a portion of the military force was shot, and afterwards most brutally beaten to death. His body lay in the street for three hours; the military and police were powerless to suppress the mob, from the fact that almost every house between First and Second avenues, in the vicinity of Twenty-second and Twenty-third streets, was filled by assassins, and from all the windows and housetops shots, stones and brickbats were thrown with great rapidity.

The military force were compelled to withdraw until reinforced. At about 9 o'clock Capt. Putnam, of the U. S. Army, aided by Lieut. Chase and Sergt. Greenman, with a force of regulars of about 700 men, repaired to the scene. They drove the rioters from their hiding-places, took the body of the Sergeant away, and soon after the scene of disturbance was transferred to Thirty-first street and Second avenue.

Here the battle was terrible. The insurgents had gained the windows and housetops of nearly all the buildings in that vicinity. For a time they held control of the neighborhood. Muskets and pistols were fired by the mob upon the military and citizens in the streets. Quite a number were injured; and two quiet and unoffending citizens are known to have been killed by the rioters. Capt. Putnam in charge of the military, when all hope of stopping the proceedings in any other way was gone, ordered his men to sweep the streets and then turn their fire on the houses occupied by the rioters.—The order was promptly obeyed, and eleven persons, all of whom were ring leaders of the rioters, were shot dead.—The stones and brickbats thew flew thicker and faster among the soldiers.

The order was given to turn their fire upon the buildings. A volley was fired, and the returning echo brought shots from guns and pistols discharged from all parts of the adjoining houses. All kinds of missiles were thrown and many soldiers were seriously injured thereby. An order then came to take all rioters in and upon the buildings. The promptness with which this was obeyed did great credit to the soldiers.

The tenement houses, which were filled with rioters, were taken by storm. The resistance, of course, was desperate, and the mob fought against the military for half an hour, with a fury and desperation worthy of a better cause. At the end of that time the mob were overpowered and dispersed. Thirty-five of them were taken prisoners, and at least half as many more were killed while resisting the officers.

Officers Putnam, Chase and Greenman acted with the greatest coolness and decision throughout the whole affair, and to them, and the brave soldiers under them, the credit is due of suppressing one of the most serious and vindictive mobs which have prowled through our city for the last four days.

Capture of Morgan's Band.

CLEVELAND, July 20.—Morgan unsuccessfully attempted to cross the Ohio river near Cooleyville. He was prevented by the gunboats. One hundred and fifty-eight were killed and wounded. One thousand were taken prisoners with all their artillery. Among the prisoners are Col. Ward and Col. Dick Morgan, a brother of John. The band was scattered among the hills. We are confident of capturing the rest to-day.

CINCINNATI, July 21—10 A. M.—The following is just received at Gen. Burnside's headquarters:

LIEUT. COL. RICHMOND:—We chased John Morgan and his command over fifty miles to-day. After heavy skirmishing for six or seven miles, between the 45th Ohio, of Col. Wolford's brigade, which was in advance of the enemy. We succeeded in bringing the enemy to a stand about 3 o'clock this P. M., when a fight ensued, which lasted an hour, when the rebels fled, taking advantage of every high bluff. I sent a flag of truce demanding immediate and unconditional surrender of Morgan and his command.—The flag was received by Col. Colman and other officers, who came down and asked a personal interview. They asked an hour for consultation. I granted 40 minutes, in which time the command excepting Morgan, who deserted his command, trking with him small squad, surrendered. It was my understanding that Morgan himself had surrendered, and found it was the understanding of Morgan's officers and men. The number of killed and wounded is inconsiderable.—The number of prisoners is between 1,000 and 1,500, including a large number of Colonels, Majors and line officers. I captured between 600 and 700 prisoners yesterday, I think I will capture Morgan himself to-morrow.

SHACKLEFORD, Brig. Gen.

FORTRESS MONROE, July 21.—The U. States gunboat Circassian, Capt. Eaton, has just arrived. She reports that she left Charleston last Friday afternoon. A battle was commenced on Friday by both the land and naval forces, and was progressing when the Circassian left.—No particulars. The Monitors in the James River went back to City Point on Thursday, where they now lay with the rest of the fleet. The rebel pickets are within three miles of Portsmouth.

The Fort Darling expedition has been abandoned.

The Richmond Dispatch confirms the statement that a rebel steamer was burnt by our shells near Morris Island. Her name was Gabriel Mignault.

The Post's Washington special says:—"Our cavalry have captured a large number of stragglers from Lee's retreating army in the last two days."

Laws of Newspapers.

The Courts have settled the following points

1. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscription.
2. If subscribers order the discontinuance of their paper, the publisher may continue to send them till all that is due be paid.
3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their paper from the office to which they are directed, they are held responsible till they have settled their bill and ordered their papers discontinued.
4. If subscribers move to other places, without informing the publisher, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.
5. Refusing to take a paper from the office, or removing and leaving it uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.
6. A postmaster neglecting to inform the publisher when a paper is not taken from the office makes himself liable for the subscription price.

☞ We had a delightful rain last Monday. It has started vegetation with a more rapid growth than "Jonas' Gourd."

☞ A Western Editor was lately shot in an affray. Luckily the ball came against a bundle of unpaid accounts in his pocket. Gunpowder could not get through that

☞ Last Saturday was a gaily day in Tecumseh. The streets were a perfect jam of teams and people. Farmers we shou'd judge were about through with the cutting of wool, grass and wheat, for this year.

☞ Capt. NASH of Company F 29th Iowa Regiment, and Lieutenant MERRICK, of Company C 1st Michigan Regiment, are now in town visiting their old friends and relatives. The Capt. is sick—and the Lieut. was wounded at Gettysburg.

☞ The following are the names of those wounded, in Company G, 4th Regiment, Michigan Infantry, from this place. There were none killed as far as reported:

"Serg't. Ambrose Curtiss, in foot, slight Corp. Moses Morgan, in thigh; Corp. W. C Plummer, in thigh; Privates John H Mahay in foot, Erastus Waters shot through thigh. Missing—Corp. Martin V. Pennock Privates Norman A Eastlick, Wm. W. Hendershot, Edwin M. Wheelon, Andrew Owen, Jas. H. Winn Accident.

Improvement.

we understand a resolution, by the Board of Council, of Tecumseh, was passed that a new side-walk be laid from the corner of Chicago Street to the Depot, on Railroad Street—the west side. A very sensible resolution, and will probably save some broken legs.

Wedding.

There is to be a wedding up town soon—we dare not tell you when—but the lady confided the secret to R. C. MOORE, where she purchased a splendid bridal dress.—we won't promise but Mr. Moore will tell you who the fortunate lady was, if you but call at his store and examine his beautiful dress goods. 1w.

Terms of the Herald.

That there may be no mistake or hard feelings engendered hereafter, between ourself and patrons, we would, at this time remind them that the terms of the Herald, are $1,50 in advance, $1,75 within three months, $2 00 after six months. Those wishing to avail themselves of the dollar and a half, can do so now, otherwise we shall have to exact the rates as advertised. Those living distant from the office can remit by mail.

Order No. 3.

Generals Mead and Grant have ordered A. HOOD & Co. to put an excellent quality of calico down to one shilling per yard, and dress goods, if they cannot sell them, to give them away. Now there is a chance for you. They are men that obey the Mercantile law, and who knows but by calling there you may take away a nice dress pattern. Try it.

They have also ordered that they have the best and cheapest Ready Made Clothing this side of the great riotous city—New York.

We should be pleased to hear a report from Capt. STEVENS, of this company, who is now in town on sick furlough.

Adrian Items.

From the Adrian Watchtower—Shubael Coy, a drover, well known in this county, was found dead in his bed with his wife and child also dead, at their residence in Medina, Ohio, on the morning of July 3d. They had been murdered, doubtless, by robbers, A reward of $3,000 is offered for the perpetrators.

Constable Chappell arrested, July 17, a young man named Smith, on board the Jackson cars just before they left the station here, for having been engaged in a fight near the depot. Smith when arrested had in his possession a satchel which was afterwards claimed by Mr. Fitzgerald, of Manchester. He is in jail and will be tried for assault and battery, and also for stealing the satchel, this being the third or fourth time he has been detected in like thefts.

From the Expositor.—We learn that the Supreme Court decided the Sattethwait Assignment case the middle of this (last) week, against the validity of the assignment.

The Southern Railroad earned the first week in June $46,937—an increase over last year of, $5,365.

A trotting match is soon to come off between Byron Green's "Henry Clay," of Ann Arbor, and John Smith's "Stookbridge Chief," of Adrian. There are to be two trials, one in this city and one at Ann Arbor.

It is also "rumored" that a match between "Magna Charta" of Coldwater, "Primus" of Ann Arbor, and a Stallion from Indiana, will come off on the Prairie Course, in this city, the first week in August.

Died,

In Jonesville, on Sunday, July 5th, 1863, Mr. RICHARD NIMMOCKS, Esq., aged 51 years.

Mr. Nimmocks has left a family to whom the sincerest sympathies of the friends and neighbors is extended in the day of their bereavement. Two of the sons have arrived at early manhood, and are already occupants of honorable positions in life.—the older, WALTER A., for two years past, up to the last of May, editor and publisher of this paper, and the second, CHARLES A., who entered as a volunteer in Co C, 7th Infantry, of this State, and has made his way, by faithful performance of duty, to a Lieutenancy in his Company.

The remains were interred according to the usages of the Masonic fraternity, of which he was a member.

☞ Week after next we shall commence the publication of a Story entitled, "JENNY IRWIN—The Story of an Outcast,"—which will be continued in three numbers It is a very interesting one—and some would think worth the subscription price of the Herald. Those who are not subscribers to the paper and wish to get it, will have to leave their names at the office, between this and the 1st day of August, as we shall issue no extra copies.

Lost.

On Monday, July 20th, on Chicago or Railroad street, in this village, a Ladies' Gold Chain with Locket, containg two Pictures, Pencil and Small Cross attached.—The finder will confer a great favor, and receive a liberal reward by leaving the same with the publisher of the Herald

Found.

In the Street, opposite Smith and Van Tine's work-shop, in Brownville, on the morning of the 22d inst., a Ladies' Brown Cloth Talma. The owner can have the same by paying for this notice.

Roback's Stomach Bitters.

It has long been the aim of the physicians to find a combination of medicines having the requisite stimulating and tonic properties to relieve and cure the common complaints of Billiousness, Liver disorders, Languor, Headache, Lowness of Spirits, Indigestion, Jaundice, Fever and Ague, &c., which are the diseases incident to this climate The remedy has been discovered by Dr. Roback, and in the above complaints, and there is but one voice from the people, and that is in favor of these truly wonderful Stomach Bitters. We advise all who are afflicted and need an agreeable tonic for the troubles above indicated, to commence at once using the Bitters. See advertisement. 8w4.

The Elopement.

They locked me in an upper room,
And took away the key,
Because I wouldn't marry one
Who never suited me.
They did not know the female heart,
Or they had clearly seen
That locks were never made to keep
A girl of seventeen.

They had a gilded cage in view,
And thought the bird secure,
Surrounded by the guard of power,
And every artful lure.
They never thought of counter-plots
In any one like me,
And little knew what I would do
For love and liberty.

They wanted me to "marry rich,"
Unmindful of the means—
To couple me with wealth and age,
While I was in my "teens,"
But being otherwise "engaged,"
No coaxing could prevail,
For I preferred to please myself,
And wouldn't be "for sale."

The night was dark, the window raised—
How could I answer no?
When that might be the only chance
And Willy teased me so.
A railroad station being near—
A carriage waiting by—
And such an opportunity,
What could I do but fly?

Not being fond of solitude,
It had for me no charms,
While I could knot a silken chord
To reach a lover's arms—
Resolved, therefore, I wouldn't stay
To be imposed upon
So, while they thought they had me,
I was "going—going—gone."

Wouldnt Marry a Mechanic.

A young man commenced visiting a young woman, and appeared to be well pleased. One evening he called when it was quite late, which led the young girl to inquire where he had been.

'I had to work to night.'

"What! Do you work for a living?" she inquired in astonishment

'Certainly,' replied the young man, 'I am a mechanic.'

'I dislike the name of mechanic,' and she turned up her pretty nose.

That was the last time the young mechanic visited the young woman. He is now a wealthy man, and has one of the best of woman for his wife.

The young lady who disliked the name of mechanic is now the wife of a miserable fool—a regular vagrant about grog-shops, and she soft, verdant, silly miserable girl, is obliged to take in washing in order to support herself and children.

You dislike the name of mechanic eh? you, whose brothers are but dressed loafers? We pity any girl who has so little brains, who is so verdant, so soft, as to think less of a young man for being a mechanic—one of God's noblemen—the most dignified and honorable personage of heaven's creatures. Beware, young lady, how you treat the young men that work for a living, for you may one day be menial to one of them yourself.

A Beautiful Reflection.

Bulwer eloquently says: 'I cannot believe that earth is man's abiding place. It can't be that our life is cast up by the ocean of eternity to float a moment upon its waves and then sink to nothingness! Else why is it that the glorious aspirations, which leap like angels from the temple of our hearts, are forever wandering about unsatisfied? Why is it that the rainbow and clouds come over with a beauty that is not of earth, and then pass off and leave us to muse upon their favored loneliness. Why are the stars, that hold their festival around the midnight throne set above the grasp of our limited faculties, forever mocking us with their unapproachable glory? And, finally, that bright forms of human beauty are presented to our view, and then taken from us, leaving the thousand streams of our affection to flow back in Alpine torrents upon our hearts? We are born for a higher destiny than that of earth; there is a realm where the rainbow never fades—where the stars will be spread before us like islands that slumber on the ocean—and where the beings that pass before us like shadows, will stay in our presence forever."

Visit Your Schools.

The man or woman who drops into the school-room often, shows an interest in the pupils, and their comfort, is a public benefactor. Both teachers and scholars are encouraged to good behavior and extra efforts. Who does not remember the stimulus to the whole shool, of a visit from a parent, or other person? A school visited two or three times a week, the visitors insisting that no show or change of programme be made, but that all things go on in regular course, will generally be twice as prosperous as the school never visited. No one should leave others to attend to this matter. The public school should be the pet and pride of every good citizen of the district. Visit it often as a recognized friend not a morose critic.—If the good deed be sought out and appreciated, an occasional hint for improvement, in a kind tone, will be kindly received and acted upon by both teachers in hearing of your children, or in those who will repeat the words their presence,

Doing injury on them. Gett he her possible, and uphold him, or as employed, for the child-

We have known a school ficiency, by a thought teacher dropped by a of his child, and scholars.—

To a lover there are but two places in all the world—one where his sweetheart is, and the other where she isn't.

A man should always remember that stealing makes a thief of him.

One of our Massachusetts exchanges tells a good story of a jolly fellow, who, on a "glorious Fourth," passing along the streets of Springfield, in that State, saw the inscription, "B. K. Bliss, Apothecary," neatly chisled on a marble slab in the centre of the sidewalk. Stepping reverently over the stone, he turned around, and reading slowly,—

"B. K. Bliss, apoplexy," he exclaimed, "apoplexy—yes—well—but what in——did they bury him under the sidewalk for?"

What can I give you for a keepsake my dear John?' sobbed a sentimental girl to her scapegrace lover about to join his ship. 'Give, my angel,' cried Jack in some confusion, 'hem—why—why, you have not got such a thing as a five pound note, I suppose, about you?'

Two can make love, but it takes three to make a wedding.

☞ The fair sex and their fashion of costly skirts is satarized in this clever adaption of the old nursery rhyme:

And poor Mr. Spart
Must cry 'No fat,'
And his wife will cri-no-line.'

Speaking against long prayers, elder Knapp says:—"When Peter was endeavoring to walk on the water to meet his Master, and was about sinking, had his supplications been as long as the introduction to some of our modern prayers, before he got half through he would have been fifty feet under water."

Rather unexpected was the reply of the urchin, who, on being arraigned for playing marbles on Sunday, and sternly asked, "Do you know where those little boys go who play marbles on Sunday?" replied innocently, "yes, some on 'em goes to the common, and some on 'em goes down by the side of the river."

'The boy at the head of his class will state what were the dark ages of the world.' Boy hesitates. 'Next. Master Jones, can you tell me what the dark ages were?' 'I guess they were the ages before spectacles were invented.' Go to your seats.'

A certain barrister, who was remarkable for coming into court with dirty hands, observed 'that he had been turning over Coke,'—'I should have thought that it was coals you had been turning over,' observed a wag.

A Bangor paper says that a pig lately walked into a tailor's shop there, and before he was noticed by the proprietor, made his way toward the cutting board—attracted, doubtless, by the smell of cabbage in that locality.

A young clergyman having buried three wives, a lady asked him how he happened to be so lucky. 'Madam,' replied he, 'I knew they could not live without contradiction, so I let all of them have their own way.'

A young lady from the country being invited to a party, was told by her city cousin to fix up and put her best foot foremost, in order to catch a beau, 'she looked so green in her country attire.'—The country lass looked comically into the face of her rather faded relative, and replied, 'Better green than withered.'

A minister at church approached a little urchin about twelve years old, and laying his hand upon his shoulder, thus addressed him: 'My son, I believe the devil has hold of you.' 'I believe so too,' was the significant reply of the urchin.—The preacher about that time vamosed.

Jacob Bramble was elected sheriff last fall. Bramble was very pompous, very complacent, and very proud of the honor. His neighbors called to see him, to congratulate him. 'Approach,' said he,' approach very near; though I am sheriff elect, I feel that I am still one of you.'

There are $10,000,000 worth of cattle in Indiana, so any one can take a 'horn' there.

☞ A few nights since two little boys were lying together in their trundle bed. Willie, the elder of the two, who was only six years of age, awoke in the night very thirsty. Being told that he could jump up and get himself some water, he cried saying that he was afraid. Upon this his little brother two years younger than himself spoke encouragingly to him and said, "God is wight here, Willie!—God is wight here! you needn't be afraid!" Willie jumped up, and went and got some water, and then came back to his little bed, all safe, and soon he and his little brother were fast asleep again.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the City of Adrian, on Wednesday the seventeenth day of June, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty three,

Present, ROBERT R. BEECHER, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Silas Brown, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of A. Robinson Walsh, executor of the last will of said deceased, praying that a duly certified copy of the last will of said deceased, together with the probate thereof, may be filed and recorded in this court according to the statute in such case made and provided.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the twentieth day of July next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said Petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the Petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

Probate Notice

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, s. s.—At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian on Thursday, the eleventh day of June, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty three.

Present, Robert R. Beecher, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of George Exelby deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of George Exelby, junior, administrator on said estate, praying for the allowance of his final account and discharge, and for assignment of the balance of estate among the heirs at law of said deceased.

Thereupon it is ordered, that Monday the twenty-seventh day of July next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said Petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the Petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

DR. ROBACK'S STOMACH BITTERS ARE NOT TO BE EXCELLED AS A STOMACHIC AND Regulator OF THE DIGESTIVE ORGANS.

These Bitters are not offered to the public as a medicine which will cure all the "ills which flesh is heir to," but as a remedial agent—a great Regulator of the system. In the Bilious districts of the West and South there has, for a long time, been much needed an article of Stomach Bitters, which, if taken in proper quantities, and at the proper time, are a sure preventive of

Bilious Fever,
Fever and Ague,
Liver Complaint,
Dyspepsia, Indigestion,
Jaundice,
Kidney Complaints,

and all diseases of a similar nature.

These Bitters are composed of rare and powerful roots and herbs, which make them

Highly Tonic.

DETROIT ADVERTISER & TRIBUNE.

PUBLISHED

DAILY, TRI-WEEKLY AND WEEKLY.

The oldest newspaper in Detroit, now in its 34th year—the Advertiser having been established in 1829.

In July last, by the consolidation of the Daily Advertiser and Daily Tribune, a circulation larger than that ever enjoyed by any paper in Michigan was attained. Since then a corps of editors has been secured second to none engaged on any western paper. Some have been employed for years on leading Eastern papers, and bring a rich fund of experience to the columns of the Advertiser & Tribune

Our expenses for telegraphic despatches are larger than those of any other in Detroit, and more than seven times the amount paid by any one paper a year ago In fact we now publish simultaneously with them, besides the regular Associated Press dispatches, all the most valuable of the special dispatches that are sent to the Philadelphia Inquirer Pittsburg Gazette, Cincinnati Gazette, St. Louis Democrat, and Chicago Tribune—the five leading papers in the cities in which they are published, and for enterprise not a whit behind the New York journals Almost daily it occurs that we obtain news by special dispatches twelve hours in advance of the Associated Press, of the correctness of which statement we refer to the numerous readers of our Daily. In this city, where both the daily papers are habitually read by all parties, it is generally conceded that the dispatches of the Advertiser & Tribune are the most reliable and satisfactory of any published in Detroit.

We are now sparing no expense and intend to spare none to place the Advertiser & Tribune in the first rank as a newspaper. Particular attention is given to State news, and to intelligence from our soldiers in the army, a correspondent being maintained in every Michigan Regiment.

Politically the Advertiser & Tribune looks to the salvation of the country by the energetic prosecution of the war now waged against the accursed rebellion of the South. On humanitarian grounds, as a war measure, and as a safeguard for the future quiet of the nation, it upholds the Presidents Emancipation Proclamation, and all other war measures of the Government; and while it admits the propriety of friendly criticisms, it holds that no direct and active opposition to the Government is consistent with loyalty, or should be tolerated in the North any more than in the States engaged in the rebellion.

As a commercial paper we aim to make the Advertiser and Tribune the best paper in the State and have employed to conduct this department a man of large experience and reputation. This will make the paper particularly acceptable to farmers, as well as merchants and millers.

Our facilities for printing a large edition have lately been greatly increased by the erection of the fastest press in use in this city, and our circulation is keeping pace with our capacity to print.

TERMS.

DETROIT DAILY ADVERTISER AND TRIBUNE.

To Mail Subscribers $2 00 per Quarter.

Contains twenty-two columns of reading matter including local news, telegraph reports, State and miscellaneous items, army correspondence, copious details of war and foreign news, editorial articles, personal and political items, commercial and marine intelligence, etc. etc.

Detroit Tri-Weekly Advertiser & Tribune

To Mail Subscribers $1 00 per quarter; 10 copies to one address $8 75 per Quarter.

Published every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Contains about thirty columns of news, comprising all the most important matter of the daily issue. This edition is well suited to farmers, merchants, and others living at a distance from a post office, or who are reached only by tri-weekly mails. It is becoming very popular throughout the State—so much so that it has increased in circulation about one thousand copies within eleven months.

Detroit Weekly Advertiser and Tribune.

$1 50 per year within the State. 20 copies to one address $25 00. Papers sent to soldiers in the army for $1 00 per year.

The Weekly is printed in quarto form, and is as large as any of the New York weeklies. It is made up of articles carefully selected from the daily edition, and contains besides, a carefully prepared review of the news of the week, full commercial reports, a story, and a large amount of interesting miscellany, poetry, etc.

Every one wanting a good State paper should send for the

WILCOX & GIBBS,

SEWING MACHINE.

Price, with Hemmer and Feller, $40.

THE WILCOX & GIBBS' Sewing Machine is the best Machine, without regard to price, for

Family Sewing,
Braiding,
Hemming,
Felling,
Tucking,
Cording,

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seam, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances "to survive the wash-tub."

A patented device of great utility to learners, prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production; and for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it."—Phila. Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder."—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines."—Pennsylvanian.

"This Machine, in the opinion of the committee, fills more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs', as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report.

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibbs's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine."—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21, 1860.

"After much wear and many washings the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others"—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experienced in our own family."—Boston Traveller.

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well-merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette.

"We esteem it the best machine for family use The stitch is unexceptionable."—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

GREAT REDUCTION!!

IN THE PRICES OF

SINGER & Co's

STANDARD MACHINES

IS WELL KNOWN TO BE THE BEST FOR MANUFACTURING PURPOSS.

No. 1, STANDARD SHUTTLE MACHINE

(Formerly sold for $90—reduced to $70.)

No. 2, STANDARD SHUTTLE MACHINE

[Formerly sold for $100—reduced to $75.]

SINGER'S LETTER A MACHINE

is the Best Machine in the World For Family Sewing and Light Manufacturing Purposes. Price, with Hemmer, and beautifully ornamented, $50.

We would ask for our LETTER A. MACHINES the special attention of Vest Makers and Dress Makers, and all those who want Machines for light manufacturing purposes. They embody the principles of the Manufacturing Machines, making like them the interlocked stitch and are destined to be as celebrated for Family Sewing and light manufacturing purposes as our manufacturing machines are for manufacturing purposes in general.

Family Sewing Machines are valuable in proportion to the number of things they can do well. See what ours can do before making a purchase

There is no doubt as to the value of our machines for manufacturing purposes, but it is only of late that the public began to learn that the essential elements of a machine best adapted to the heaviest work, would also be the elements to be embodied in a Family Machine. It is now well understood that our Letter A Machine is the only Family Machine yet offered to the public which has simplicity, rapidity, durability, and certainty of correct action. While as a general thing the sewing machine people are candid enough to acknowledge that our machines are unequaled for munufacturing purposes, they are almost sure to assert, in the same breath, that Singer's letter A, or family Machines, are not as good as theirs!—This is a mere trick of the trade, and we confidently invite those interested in the subject to examine for themselves, and see what our Letter A Family Machines, with all the recent improvements, are capable of doing. While they will sew the most delicate material to perfection, as already stated, they are also adapted to light manufacturing purposes, and this, be it remembered, can not be said of any of the other family machines yet offered to the public.

The No. 1 and 2 Machines are of great capacity and application for manufacturing purposes.

Our No. 3 Machines are especially adapted to all kinds of light and heavy leather work in carriage trimming, boot and shoe making harness making, etc. They are of extra size with an arm long enough to take under it and stitch the largest sized dashes. There is scarcely any part of a trimmers stitching that cannot be better done with them than by hand, so, too, the saving of time and labor is very great. The table of these machines is twenty-four inches long, and the shuttle will hold six times as much thread as the shuttle of those used for tailoring purposes. The large machines work as fast as the small ones.

We have always on hand Hemming Guages, Silk Twist, Linen and Cotton Thread on Spools, best Machine Oil in bottles, &c.

We manufacture our own Needles, and would warn all persons using our machine not to buy any others We know that there are needles sold of the most inferior quality at higher prices than we charge for the best. The needles sold by us are manufactured especially for our machines. A bad needle may render the working of the best machine almost useless

Our customers may rest assured that all our Branch Offices are furnished with the "genuine article."

In case of small purchases the money may be sent in postage stamps or bank notes,

☞ Correspondents will please write their names distinctly, It is all-important that we should, in each case, know the Post Office County, and State,

☞ All persons requiring information about Sewing Machines, their sizes, prices, working capacities, and the best methods of purchasing, can obtain it by sending to us, or any of our Branch Offices for a copy of "I. M. SINGER & Co's Gazette," which is a beautiful Pictorial Paper, entirely devoted to the subject, It will be sent gratis.

We have made the above REDUCTION IN PRICES with a two-fold view of benefiting the public and ourselves. The public have been swindled by spurious machines made in imitation of ours. The metal in them, from the iron castings to the smallest piece, is of a poor quality. Their makers have not the means to do their work well. They are hid away in secret places, where it would be impossible to have at their command the proper appliances. It is only by doing a great business and having extensive manufacturing establishments, that good machines can be made at moderate prices. The best designed machines, badly made, are always liable to get out of order, and are sure to cost considerable trouble and money to keep them in repair.

The qualities to be looked for in a machine are—

Certainty of correct action at all rates of speed, simplicity of construction, great durability and rapidity of operation, with the least labor.

Machines, to combine these essential qualities, must be made of the best metal and finished to perfection. We have the ways and means on a grand scale to do this.

The purchasers of machines, whose daily bread it may concern, will find that those having the above qualities not only work at rapid as well as slow rates of speed, but last long in the finest possible working order.—Our machines, as made by us, will earn more money with less labor than any others, whether in imitation of ours or not. In fact they are cheaper than any other machines a gift.

The Infidel and his Daughter.

Suggested by reading a newspaper paragraph describing the scenes between the brave old Ethan Allen and his daughter, on the eve of her death, when she asked the stern infidel in whose faith he would have her to die—his or her mother's.

"The damps of death are coming fast,
My father, o'er my brow;
The past with all its scenes has fled,
And I must turn me now
To that dim future which in vain
My feeble eyes descry;
Tell me, my father, in this hour,
In whose stern faith to die.

"In thine? I've watched the scornful smile
And heard the withering tone,
When'ere the Christian's humble hope
Was placed above thine own;
I've heard thee speak of coming death
Without a shade of gloom,
And laugh at all the childish fears
That cluster round the tomb.

"Or is it in my mother's faith?
How fondly do I trace
Through many a weary year long past
That calm and silent face!
How often do I call to mind,
Now she is 'neath the sod,
The place, the hour, in which she drew
My early thoughts to God!

"'Twas then she took this sacred book,
And from the burning page
Read how its truths support the soul
In youth and failing age;
And bade me in its precepts die,
That I might share a home of love
In worlds beyond the sky.

My father, shall I look above,
Amid this gathering gloom,
To Him whose promises of love
Extend beyond the tomb!
Or curse the Being who hath blessed
This chequered path of mine?
And promises eternal rest!
Or die, my sire, in thine?"

The frown upon that warrior brow
Passed like a cloud away,
And tears coursed down the rugged cheek
That flowed not till that day
"No, not mine," with choking voice
The skeptic made reply—
"But in thy mother's holy faith,
My daughter, may'st thou die!"

A Setler's Exploit.

As Samuel Bowditch, one of the early settlers on Grand river, in Kentucky, was going across a patch of swamp, one afternoon, about half a mile from his dwelling, to look after some cattle, he heard a stick snap behind him, and turning quickly round, found himself confronted with a huge savage, in all the hideousness of his war paint, and with his rifle or musket levelled at his head, the muzzle not more than four feet from him. Bowditch himself had a rifle in his hand, but he knew the Indian could shoot him before he could raise it and fire, and he did not make the attempt but immediately dropped it to the ground and held up his palms, in token of submission.

On seeing this, the savage walked up and said:

"Give Injun gun!"

"I see you're a big chief, and I hope we may be friends."

"Where live?" asked the savage, as he produced a strong thong of deer skin, and proceeded to bind the hands of his captive who being a small man, saw he was no match for the other, even without weapons on either side, and so submitted quietly though agonized at the thought of his poor helpless wife and children, in their lonely cabin over the hill.

"I live out yonder not a great way from here," replied the captive, nodding his head in the proper direction.

"How many got?" queried the savage.

The settler hesitated about telling correctly. He first thought he would name a number large enough to deter the Indian from going thither, and thus, perhaps, save his wife and children from a fate like his own, but after a moment's reflection, it occurred to him that, should the savage take him there, a chance might arise for him to regain his liberty, and he decided upon speaking the truth.

"Why no Long knife tell?" demanded the Indian with an impatient frown. "No make lie!"

"No, chief; I'll tell you the truth.—There are only three persons in my cabin—my wife and two children—but I know a big brave chief like you won't hurt them."

"Me go see 'em!" returned the savage, with a fierce gleam of triumph, which the other did not fail to notice.

Having tightly bound the hands of his captive behind his back, the savage felt about his dress for any other weapons, took away his ammunition and putting both weapons over his shoulder, told the white man to lead the way. This the latter did, full of hope, fear and general anxiety, till he came in sight of his humble log dwelling, situated in a pleasant valley, through which flowed a pretty little stream a branch of the Green river, when the Indian ordered him to stop, and proceeded to make him fast to a tree, by means of another deer skin thong secured to that around the wrists.

"Ain't you going to let me go down to the house with you?" inquired the captive, now beginning to feel much alarm for the safety of his family.

"Me go alone!" returned the savage gruffly. "Me big chief—want scalp!"

"Oh, for God's sake, don't kill my poor innocent wife and children!" pleaded Bowditch, fairly agonized at the thought "You are a great chief, I know, and you'll remember that they never did you any harm!"

"Long knife scalp much good!" rejoined the Indian sullenly, as he finished binding the other to the tree, and strode away down the hill, carrying the two weapons with him. Bowditch watched him, step by step, as he glided away under cover of the trees, keeping some rock, stump, or clump of bushes between him and the inmates of the dwelling so they might not by any chance perceive his approach and take the alarm.

"At any rate I can holler yet!" muttered the captive, "and maybe they'll hear me; and forthwith he set up a series of yells, that went echoing and re-echoing far away through the forest.

The settler saw his wife and children come in haste to the door, and look up the hill in alarm. At this he shouted at the top of his lungs.

"Quick, Esther—go back into the house and bar it up tight! The Injuns are arter you, and I'm a prisoner! Quick! Quick! or you're lost, and the children too!"

For a moment or two the mother and children stood as if paralyzed with astonishment and terror, and then, to his great relief, he saw his little boy point in the direction of the skulking savage, and all three retreated and closed the door.

The Indian now uttered a fierce yell, and stepped out into plain view, fired both pieces, one after the other, at the dwelling, as if he had impulsively adopted this means to vent his rage at being discovered and foiled of his murderous purpose. Then looking round at his captive, he threw down the rifle belonging to the latter and drawing his tomahawk, started toward him on a run. Bowditch who had watched every motion, and knew that in his rage the savage would brain and scalp him, now gathered all his strength, and made one desperate effort to free himself, acting rather from the instincts of self preservation than from any hope of success.

But to his great joy, his unspeakable joy, he heard and felt his bonds strain, crack and snap, and suddenly found himself free and his arms at liberty. He looked quickly and wildly around, almost disposed to doubt his senses—to discredit his good fortune—for any fortune seemed good which give him even a bare chance for his life where he expected only certain death. The Indian was at least a hundred and fifty yards from him, and his rifle unloaded; and with a start in a race for life—in a race that involved not only his own life but that of his wife and children—who so swift of foot as to overtake him?

With a loud yell of mingled joy and defiance, away he went over the hill, and with a louder yell of rage at his unexpected escape, the fierce savage came bounding after him. Bowditch knew every inch of ground in that vicinity, and he had already regained sufficient presence of mind to shape his course so as to take advantage of all the chances in his favor. The hill about the summit was a succession of rocks and bushes, with caves, chasms and precipices, and over, through, and along these natural obstructions the fugitive believed he could make his way with any man living, either white or red, and so took the most troublesome route for his larger and more unwieldly pursuer resolved should he by chance find the latter gaining on him, to double on him at a certain cave not more than half a mile distant, where he could enter, by following one of the labyrinthian passages within, and come out on the same side into a thicket not more than fifty feet from the main opening.

Looking back occasionally, as he fled along his rocky way with the ease of a mountain goat, Bowditch soon discovered that however superior to him his adversary might be in mere physical strength, he was no match for him in speed in that particular locality; and this not only inspired him with the hope of escape, but with such confidence in his own resources that he began to calculate in turn how best he might compass the destruction of his foe.

"Why not lure him into the cave," he muttered, "and let him fool his time round thar, whilst I start back arter my rifle, and follow up the audacious whelp? I'll do it, and if I don't get even with him, then it's a clear case fortin's against me."

Having come to this determination, Bowditch slackened his chase till his pursuer was in full view, when he pretended to stumble and fall, and then got up and ran with a limp, which caused the savage to yell with a fierce delight and redouble his exertions to overtake him. This was exactly what he intended to bring about, and he now managed his pace with so much deception, that, though seeming to exert himself to the utmast, he permitted the panting savage to gain a little every minute, till the mouth of the cave was reached, at which time not more than a hundred paces divided them. The Indian saw the fugitive disappear in the dark opening, and believing that he now had him secure once more, he came bounding up and plunged in after him with a yell of triumph. The settler, who knew every twist and turn of every passage in the cave—and there were many—now uttered a sort of wailing groan from the center, to urge the Indian on, and then quietly slipped off in a different direction, and reached the bright open air about the same time the other did the middle of the interior.

"Now then for it," muttered Bowditch as he slipped over the brow of the hill and ran towards his dwelling, which, owing to the ridge bending round the valley, in the shape of a magnet, or horse shoe, was scarly as far distant as when he called to his wife.

His family saw him, and with a cry of joy his wife threw open the door

"Quick, Esther!" he exclaimed, as he came up panting; t'other powder horn and some bullets—quick!"

"Ain't you coming in, Samuel?" inquired the wife in surprise and alarm.

"Just long enough to get them things since you won't!" he answered, as he bounded in and hurried to a rude shelf on one side of the room, "I've sort o' played the coward once to day," he added, "and now I am going to wipe it out. Shut the door, Esther, and keep yourself and the children out of danger. I'll be back shortly. Good bye!" and without waiting for a reply, he ran out in the direction of his rifle, his wife vainly calling for him, and entreating him to come back, and not risk his life so foolishly.

As soon as he once more got hold of his rifle, he hastened to load it, and felt, as he afterwards expressed it, "like a new man." Then keeping himself as much under cover as possible, he hurried up to a point where he could secret himself and command a fair view of the mouth of the cave within easy rifle range.

"If old Paint face haint mizzled," he muttered with an ominous frown, "it's my opinion he never will!" and like a cat watching for game; he kept his eyes riveted upon the spot where he expected to see him appear.

For ten minutes all was still—nothing moved—and then, to his bitter satisfaction, he beheld the Indian coming out with a stealthy step, looking cautiously and suspiciously around. The rifle of the settler was already leveled, and for a moment or two he sighted directly at his heart, and then fired. The savage threw up his hands convulsively, uttered a noise between a groan and a yell, and fell back quivering on the earth. Bowditch took time to reload, and then approached him cautiously. He found him quite dead.

☞ As a party of gentlemen were taking supper at a country inn, some of the guests found the poultry rather tough. After exercising his ingenuity to no effect in trying to dissect an old fowl, he turned to the waiter and asked:

"Have you any such thing as a powder flask?"

"No, sir, we have not; do you want one."

"Why, yes. I think the shortest way would be to blow the fellow up."

The Withered Rose.

In a little cottage by the river side a young mother lay dying; a tiny babe was sleeping on her bosom; scarce three months had come and gone since the girlish being had become a mother, yet how much had those brief months to show of joy and sorrow; joy when she first looked on the innocent face of her infant daughter, and when she had given her the sweet name of Rose; great grief, when the husband she had chosen but two short years before, and whom she loved so well, was called from earth to heaven—and now she, too, must die, the time had come for her to leave the stage of existence, and the babe, her own sweet child, must be left in the care of strangers, for she had no loving mother to guide her though life's rugged path. A sweet young lady sat by the side of the couch, holding the hand of the dying mother, who seemed searching for something hidden in the depths of those brown eyes. Presently, satisfied with her scrutiny, she said: 'Mary will you be a mother to my child, guide and watch over her as though she was your own?' The brown eyes filled with tears, and a sweet voice tremulous with emotion, said: 'I will—if God spare my life—she shall be to me as my own.' 'God bless you Mary, I die content,' and with one loving kiss on the lips of her child, the freed spirit fled to realms of endless bliss.

Tenderly the friends closed the eyes of the dead, and tenderly they raised the sleeping babe from the white pulseless breast, then laid her to rest 'neath the willows on the bank of the little river, and Mary took the child to her home, on the hill, where she resided with her Grandfather. The old man gave the babe a fraternal welcome for little Alice, as he was wont to call her—the child's mother was always a great favorite with him. Day by day the child grew in health and beauty, and steadily its little heart learned to love and revere its foster mother and grandfather. Mary loved the child almost to idolatry, and the old man worshipped her next to his God; she was a fairy creature, beautiful as the sunny morning, and so gentle, that she seemed not of earth.

On her fifth birth-day her mama, Mary as she called her, was married to a worthy young man of the village, and they came to live in the old homstead. Little Rose climbed on grandpa's knee and put her delicate arms around his neck and wept as though her heart would break.—Grandpa dried her tears, and asked her what was the matter; she replied as well as she could through her sobs, mama Mary is married, and I will have no one to sing to me now, nor tell me pretty stories. Grandpa, where is my own mother, did she die, or has she gone to England? Then he told her of her mothers death, and that she was sleeping 'neath the willows by the rive that flowed at the foot of the hill, and that her father was sleeping by her side; then said Rose, I may sleep there too when I am older; then little Rose often asked grandpa if she could live in the cottage by the river when she should get to be as large as mama Mary, and grandpa would say, yes my little pet.

Years passed, and Rose was a beautiful girl of sixteen, often she run down the little path to the cottage, where her mother had died; it was her delight to tend the garden and keep it free from weeds; every day was the furniture in the cottage dusted, and so cool and inviting looked the vine wreathed porch, that the wearied traveler stopped to rest beneath its refreshing shade. One after noon Rose sat in the porch sewing, thinking of her dead parents, when a stranger stepped in'o the entrance and nearly succeed in frightening her out of her wits.

'Keep your seat, lady,' said he, as Rose sprang from it, on perceiving him, 'this spot looked so inviting, and as I was told that the cottage was not inhabited, I thought I would come and rest 'neath its shade; this is a romantic spot—and see, I have nearly completed a sketch of it; do you know anything of its history?'

Rose looked into the face of the stranger, and seeing that which betokened something more than idle curiosity, she told him, in her own sweet way, of the inmates of the old cottage, and that they were sleeping side by side on the banks of the river. When she had finished the touching relation, he asked her if she lived there alone, she told him she lived with Mrs. Allen, on the hill, and invited him to walk up with her and see the lady. He accepted the invitation gladly, and Rose leading the way, they went up the winding path that led to the house.

'See here mama, here is a gentleman who has been sketching my pretty cottage, and it looks so real.' The gentleman received a kindly welcome, and the evening passed pleasantly away. At last he rose to go; Mrs. Allen invited him to call again, when convenient; the invitation was warmly seconded by Rose, and by him as gladly accepted.

Nearly every evening found him wending his way up the hill, for he seemed suddenly to perceive that Mr. Allen's cosy pralor was far more pleasant than the great sitting room of the village inn, and Rose waited anxiously for his coming, though why, she could not tell. Swiftly sped the weeks away until three months had passed, since Walter Percy came to the Glen. The fast fading autumn warned him that he must leave the quiet country spot for his city home; but must he go and leave Rose? yes, it must be, but he would see her first, and tell her of his love, and if she loved him, then he would return and claim her as his own.

That evening he went to Mr. Allen's, and together they followed the winding path to the cottage; long they sat, there in the old porch talking of the past.—Presently Walter said: 'Rose, to-morrow I must leave you, my business demands my immediate attention in the city, and to-morrow morning I must go.' 'What, and must you go so soon?' and in that question Rose betrayed more than she would confess to her own heart. He seized her unresisting hand and conveying it with kisses, poured forth in passionate words, the story of his love, and asked her if she could love him in return.—Brief but satisfactory was the answer, and he clasped her to his heart. Shortly afterwards they returned to the house, as she bade him good bye, her voice faltered, and she said: 'Dear Walter, I feel as though such happiness was too great to last long; oh, will you ever come to the Glen to see your poor Rose?' 'Yes, yes darling, I will come back soon to you, my own sweet flower, and with many parting kisses, he sarted for the village, and she for her little room; when there she wept long, not for grief, but for joy, that his great manly heart was all her own.

In the morning, just as she opened the shutters, she heard the shrill whistle of the Iron Horse as it bore the object of her heart's pure affections far from her, tears gushed to her eyes as she thought, perhaps, forever. She longed to tell her mother, but could not.

In one week she received a letter from Walter, it was long and passionate, many were the answers written, then cast aside as unfit to send, but finally she wrote one that she thought would do, and accordingly sent it to the postoffice; letters came steadily every week for about four months, then they were less frequent, and presently they ceased entirely. All this seemed strange to Rose, but she thought he must be ill, or business must be very pressing; and yet if it was only business, why could he not just write a line to tell her he was well? Just five months have passed since Walter has written, and it is just one year, to-day, since he left the Glen. I will go to the cottage and write to him, and putting on her hat she stepped lightly down the hill, getting her writing materials, she sat down in the same spot where one year before Walter had told her the story of his love.

She wrote a long letter to her friend; she told him of her joys and sorrows, all her hopes and fears, and begged him to write to her—to tell her if he was ill.—Then wending her way to the shabby postoffice, she deposited the letter in the mail box and returned home.

Three days later, Mr. Allen went to the village, when he returned, he said to her: 'Well puss, here's a letter from our long silent friend—would you like to see it?' at the same time holding it far out of her reach. 'Yes, George, yes, give it me.' 'Well, then, give me a kiss and you shall have it.' The required kiss was given and Rose held the coveted letter, long she looked at it before the thought that there was something inside caused her to look up, when Mrs. Allen, like other ladies, curious to know the contents thereof, said: 'Well, Rose, can you read a sealed letter?' Rose blushed, and taking her scissors carefully cut round the seal, as she opened it her own letter fell upon her lap. As she saw this, she started and turned pale as marble, but when she read the line on the slip of paper, her heart ceased to beat and she fell heavily to the floor. Both sprang forward and lifting her gently laid her on the sofa, and after some time succeeded in bringing her to consciousness; as her eyes rested on them an expression of pain crossed her features, and she turned her head away, murmuring, it was cruel for him to deceive me when I loved him and trusted in him so much.

Mrs. Allen read the note, and it run thus:

'Miss Rose Morton should learn that, by my silence, I wished all farther correspondence to cease and hereafter all letters from her will be returned unopened. WALTER PARCY.'

Poor, trusting, Rose, those few heartless lines crushed her young life forever; each day saw the Rose fading, and in one short month from that fatal day, she laid herself down to die in the cottage where her parents died, for, said she, here we have spent many happy hours; here we last met; and hereof want to die and be laid on the river bank by my mother. Mrs. Allen wrote a severe letter to Walter, but of no avail. In one week after, Rose said: 'I am going fast, but I want to see him before I die, to tell him he is forgiven.' Mrs. Allen dispatched a messenger to him with this:

'Rose is dying, if you want to see her and be forgiven, come. M. A.'

But ere the messenger returned with the repentant man, Rose's pure spirit had fled from earth.

Mrs. Allen meeting Walter at the door, said: 'You are too late, she is happy now.' O, God, and I have killed her: 'Rose, dear Rose, speak; say that you forgive me,' said he frantically, as he rushed by to the room where she was lying, robed for her burial. Long and bitterly he wept, but 'twas of no avail, tears could not bring back the dead, and when they laid her in the grave, long he lingered—then after the others had left the spot, and kneeling by that new made mound, he vowed that his future life should be sacred to her memory and that no other should enjoy the happiness that should have been her's. Faithfully he kept his word. When he returned to his home he purchased the Glen, dear for his Rose sake, and the only boon he craved was that he might rest by her side.

BESSIE BOXWORTH.

Tecumseh, May 6th, 1863.

A Stirring Appeal.

The following stirring appeal was issued in circular form, and distributed in New York on Saturday:

To the laboring Men of New York:

Comrades—

Do you want to pay heavy taxes?

Do you want to suffer loss and ruin?"

Do you want to be trampled under foot by ambitious demagogues?

Do you want to have your homes filled with sorrow, and your eyes run over with tears?

If not, then stop and think.

The property destroyed by a riot must be paid for by the city, and in this way every act of disorder, violence and house-burning is only laying heavier taxes on your own shoulders.

Every disorderly act that is done, only calls for greater expenses on the part of the city government. The United States does not pay the damages, but the city of New York alone. Of course, all the disturbances, losses and damages only fall upon your own heads.

Comrades! Stand by the law! Stand by good order and good sense, and you will find it good policy. If any law is bad let it be settled by the Courts in a proper form. Do not listen to bad men who are leading you to your ruin.

The politicians and business men of New York must stand by the law and the Constitution. It is cheaper and better to stand by the law, for when the law is broken and property destroyed, and lives lost, we all suffer more or less by the injury.

Comrades! in the name of God—in the name of wives and children—in the name of everything that is near and dear to us—stop and think.

Stand up as Democratic workingmen should, stand up before the world, and show the traitors of the South, and the friends of tyranny all over the world, that the workingmen of New York are able to govern themselves.

Stand by the Union, the Constitution and the Laws? Then peace, freedom and prosperity will be secure to you and your children after you.

Keep honestly at your work! Give no heed to bad advice. Any man that advises you to break the law is your enemy, and the enemy of your wives and children. These troubles will make the times only worse for us all. High prices, heavy rents and heavier taxes.

Comrades! Keep the peace, and all will be well.

A DEMOCRATIC WORKINGMAN.

An Incident.

Not long ago, we passed over a portion of the Michigan Southern Railroad, and among the passengers was one, a woman, who attracted the attention and awakened the sympathy of every beholder.

Young, wondrous fair, with a clear, soft eye, and hair that Petrach's Laura might have sighed for, with a sprightly mind and a gentle spirit, she was, it is feared, hopelessly crazed. Her friends were taking her to the Asylum at Indianapolis, but sadly as to the grave.

One who would have been all the world to her, fell in Virginia, in the front rank, and the bullet that found his heart, struck the gentle girl as well, who was waiting at home for her "bold soldier boy." Her madness was mildness; she fancied she could fly, and waved her white hands and singing all the while, snatches of songs and fragments of hymns. One moment it would be the bugle strainut—

"I see them on their winding way
About their ranks the moonbeams play;"

and then it would be a breath of Logan's—

"O could I fly I'd fly with thee."

broken off with—

"I'm over young to marry yet."

and all along she would call in the most persuasive tones, tones with tears in them, "Henry, Henry," listen an instant for a response that never came, and laugh so sweet like bells out of tune.

It was not hard, knowing as much of her story, as we did, to tell who "Henry" was; it was he who slept in his bloody vestments in some grave of the "Old Dominion." Her friends stopped at Salem Crossing, and as the train swept on, we caught a glimpse of those white hands as she waved them from the platform where she stood

It was a sad, sad sight; one of the works of the war; and that poor girl's fate strows somebody's threshold. Thank God, it is not yours nor ours. "Henry," dead to her, and she dead to the world, shall join hands and stand witness forever against traitors.

We do not wonder that Dr. Johnson prayed, during the last years of his life, that his reason might not be extinguished. "Did you ever thank God for the gift of reason?" a stranger abruptly said to a gentleman in the streets of London.—"Do it then," he quickly added, "for I have lost mine!" hurried away and was gone—Chicago Journal.

Terrible Tornado.

The village of Cary, Genesee county, New York, was devastated by a terrible tornado on the evening of the 15th inst. It came from a westerly direction, and along its entire track, which was three-fourths of a mile wide, the growing crops were entirely destroyed, miles of fences were hurled and scattered over the country, large barns removed some distance from their foundations, and some farm-houses riddled by the immense hailstones as though they had been the target for an army; every window exposed to its fury was completely demolished; chimneys and outbuildings offered but little resistance. Reaching the village of Cary, the tempest seemed bent on destruction, scarcely a window facing the west but what was destroyed. In the Seminary building over 500 lights of glass were demolished, and the rain, which poured in torrents at the time, flooded every room in which the Storm King had forced an entrance; four large chimneys were broken off by the roof; other prominent buildings in the village shared a like fate, and a more desolate scene was never looked upon. The fruit crop is entirely destroyed where the storm struck; apples and pears beaten to a pomace by the blocks of hail, and the cherries and other fruit trees almost entirely stript of both leaves and fruit. As for garden stuff, scarcely a vestige remains; vines, cabbage, corn—everything broken off and split to shreds. Immense trees that had withstood the storms of a century were prostrated.

NEW YORK, July 20.—The City of New York made the passage from Queenstown in nine days, the quickest on record for a screw steamer. The Bohemian arrived out on the 15th, and the City of Cork on the 16th.

In the House of Commons, on the 13th, Mr. Roebuck withdrew his motion for the recognition of the South, yielding his own feelings to the wishes of Lord Palmerston.

Lord Palmerston said Roebuck did right in withdrawing the motion. He hoped this would be the last time when any member of Parliament would make use of his intercourse with foreign sovereigns, such proceedings being extremely irregular.

The O'Donoghue protested against Roebuck's bitter hostility to the North.—He believed Roebuck and friends were actuated by the belief that the destruction of the Union would be a great advantage to England. He should consider it the greatest calamity to the world.

NEW YORK, July 27.—A correspondent of the Herald, dated Jackson, Miss. July 20th, reports that the library of Jeff Davis has been captured, comprising several bushels of private and political papers of the arch traitor Several letters on secession date back to 1852, and the whole collection will bring to light the secret history of secession. The letters are from both Northern and Southern traitors.

NEW YORK, July 27.—The Boston papers announce the capture and destruction of the bark Good Hope, from Boston for the Cape of Good Hope, and the capture of the bark J. W. Seaver, from Boston for Hong Kong, by the privateer Georgia. The Seaver was bonded for $15,000.

NEW York, July 27.—The Post's Washington special says that returned prisoners from Richmond state that in less than twenty-four hours after the issue of Jeff Davis's conscription proclamation, a wholesale conscription commenced there.

It is believed that a general exchange of prisoners will soon be effected.

The Crisis.

The rebels, minus upwards of twenty thousand of the Grand army of Rebeldom, are in full retreat for Richmond, with the conquering soldiers of the Potomac embarrassing their progress on every side.—Vicksburg and Port Hudson have fallen. Rosacrans is daily picking up the scattered army of Bragg by hundreds, and our "Iron clads" are again thundering with almost certain prospects of success, at the solid fortifications of Charleston.

After another year of trial, of patience of suffering, and of almost superhuman endurance on the part of our gallant soldiers, victory has crowned their efforts at every point. The almost apathetic feeling, consequent upon the long delayed military triumphs of our arms, that but recently pervaded the public mind, is suddenly dispelled, and our people are now thoroughly awakened to the consciousness that a little more time, a little more patience, and a thoroughly united, out-spoken, loyal sentiment of the North, expressed by deeds as well as words, will speedily shake the confidence of the most sanguine southern demagogues in their reckless and desperate scheme to subvert the constitution of their country and destroy the Union. We say, that deeds as well as words are essential to the speedy completion of the great work we have on hand. Deeds like those which have already shaken the "Southern Confederacy" to its centre, and words that contain no thought of peace so long as the rebels, who govern the south, insultingly sneer at all intimations of peace, except on the basis of absolute separation and division of the states. We have said before, what we now repeat, that we cannot afford to lose the Union It must be preserved at any cost. The political salvation of the north depends upon its preservation. The safety of the south—as even the southern people will acknowledge when their terrible infatuation is dispelled—depends upon it. For if it were possible for them to separate from the Union, under their specious doctrine of "State Rights" no constitution could be framed that would hold their States together in unity and peace for a single year.

Monarchy a Sham.

Almost every intelligent Briton who dares express his real sentiments, admits that the Queen is a ceremony, and no more. She is the embodiment of red tape; she exists to carry out a theory of government; she has nothing more to do than to oscillate between Windsor and St. James'. And all around her are officers and positions which are mere matters of red tape. A man of distinction was lately appointed to be Secretary of a certain Admiralty, with a salary of $10,000.—He went soon afterwards to inquire concerning his office and duties; and was informed that the said Secretaryship had no office, no book, and involved no duty of any kind whatever, except the pocketing of the $10,000! This is literally true and is by no means a single case. The unreality runs all through; the whole monarchial system is an ice crust, from beneath which the waters have long ebbed, and of which the hope of the monarchist is that it may only thaw and evaporate peaceably, whilst his well grounded fear is that some political Thor may presently test it with his hammer and send it all broken and crashing down to the sea which awaits such refuse.

Letter from Minnesota.

ST. CLOUD, Minn., July 12, 1863.

UNCLE JAMES:

As I promised to give you my observations at the end of the journey I take the earliest opportunity offered.—This place is situated on the east side of the river and contains about 900 inhabitants, a number of stores, churches, and hosts of grog shops. It was laid out by three different men, and of course there are three different towns, viz: Upper, Central and Lower. Central bids fair to do the business and the others offer rare inducements as building spots. Property is very high, a city lot 6 x 12 commands from $100 to $300—no fruit, shrub or vine.

The present time is perhaps the best that will ever be offered to purchase; the grasshopper, indians and now the drought, has discouraged many and they are anxious to sell to some one that can stand the pressure. In prosperous time I have no doubt but this is one of the finest countries in the world. Crops grow almost spontaneous, and are very cheap, as you will see by the paper I send you.—In high water this is the head of navigation, but no steamer has been above St. Paul this season, in fact they do not now run above Hastings. A gentleman and his wife waded the river, between here and the rapids, so you can make calculations that it is not as majestic as usual.

Forty-eight days has now passed since a drop of rain landed in this section, consequently the crops look yellow and the farmers blue. One gentleman remarked that he had come to the conclusion that God has forsaken Minnesota. It look gloomy to cast your eye over one of the best farming sections in the world, and see crops dry up and blow away. Such is the case in this part of the State. At Hastings and down the river, they have plenty of rain and bountiful crops. The farmers here, generally, have a supply of old grain, but they don't relish its bread while thinking of that in the field.

The trade and traffic west of this place is immense, for instance, all supplies for Red River, our Goverment and the natives, goes from here, trains are constantly going and coming. The annual train of Red River carts, 400 or 500, have come loaded with furs, robes, buffalo tongues, &c., sold out for $200,000 and bought supplies for $100,000 and returned. This train is the greatest curiosity I ever saw, the carts are wood (or all oak) and they carry about 1400 lbs, and are drawn by an ox harnessed like a dray horse, the whole institution, cart and harness, are their own manufacture, and I think it would cause M. Primrose and Jas. Gilman to smile, should they see them. Thus they transport merchandize, and supplies, 400 or 500 miles, and hunt, fish, trap and dance, gamble and die.—If this train does not prove that "ignorance is bliss" what will? They carry plenty of English Silver which they spend freely.

The all absorbing topic is Indian; they have commenced their infernal work out on the borders and we expect to see similar scenes enacted that startled the world last year; they murdered one family last week between this place and St. Paul; the citizens shot three at Forrest City last Sunday. People are preparing to give "them the last shot." Plenty of guns and amunition have arrived. Government has offered $25, bounty for Sioux scalps, which sum looks very attractive to old trappers and the Chippeway tribe. Hole-in-the day and one hundred warriors are painting to hunt their old enemies, and they will give them what they deserve. The Grand Indian Expedition got up by U. S. Red Tape, at a cost of several millions, are above Arbercrombie going to find Little Crow. Little Crow's men are cutting the throats of settlers one hundred miles in Gen. Sibley's rear.—Many citizens, after they saw the "magnificent humbug" pass through the country, petitioned government to raise an independent brigade, every man to find his own gun, horse, and subsist himself, to draw $1,50 per day and the $25 bounty for each scalp. Thank fortune their prayer was heard, and you will soon hear from Maj. Hatch and his brave scouts.

MORE ANON.

A Frightened Bank Officer.

The porter of a Bank on Broadway, New York, a few evenings ago closed the vault, and shut in the Cashier. The imprisoned man at once set up an outcry, and a clerk fancying that he heard a stifled voice like the intonation of a ventriloquist from the wall opposite the vault, listened. The voice still fainter, "Let me out," was heard, in several parts of the room, and finally traced to the vault. The doors were opened, and the horror stricken Cashier, nearly helpless, pale and weak from fear, exertion and want of air, tottered forth. The five minutes, incarceration, and the terrible thought that he was left to die a lingering death, so changed him that the clerk could scarcely recognize him. He now shudders at the sight of the vault, and has not recovered from the effects of his fright.

An expedition has gone to Alexandria.

The Situation in Virginia.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—The following dispatch from E. A. Paul, the Times' correspondent with the Army of the Potomac, has just been received here:

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, July 25—6 P. M.—The positions of the rebel army are as follows: On Friday morning at 6 a. m. the advances of Hill and Lonstreet's corps reached Culpepper. The columns were well closed up, and their entire corps must be concentrated there before this time

Of the retrograde movement there can be no question. For two days I had a favorable opportunity to take a bird's eye view of both Hill's and Longstreet's commands and on one occasion was quite as near to them as was prudent for a non-combatant. Ewell's corps is understood here to still occupy the Shanandoah Valley, where it is guarding the fords on the Shenandoah and the rear of the rebel army.

The fact is supposed to explain the recent alarm about alleged movements indicating that Lee was not retreating and was indeed preparing to return to Maryland. The Excelsior brigade had a fight yesterday at Ashby's Gap with the enemy, where the latter had both infantry and cavalry. After a brief but severe contest, the enemy were repulsed and a large number of prisoners captured.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY DIVISION, AMISSVILLE, VA. July 25.—Yesterday Gen. Custor, with three regiments of the Michigan brigade under the command of Col. Gray, advanced from this place to Newly's Cross Roads, to reconnoitre the enemy's position—the 5th Michigan being in the advance.

The enemy's pickets were met within half a mile of the Cross road, when the advance guard was dismounted and deployed as skirmishers, and one section of Pennington's battery under Lieut. Clark was placed in position on the crest at the left of the road, supported by the 1st Michigan, Major Brewer.

For half an hour or more, a lively skirmish was kept up, when the advance skirmishers were reinforced by three squadrons from the 5th Michigan, and also the balance of these regiments acting as a reserve. The men thus thrown forward drove the enemy before them until the crest of a hill was reached, near the cross roads, when the enemy opened a brisk fire with artillery, firing shell, grape and cannister, and our advance was checked.

This position was held for at least one hour when, much to the astonishment of all, a regiment of the enemy's infantry appeared in the rear of the 1st Michigan while supporting the artillery above referred to.

Gen. Custor when made aware of this flank movement, at once ordered a charge to be made, which would have been practicable under ordinary circumstances, but just at this point was impracticable, which he very speedidly discovered, and the result was a change of order.

The section of artillery exposed, rapidly moved to the right, while the 1st Michigan remained in the same position until the enemy had fired one volley, and then wheeling to the right into the road, a rapid retrograde movement brought them to the rear and in a place of comparative safety. While this movement was being executed on the left of the road, the two pieces on the crest of the hill in front previously occupied by our skirmishers, opened a galling fire upon our troops with grape and canister at the same time advancing a column of infantry in the same direction. A portion of the right was forced still further to the right, and the left was forced back into the road where the extreme left had preceded it.

The retreat on the right was skillfully conducted by Col Gray, who notwithstanding the excitement of the moment, did not forget to extend protection to the artillery then within the enemy's grasp, and it was consequently saved.

The enemy after this were held in check at every point, while the command having felt the position, fell back to Amissville.

From information received from reliable sources it was ascertained that the column struck the rear of A. P. Hill's command. The advance of Longstreet's corps passed through Thornton Gap and Sperryville Thursday and Friday morning at 6 o'clock reached Culpepper.

Hill's command was immediately in his rear and to-day the cavalry moved up to Gaines' Cross roads, where the enemy's pickets were encountered and driven in, but the main command was beyond reach.

As Gen. Custer's orders were solely to ascertain the position of the enemy, in obedience to orders he fell back to Amissville.

Our loss during the two days' reconnoisance will probably not exceed six killed and thirty wounded.

Lieut. Sabin, of Gen Custer's staff, was severely wounded in the side by a shell, and was left on the field. The enemy saw fit neither to parole him or take him and this morning he was brought in.

During the most exciting time yesterday a horse in front of Col. Gray was killed. Col. Gray's horse fell over the disabled animal, and before the Colonel could regain his feet, he was run over by a whole squadron of lead horses belonging to the skirmishers. His escape from fatal injury is attributed to the fact that many of the horses were bare footed.

WASHINGTON, July 27.—Advices from the Army of the Potomac say that large numbers of horses have been found in the mountain gorges and appropriated by our troops. Our cavalry held the line of the Rappahannock on Saturday between Shelby ford and Waterloo:

The Star says:

On Thursday last while the 3d and 5th army corps of Gen. Meade's army was lying at the north of Manassas Gap, this side, information was received that Gen. Longstreet was sending a brigade of his corps forward in order to possess himself of the Gap.

Gen. Spinola commanding the Excelsior Brigade, with 800 men was at once ordered forward. The Commanding General supposed the rebels were only in small force on and behind the crest of the hill, about one mile from the Gap, between it and Front Royal, and therefore supposed this brigade was sufficient to dislodge the enemy.

About a quarter of a mile from the crest of the hill was a stone wall and behind this there was a small rebel force.—Gen. Spinola at once took an observation of the ground, and after pointing out to his regimental officers the work they would have to perform, he ordered his gallant brigade forward, and with fixed bayonets they rushed forward, when the rebels quickly fled from the hill and took refuge behind the stone wall.

Up to this the brigade rushed also, when from behind it rose a whole brigade of Georgians, and two regiments of North Carolina sharp-shooters, all under the command of Gen. Anderson, but our troops heeded them not, and aimed a shower of rifle bullets and artilery fire in front and on the flank, pushed forward, and with the bayonet drove the rebels from their protection, and sent them scampering over the field. The United States loss was not less than 500 killed, wounded and missing; we had no artillery, while the rebels had at least seventeen pieces."

That night our troops bivouacked on the battle ground and the next morning marched into Front Royal. In this fight it is the opinion of military men that the rebels outnumbered us at least six to one, but they appeared to be completely fagged out. After being dislodged from a stone wall they could not move up a hill on their way in an upright position, but scrambled upon their hands and knees, thus giving our men an opportunity of pouring in an effective fire of which they eagerly availed themselves. In this fight Gen. Spinola received two very severe wounds, one in the right foot, which tore open the heel for three inches, and one through the fleshy part of the right side.

From the Southwest

MEMPHIS, July 26—Biffles and Jesse Forrest are reported to have again crossed the Tennessee river and gone toward Jackson, Tenn. Gen. Grant has sent a force to meet them.

One of Hurlburt's scouts arrived last night, and reports Pemberton and staff and some of his officers gone to Richmond. His army has scattered in every direction. Pemberton said it was impossible to keep them together.

The rebels are pressing everybody into their ranks, and the excitement is intense. The rolling stock on the railroads is all being run toward Mobile. Large quantities of cotton are going in the same direction.

The bulk of Johnston's army is reported at Martin, thirty miles east of Jackson.—His force is estimated at 30,000. All supplies and stores are being shipped to Mobile.

Gens. Hardee and Forrest passed through Meridian on the 8th going to Johnston. Forrest is suffering from a wound and is not fit for duty.

A dispatch dated Martin, Miss. the 20th states that all officers taken at Vicksburg had been exchanged but their men had straggled so that they were without commands.

Hardee's corps are reported going to Johnston, but had not passed Meridian up to the 22d inst.

CAIRO, July 27.—Passengers who arrived from Vicksburg on the 24th, state that Gen. Herron's division had returned from the Yazoo River and were preparing to go to some point further South.—Sherman's old corps still occupied Jackson, but, it was understood, would soon fall back to this side of the Black river. All quiet along the river.

—Mrs. Betsey Brown, the prosecuting witness who charged her pastor, Rev. Wm. Bridgeman of Grandville, Kent county, with attempting improper liberties toward her, has been arraigned for perjury, and put under $1,000 bonds to appear for her trial. The jury convicted the parson of "assault and battery," and he takes this method of retorting on his accuser and vindicating himself.

—162 rebel officers were taken at Port Hudson.

War Items.

CLEVELAND, July 26—Major Way, with 250 of the 9th Michigan Cavalry, forced Morgan to an engagement at 3 o'clock Sunday morning, two miles from Salineville, Ohio, and routed him, capturing 240 prisoners. Morgan, with 800 men escaped, but were all captured by Shackelford at three P. M. Sunday, near New Lisbon. Morgan and staff are now prisoners at Wellsville, Ohio.

CINCINNATI, July 27.—Capt. Hurtt, Assistant Quartermaster at this post, was arrested this morning by order of Gen. Burnside, charged with irregularity in his accounts, and appropriating Government funds for his own use.

FRANKFORT, Ky., July 26.—Hon. John J. Crittenden died at half past three this morning, without pain or a struggle, and in full possession of all his faculties.—His disease was general debility. His age was 77 years.

NEW YORK, July 27.—The Roanoke from Havana the 22d, has arrived. A arrival from Vera Cruz July 13th, at Havana, states that Mexico was declared an empire on the 10th, and Maximilian of Austria, proclaimed Emperor, if he will accept; if not, Napoleon is to select one. Salutes were fired at Vera Cruz in honor of the event.

WASHINGTON. July 27.—The announcement made in a telegram to the Associated Press in the morning papers that 900 men of Col. Morgan's command who were lodged in Camp Chase prison yesterday (the 26th) will be kept there in confinement until the officers of Col. Straight's brigade are released, is officially denied. No such order has been given. The militia men will be kept at Camp Chase until the arrangements for their exchange have been completed,

NEW YORK, July 27.—A special from Cincinnati to-day, says on the authority of Maj. Gen. McCook, that Gen Stanley took only some 300 horses at Huntsville, Ala., and not 3,000 prisoners as stated. Some 300 negroes followed Stanley on his return. Gen. Pillow with a large force of rebel conscripts, was found on the opposite side of the Tennessee river.

The neutral English steamers Fannie, Alice and Alabamma, with cotton from Mobile, had arrived at Havana, and the Spanish stamer Isabel, from St. Marks, also arrived with cotton.

Washington specials state that Gen. Grant is to be appointed Major General in the regular army in the place of Gen. Wool, retired.

Last Night's Mail.

The Secretary of War on the 28th issued an order that John Morgan and his commissioned officers should be confined in the Columbus Penitentiary 'till Col. Straight's officers are released or exchanged by the rebels.

The statement that the rebel general officers captured at Vicksburg have been exchanged is without foundation. The rebels have no officers of equal rank to offer in exchange.

CINCINNATI, July 28.—A special to the Commercial from Lexington, Ky., says that the rebels this morning attacked our forces at Richmond, consisting of a small detachment under Col. Sanders.—After an hour's severe fight our troops were compelled to fall back to the Kentucky river badly cut up. The rebel force is estimated at 2,500 and six guns. They are supposed to be the advance of Bragg's army.

At the latest advices our troops had fallen back within five miles of Lexington, the enemy closely following. Martial law was proclaimed in Lexington today, and all able-bodied citizens between the ages of 18 and 45 are ordered to report for duty. It is thought that the city can be held against the rebels.—Rebel citizens report a rebel force of over 15,000 moving in a Northerly direction via Crab Orchard.

The Gazette's Lexington dispatch says the excitement has subsided. The rebels came to the Kentucky River at Clay's Ferry. Sander's command are nearly all in. Troops from Hickman's Bridge insure the safety of Lexington. Gens. Carter and Gilbert's commands are in the rear of the rebels.

There is nothing stiring from the Army of the Potomac. Meade has the advantage yet, it is generally conceded at Washington. A decisive battle must take place before Lee reaches Richmond. The probability is that he will not reach that place soon unless our victorious army takes him to a taste of the tobacco warehouse prison.

The latest news from Charleston is to the 25th. Sumter and Wagner were replying vigorously to our fire.

Southeastern and Washington papers begin to urge that the rebels are certain to contrate their whole available force now in the army under Gen. Lee, and that therefore for the present the Army of the Potomac should stand purely on the defensive.

Nearly a Serious Accident

Yesterday morning as the Hand Car, in charge of Track-master Godfroy, was passing Main Street, a lady attempted to cross the track, but the car was too fast for her, and caught her clothing and dragged her nearly twelve feet on the track. We did not learn whether she was injured or not. We venture to say that Mr. Godfroy will do all in his power to keep his car off pedestrians. Let others manifest a disposition to give him unobstructed transit.

Here He Comes.

Yes, Here he Comes with a card for the Herald, to inform the old and new settlers that the doors of "Apothecaries Hall" are thrown wide open to supply those with a burning fever, the halt, lame and blind, with the purest Drugs and Medicines ever brought into the western country. Mr. PATTERSON is an old and long tried friend in the business, and has been the instrument of relieving thousands. His gentlemanly little clerks—Jimmy and Alonzo—are always on hand to wait on customers.

To those Interested.

A Box of Hospital Supplies has been forwarded, by MRS C. M. BISSELL, to Benj. Vernon, Esq., Detroit, consisting of Can'd and Dried Fruit, 20 Jars; of Slippers, 2 doz pairs; several half-worn shirts sheets, pocket handkerchiefs, stockings, magazines and papers. For dried fruit we are indebted to the sabbath school scholars, in district No. 6. We saw on some packages the ages of children of 3 and 7 years, who had busied their little hands in drying cherries for the suffering soldiers

Will not other children commence drying apples and send in, from time to time, and they will be forwarded promptly.

—o—

Donation in money from Ridgeway, by Mr. Eaton,	$22 20
By J. DePuy, collected in the street, at the celebration of the fall of Vicksburg,	4 00
	$26 20
Purchased with the above, 190 y'ds. calico amounting to	$26 60
For thread and sending box to Detroit,	1 00
	$27 60

This calico is being made into shirts by the ladies as rapidly as possible, for we have heard that many soldiers are lying in the Hospitals with nothing on but their blankets, and we feel sure that this expenditure will meet with the approbation of the donors, and be gratefully received by the suffering soldiers. C. M. BISSELL.

Serious Accident.

On Friday the 24th inst., Mr. JOSEPH TILDEN, jr., of this place, was drawing wheat to the mills of A. Anderson, in Brownville, and while descending the hill, in front of Van Tine and Smith's Cabinet Shop, one of the hold-back straps of the harness broke and a frightful runaway took place, by which Mr. Tilden was thrown from the wagon and badly injured; one of the hind wheels cutting a bad gash in his head and the other passing over his foot. The first inquiry he made, upon gaining his feet, was for his little son—who was on the load with him, and stuck tight to one of the bags until the horses and wagon finally brought up against the fence of Henry Anderson, when the little fellow cried out—"Golly didn't I hang tight—they couldn't throw me off." Mr. T walked some six or seven rods after gaining his feet before he was apprised of the real amount of his injury, and did not think his head much hurt until informed by Mr. Anderson that the blood was flowing quite freely down his back. Although the injury was very severe, we are glad to learn that he is getting along finely, and with fair prospects of recovery.

State Fair.

We have received the Premium List, and Rules, and Regulations, published in pamphlet form, of the Fifteenth Annual Fair, of the Michigan State Agricultural Society, to be held on the National Park, Kalamazoo, on the the 22d, 23d, 24th, and 25th of September, 1863.

We notice that W. S. Wilcox, is one of the Committee on Cavalry Horses; Henry Hart, on Railroad Rolling Stock; J. J. Newell, on Clocks, Jewelry, Plated Ware, &c., and D. K. Underwood, on Pears,—of Adrian—and comprises all from this county. Tecumseh is left out in the cold.—Why is it? Is it because she has lost all interest in agricultural improvements?—The little town of Jonesville, in Hillsdale county, has fifteen and Hilsdale eleven names on various committees, making 26 in all, from that county. Something must be wrong in old Lenawee—only four.

Tecumseh String Band.

On Monday evening last this well organized band complimented us with a lively serenade, and for us to say that we were not highly pleased and delighted, would be admitting that we had "no music in our soul"; and to say the pieces were not played in a sweet and melodious tone, would be admitting that we were no judge of music. In our time we have attended many musical entertainments, and in none of whom, we must confess, has it been our lot to visit one that could excel the String Band, in Tecumseh, in playing.

We have taken the liberty to publish, in our paper, the names of this excellent quoir—as far as we could learn them. They are as follows: C. Anderson, B. Roberts, W. Gray, S. Beers, C. Burridge; each one of whom will please accept our sincere thanks for their visit.

Godey's Lady's Book.

The August number of this splendid and valuable Magazine, as usual, is around.—Its contents, besides its interesting literary matter, has two more late fashions from the celebrated house of Stewart & Co., New York; a summer wrap and a summer talma, both given for the first time; also, the back and front view of a Spanish Mantilla. The steel plate for this month is "Hallowed be Thy name," a companion for that published some time since, entitled "Our Father, who art in Heaven." Marion Harland's novel of "Husks" is completed in this number, another story from her pen is soon to follow. To our lady readers who wish the best and most complete ladies Magazine, in the world, we recommend Godey: Published by L. A. Godey, Philadlphia: $3 00 per annum. Furnished in connection with the Herald at $2 00.

Atlantic Monthly.

The August number is received. The contents are, in part, "An American in the House of Lords; Theodore Winthrop's Writings; Derby's Debut; Civic Banquets; The Geological Middle Age; The White Throated Sparrow; The Fleur-de-Lis in Florida; Seward; Loves Challenge; Political Problems, and Conditions of Peace."

Any one to find out the value of this publication should subscribe for it a year, and we are certain after reading it that length of time, they would not part with it.

TICKNOR & FIELD, Publishers, Price $3 per annum. Boston, Mass.

Arrangement.

Mr. W. A. NIMOCKS, the former publisher of the Herald, has made arrangements with us to carry out the following advanced subscriptions to him. The number of weeks they are entitled to is set opposite their names, as follows:

Co-partnership.

We the undersigned have this day formed a partnership for the purpose of publishing the St. Cloud Union, and executing printing in general.

WM. H. WOOD,
GEO. S SPAFFORD,

St, Cloud, June 18, 1863.

The above notice we clip from the Union, published in St Cloud, Sterns county, Minnesota. Mr. Wood, the senior partner, we believe established the paper, but finding it difficult to secure a good printer has associated himself with Mr. Geo. S. Spafford, formerly of this village. George, as a printer, is well known to most of you here, and known as a most excellent workman—in which the Union fully demonstrates the fact. He is also apt in shoving the local quill.

George, keep one eye out on the "Ingin's" and the other on the "Eagle," and both on the type, and all will come out right.

Died,

In Ridgeway, Mich., July 18th, aged 25 years, Mrs. MARY, wife of Erastus W. Rappleye, keeper of the Ridgeway Exchange

The funeral obsequies were attended on Sabbath, the 9th inst, by an unusually large, and sympathetic assembly. An able and appropriate address was delivered by Rev. H. G. Blin, formerly pastor of the Presbyterian Church, Tecumseh, Mich.

In this village, on the 22d inst, HARRY LESTER, infant son of Charles K. and Julia Spafford, aged 6 months.

As the bird to its sheltering nest,
When the storm on the hills is abroad,
So his spirit hath flown from this world of unrest,
To repose on the bosom of God.

Michigan State Teachers' Association

The next Annual Meeting of the State Teachers' Association will be held at Marshall, August 18th, 1863. The citizens of Marshall have offered their liberal hospitality to all who may be in attendance.

The different Railroads of the State have in previous years furnished free return tickets to all members of the Association, and it is expected that they will extend a like liberal courtesy at the coming Session.

Michigan Farmer.

This most excellent Farmer and Horticultural paper comes to us this month in quarto form, which is a decided improvement. The farmers in Michigan should, by all means, foster and sustain their home paper, before going abroad, The publishers are doing all in their power to advance your interest and you should reciprocate it by subscribing for the Farmer. Wm. S. Bond & Geo. Snyder, publishers, Detroit, Mich. Terms—Only $1 per annum.

COMMERCIAL.

Since our last report there has been hardly wool enough in our market to establish a price. The range has been from 55 to 65c. Up to this time last year there had been bought in our market about 85,000 pounds against 11,000lbs. this year. Many farmers would sell now at 65c. but buyers don't see any money in it at that price, at present. If farmers would all hold their wool they might possibly bring buyers to terms, but in some locations they are selling for what they can get.

New wheat is coming in quite freely and selling for 95c for red and 100a105c for white. New oats and barley have not made their appearance on our market yet, but prebably will soon, when we shall be able to report prices. It is our opinion that those who sell early will get the best prices.

Gold, in New York, 28th inst., unsettled and a little lower, closing at 27 3-8.

Roback's Stomach Bitters.

It has long been the aim of the physicians to find a combination of medicines having the requisite stimulating and tonic properties to relieve and cure the common complaints of Billiousness, Liver disorders, Languor, Headache, Lowness of Spirits, Indigestion, Jaundice, Fever and Ague, &c., which are the diseases incident to this climate. The remedy has been discovered by Dr. Roback, and in the above complaints, and there is but one voice from the people, and that is in favor of these truly wonderful Stomach Bitters. We advise all who are afflicted and need an agreeable tonic for the troubles above indicated, to commence at once using the Bitters. See advertisement. 8w4

Trying to Please Everybody.

HINTS TO EDITORS,

One reader cries, Your strain's too grave,
Too much morality you have,
Too much about religion
Give me some witch or wizard tales,
Of slip-slop ghost with fins and scales,
And features like a pigeon:

I love to read another cries,
Those monstrous fashionable lies—
In other words those novels,
Composed of kings, and priests and lords,
Of border wars, and gothic hordes
That used to live in hovels

The man of dull scholastic lore
Would like to see a little more
Of first rate scraps of Latin;
The grocer frain would learn the price
Of tea and sugar, fruit and rice:
The draper, silk and satin.

Another cries we want more fun,
A witty anecdote or pun,
A rcubus or a riddle;
Some wish for parliamentary news;
And some, perhaps, of wiser views,
Would rather hear a fiddle.

Another cries, I want to see
A jumbled up variety,
Variety in all things—
A miscellaneous hodge podge print,
Composed, I only give the hint,
Of multeferious small things.

I want some marriage news says miss;
It constitutes my highest bliss,
To hear of weddings plenty,
For in the time of general rain
None suffer from a drouth its plain,
At least not one in twenty.

I want to hear of deaths, says one,
Of people totally undone
By losses fire or fever,
Another answers, full as wise,
I'd rather have the fall and rise
Of raccoon skins and beaver.

Some signify a secret wish
For now and then a favorite dish
Of politics to suit them;
But here we rest at perfect ease,
For should they swear the moon was cheese
We never should confute them.

Or grave or humorous, wild or tame
Lofty or low, 'tis all the same,
Too haughty or too humble;
So brother editors, pursue
The path that seems the best to you,
And let the grumblers grumble.

A Wonderful Clock.

A good compliment was paid to the electro magnetic watch-clock, by a distinguished scientific gentleman—one of that party that accompanied Gen. McClellan, when he visited the Pacific Mills at Lawrence. One of these clocks in that establishment records the duty of four separate watchers, or men who perambulate about 16 acres of flooring and all outside premises: the record shows the position of every watchman at every moment during the night, and the length of time which was occupied in going from room to room. One of the record dials was under examination, which showed that at a certain part of the mills, a previous night, one of the men had suffered a long time to elapse between his visit to one room and the next. When the man was told in the morning just when and where he had been derelict of duty, he confessed that he had then and there fallen asleep. "Ah," said the man of science referred to, "this invention should not be called a clock, but a "mechanical conscience.

Foolscap.

Everybody knows what foolscap paper is; but few probably know how it came to bear this singular cognomen. When Charles I, found his revenue short, he granted certain privileges, with a view to recruit them, amounting to monopolies, and among these was the manufacture of paper, the exclusive right of which was sold to certain parties, who grew rich and enriched the Government also at the expense of those who were obliged to use paper. At this time all English paper bore in water marks the royal arms.—The parliament under Cromwell made jests of this law in every conceivable manner; and, under indignities to the memory of King Charles, it was ordered that the royal arms be removed from the paper, and the "fool's cap and bells" be substituted These, in their turn were also removed when the Rump Parliament was prorogued; but paper of the size of the Parliament Journal still bears the name of "foolscap."

Raw Hide.

How few persons know the value of raw hides! It seems almost strange to see them sell all their "deacon" skins for the small sum of about thirty or forty cents. Take a strip of well tanned raw hide an inch wide and a horse can hardly break it by pulling back—two of them he cannot break any way. Cut into narrow strips and shave the hair off with a sharp knife, to use for bag strings, the strings will outlast two setts of bags. Farmers know how perplexing it is to lend bags and have them returned minus strings.—It will outlast hoop iron (common) in any shape and is stronger. It is good to wrap around a broken thill—better than iron Two sets of raw hide halters will last a man's life time—if he don't live too long. In some places the Spaniards use raw hide log chains to work their cattle with cut into narrow strips, and twisted together hawser fashion. It can be tanned so that it will be soft and pliable like harness leather.

DETROIT ADVERTISER & TRIBUNE.

PUBLISHED

DAILY, TRI-WEEKLY AND WEEKLY.

The oldest newspaper in Detroit, now in its 34th year—the Advertiser having been established in 1829.

In July last, by the consolidation of the Daily Advertiser and Daily Tribune, a circulation larger than heretofore enjoyed by any paper in Michigan was attained. Since then a corps of editors has been secured second to none engaged on any western paper. Some have been employed for years on leading Eastern papers, and bring a rich fund of experience to the columns of the Advertiser & Tribune

Our expenses for telegraphic despatches are larger than those of any other in Detroit and more than seven times the amount paid by any one paper a year ago. In fact we now publish simultaneously with them, besides the regular Associated Press dispatches, all the most valuable of the special dispatches that are sent to the Philadelphia Inquirer Pittsburg Gazette, Cincinnati Gazette, St. Louis Democrat, and Chicago Tribune—the five leading papers in the cities in which they are published, And for enterprise not a whit behind the New York journals Almost daily it occurs that we obtain news by special dispatches twelve hours in advance of the Associated Press, of the correctness of which statement we refer to the numerous readers of our Daily. In this city, where both the daily papers are habitually read by all parties, it is generally conceded that the dispatches of the Advertiser & Tribune are the most reliable and satisfactory of any published in Detroit.

We are now sparing no expense and intend to spare none to place the Advertiser & Tribune in the first rank as a newspaper Particular attention is given to State news, and to intelligence from our soldiers in the army, a correspondent being maintained in every Michigan Regiment.

Politically the Advertiser & Tribune looks to the salvation of the country by the energetic prosecution of the war now waged against the accursed rebellion of the South. On humanitarian grounds, as a war measure, and as a safeguard for the future quiet of the nation, it upholds the Presidents Emancipation Proclamation, and all other war measures of the Government; and while it admits the propriety of friendly criticisms, it holds that no direct and active opposition to the Government is consistent with loyalty, or should be tolerated in the North any more than in the States engaged in the rebellion.

As a commercial paper we aim to make the Advertiser and Tribune the best paper in the State and have employed to conduct this department a man of large experience and reputation. This will make the paper particularly acceptable to farmers, as well as merchants and millers.

Our facilities for printing a large edition have lately been greatly increased by the erection of the fastest press in use in this city, and our circulation is keeping pace with our capacity to print.

TERMS.

DETROIT DAILY ADVERTISER AND TRIBUNE.

To Mail Subscribers $2 00 per Quarter.

Contains twenty-two columns of reading matter including local news, telegraph reports, State and miscellaneous items, army correspondence, copious details of war and foreign news, editorial articles, personal and political items, commercial and marine intelligence etc. etc.

Detroit Tri-Weekly Advertiser & Tribune

To Mail Subscribers $1 00 per quarter; 10 copies to one address $8 75 per Quarter.

Published every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday

Contains about thirty columns of news, comprising all the most important matter of the daily issue. This edition is wel suited to farmers, merchants, and others living at a distance from a post office, or who are reached only by tri-weekly mails. It is becoming very popular throughout the State—so much so that it has increased in circulation about one thousand copies within eleven months.

Detroit Weekly Advertiser and Tribune.

$1 50 per year within the State. 20 copies to one address $25 00. Papers sent to soldiers in the army for $1 00 per year.

The Weekly is printed in quarto form, and is as large as any of the New York Weeklies. It is made up of articles carefully selected from the daily edition, and contains besides, a carefully prepared review of the news of the week, full commercial reports, a story, and a large amount of interesting miscellany, poetry, etc.

Every one wanting a good State paper should send for the

Cording,

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seem, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals and also under all circumstances to survive the wash-tub."

A patented device of great utility to learners, prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong:

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it.—Phila. Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder.—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines.—Pennsylvanian.

"This Machine, in the opinion of the committed, fills more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs', as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21, 1860.

"After much wear and many washings the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, svenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others"—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experience in our own family"—Boston Traveller

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable"—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well-merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette

"We esteem it the best machine for family use The stitch is unexceptionable."—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

I could furnish any quantity of testimonials of its efficiency from from my own patients, but the practice of parading bought and ficticious ones before the public is so prevalent I do not deem it advisable. My object is to place my medicine before the public, not alone to make money, but to do good. It is proverbially true of the American Ladies, that not ten perfectly healthy ones may be found in any one vicinity.

The Farmer.

Does the farmer dig the dirt?
Aye, aye;
Does he wear a coarse shirt?
Aye, aye;
And if his cheek is brown,
With the kisses of the sun,
Is he less a gentleman?
Nay, nay.

Does the farmer plow and sow,
Aye, aye;
Does he wield the spade and hoe,
Aye, aye,
And if his hand is hard,
And his feet be roughly shod,
Shall we give him less regard,
Nay, nay.

Does the farmer work for all,
Aye, aye,
Labors he for great and small,
Aye, aye,
If from out the farmer's store,
Comes the bread for rich and poor,
Shall we honor him the more,
Yea, yea.

Give the Farmer then his dues,
Aye, aye,
Though he serves, he's master too,
Aye, aye,
And may Heaven its blessings shed
Down upon the farmer's head.
'Till we cease our cry for bread,
Aye, aye.

JENNY IRWIN.

"Who Sitteth in Judgment?"

THE STORY OF AN OUTCAST.

'Three picayunes and a dime—enough for a rope, and enough for a dose of the 'never-wake-again!' Ha, ha, ha! Let me think!'

The room was a wretched one; the furniture none save a broken table, a broken chair, and a miserable pallet, without covering of any kind, which lay huddled in the darkest corner. The cold wind of a late December day swept unbarred through the broken pane, and [illegible] an occasional rough, uncovered floor.—Misery was written everywhere, upon the soiled and dusty table, upon the damp and smoke-blacked walls, upon the frosty pane, and on the long un-warmed or fire lit hearth. It seemed to speak from every crevice, to cry in every gust, to breathe from every corner, and to whisper hoarsely and mournfully down the chimney and through the broken and hingeless door. But no where else did it seem to dwell, or give outward manifestations with a tithe of the terrible power that it did in the solitary tenant of this desolate room.

Near the window, on the broken chair, leaning the wasted arms upon the table, with her wan cheek, pressed hard against her tight-clasped hands, and a few small coins laying before her, sat a woman upon whose face and form the short but wretched experience of a life of five-and-twenty winters had stamped the lines and cares of forty miserable years.

'Three picayunes and a dime,' she said, 'enough for a rope, and enough for a dose of the 'never-wake-again.' Let me think, let me think:' and the poor Magdalen sat, while the day grew dimmer and the snow fell faster, drifting oftener into the window and thus soliloquized upon her wretched fate.

'Three picayunes and a dime! He little knew, perhaps, when he threw the paltry pittance to the miserable beggar who crossed his path, that he had put the dagger in his victim's hand to finish the tragedy which had began.

'This is Christmas Eve! Only eight years to-night since I was a girl of many hopes, and proud, oh, how proud, that he called me fair. Only eight years ago to night, and I sat at a different board from this. Let me drink from this vile bottle which has so often drowned my misery, perhaps it may bring back something of the joy which then was mine.

'I remember it well. He came with my brother Dick; he sat near me at the board, and I—well, well, I'll think of that; 'twere better not, or I may forget what this might of all 'twere better I remembered. Ah, Jenny Irwin, you have never thought before!

'Will the world believe to-morrow when the tale is told, that she—the outcast, in rage brutalized, debased, miserable? Would it be believed that man ever called me beautiful? would it be thought that I was once the beloved of a mother, the idol of a father's heart? Ah me! I grow sick to think of it all. Here, another drink!

'The night is growing very dark—a 'merry Christmas forsooth! Where shall I go?

'And yet, when I think, for very shame I would not be found looking thus by him. It matters not now what becomes of this bauble, I have kept it for many years as something to bind me to the past. I have nothing more to do with that now,—nothing with the past—nothing more!'

The woman drew a rich diamond cross from her bosom, fastened by a piece of common twine around her neck, which flashed from the rays of a street-lamp through the window, in strange contrast to the misery of all around.

The night had now set in, and the room would have been quite dark but for the light of the lamps in the street. The snow was falling steadily, drifting into the room through the window, and down the broken and unused chimney.

'Yes, yes,' the woman went on holding the cross in her hand, and looking at it through streaming tears, 'I have been starving sick, homeless, friendless, dying for bread, or something to quench my thirst, and yet never have parted with this. How many times the temptation has come to me, and how many times have I said to myself, 'My mother's blessing shall never leave me, for she gave it with the cross.' Has it never felt me? Ah! who can tell? If my heart has grown hard, and harsh, and cruel, if my conscience has ceased to judge and warn as when a child, if my lips have forgotten the early prayers which she taught, and now only utter curses and bitter oaths, if the cup is my only comfort, and crime grown so accustomed that I know it not, can that mothers blessing still dwell with me? No, no, no, the blessing has long since left me, and the bauble may as well go now. Let it all be finished now, while my brain is clearer than it has lately been. The night grows very cold, let me think!'

The woman sat a long, long, while in silence; the night grew [illegible] drifting [illegible] the sound of the merry bells of passing sleighs; the hearty salutation of the passers by, wishing each chance-met friend, a merry Christmas eve; the mellow laughter of the home-returning apprentice boys, stopping to exchange an occasional snow-ball; and the jolly chorus of some German youths, who sung the Christmas songs of fatherland, alone broke the stillness of the night, but they woke no happy response in the heart of Jenny Irwin. Her mind was busy with darker thoughts, and none of the genial influences of the sweetest night of all the year would ever bring back to her the joyous emotion which filled her soul when life with her was bright and pure, and she was thought the fairest girl of all who graced the merry board of Christmas eve.

'It must be so,' she said at length rising with difficulty from the chair, and putting on her tattered shawl and faded bonnet; 'it must be so, my last game may as well be played now; I have nothing more to win, nothing to loose!

Out into the desolate night she goes, shivering and staggering with cold, and misery, and pain. Forth into the street; a moment she paused in irresolution at the threshold, a moment she shrinks from the bitter storm, and then with compressed lips, and shawl drawn tightly about her, she hurries on The passer by turn aside and give her the pathway, as, with head bent down, she makes her way thro' the snow. Some turn aside to look at her, and sigh to think of her misery; some greet her with ribald jests and course salutations, but nothing of sympathy, or kindness, or jibes, or any words for evil or for good, can ever make her pause or turn from the errand on which she is bound.

In a narrow and dirty street, where the few lamps burn dimly, and the faithful guardians of the night but seldom venture, where crime and misery have their constant abode and the air reeks ever with the unwholesome vapers of all the concomitants of wretchedness, there stands a high and gloomy house, whose barred and bolted windows are seldom opened to the light of day, and whose threshold is never crossed save by the poor applicant who seeks by the barter of some needful trifle to keep the wolf but little longer from the door.' The little gil' balls which hang over the door tell plainly enough the calling of its occupants, and they tell too, to him who may pause to think volumes of misery, which I pray, reader, you nor I may never know. Like the ignis fatus; they have shown on many a heart-sick traveller over the great moor of life, and kindling up from time to time some little hope, have led him farther and farther from the path of safety, until dispoiled of all to care for, and separated from all cares for him, he has sunk exhausted in the marsh of misery and crime never to rise again.

Before this door the poor, half-frozen outcast stands; it was no unaccustomed place to her; it had swallowed up little by little all her store, and year after year the wages of her misery had been put in irredeemable pawn, till it might almost be said the youth, and health and beauty of Jenny Irwin were mouldering among the gaudy trinkets and faded finery which filled this house unto its very roof. The door partly opens to her summons, and after a quick scrutiny the chain is withdrawn, and she enteres.

An aged Isralite stands behind the high counter and waits for her application, watching the while with something of a pity in his look, but more of crafty distrust.

'What will you give me on this? she said, taking the cross from her bosom.

The wily Hebrew reached his bony hand across the counter, and taking the jewel examined it with great care, the poor woman meanwhile standing and watching his face with a strange look of anxiety and ill-suppressed emotion.

'What will I give on this?' he returned sharply. 'If I give you what you deserve, it would be a lodging in the Tombs We do not receive stolen goods.'

'Liar, liar!' shouted the woman, springing forward to clutch the jewel; 'you know better; you know well whatever else she may be, Jenny Irwin is not a thief Here, give me back the cross! give it to me back! you must not trifle with me now!' and springing upon the counter, she was about to snatch the treasure from the old man's hand, when the door of the back room opened, and [illegible] her up large, powerful [illegible] placed her again upon the floor.

'What means this?' she said; and seeing the cross in the old man's hand, she seemed to understand the whole.—'Where did you get it, child?' she asked. 'Here, sit down, and tell me all about it;' and she reached her a chair.

Jenny took the proffered seat, and pressing both hands upon her heart, went on with panting voice and said:

'I did not steal the cross; it was the last gift of my mother; I have never parted with it; to night I am to see a friend, an old, dear friend; I have not seen him for a long time; I wish to appear somewhat as I used to; I wish some clothes just for to-night, and I thought—I thought I would come to you, and—get some things, and a little money, only for to-night, or a few days; and then I, perhaps, could pay it all back, and—you would never lose; I am not a thief.

She paused, and looked up with an expression of painful anxiety, in the woman's face.

'If I give you clothes and money, before morning you will get on one of your sprees, and he carried drunk to the station again,' the woman replied.

'I shall never be carried drunk to the station again—never!' was the response, with much of sadness in the tone. 'Look in my face, and she drew her long, disheveled, moistened hair with both hands back from her forehead; do I look as though I would get drunk to-night?'

The woman looked at her, and shook her head in silence; she saw an expression there which she had never seen before. At length, she got up, and going behind the counter, talked long and earnestly in a whisper to the old man. After a while, she returned, and seating herself beside her visitor, said:

'Now, Jenny Irwin, I want you to tell me the truth; do you really wish this money for the purpose you state? You wouldn't be such a fool, would you, as to go cutting up any theatrical suicides, or anything of that sort, would you?'

'Mrs. Levi, I tell you the truth, I am to meet an old friend; I would appear well to him to-night; I expect to be better off after I see him; this is God's truth!'

'Very well, say no more child; you shall have your clothes and some money. How much do you want?'

'Give me my black dress, my velvet hat, one of those new pair of boots, my black mantilla, some under clothes, a pair of my best silk hoes, a couple of handkerchiefs a pair of gloves and twenty dollars—this is all I ask, and here, you may keep all these as an additional security, and she drew a large package of pawn tickets from her pocket, and placed them in the woman's hand.

'And there is one more favor I would ask, Mrs. Levi, if you would be so kind—I have paid you a great deal of money the last five years—would you give me the use of a room to dress in? I have nowhere to go.'

There was something so different in the words and manners of Jenny Irwin, from what they had lately been that the good Mrs. Levi's heart was touched, and she gave her all she asked. Perhaps she saw dim visions of future 'pledges,' which would come through the 'old friend,' of her once profitable client; perhaps there might have been some feeling of compunction to witness the suffering, and misery, and complete life-wreck of the shivering woman who pleaded for the temporary use of what had once been her own.

The articles were soon selected, and leading her to the room, Mrs. Levi assisted her in many little offices in a kinder manner than she had ever done before. As she afterwards said, 'it seemed as though she was made to do it—she couldn't tell how.'

TO BE CONTINUED.

Now I Lay me Down to Sleep.

There are probably no four lines in the English language that are repeated so many times daily as the following:

"Now I lay me down to sleep,
I pray the Lord my soul to keep,
If I should die before I wake,
I pray the Lord my soul to take."

And it is not only children and youth that repeat them—Many whose heads are "silvered over with age," have been accustomed to repeat them as their last prayer before closing their eyes in sleep, every night since they were taught them in infancy. Ex-President Adams was among that number. A Bishop of the Methodist church, in [illegible] that little prayer every night since his mother taught it to him when he was a little boy.

In conversing recently with a ship master over seventy years a deacon in the Church, he said that when he followed the seas; and even before he indulged a hope that he was a Christian, he never lay down in his berth at night without saying with great seriousness, and he thought sincerity,

"Now I lay me down to sleep,'

He felt so strongly his need of religion, and his danger without it, that he used always to read his Bible, and place that precious book under his pillow at night, and often to kiss the sacred volume, trusting, no doubt in this reverence for the word of God, instead of trusting alone in the Saviour

Let every reader learn, and every night repeat that little prayer—

"Now I lay me down to sleep."

A Sick Bachelor.

The New York Times thus heads a long article on this subject:—

"A sick Bachelor! A dying camel in the desert. A sailor on a hencoop in the middle of the Atlantic! All the same.—The same incident from different points of view. The same subject with varied accessories. If there is preponderance of misery on any side it is on the sick bachelor. The camel, however intelligent it may be, is still scarcely as sensitive as the human sufferer, and the sailor floating on a hencoop a thousand miles from land, is at least spared the misery of knowing that there is help within call. The sick bachelor is the ne plus ultra of human misery."

Gave Him Up.

Are you an Odd Fellow?

No, sir, I have been married for two weeks.

I mean do you belong to the Order of Odd Fellows?

No, I belong to the Order of Married Men.

Mercy, how dumb. Are you a Mason?

No, I am a carpenter, by trade.

Worse and worse, are you a Son of Malta?

Bother you, no, I am a son of Mr. John Gosling.

The querist went away.

☞ A young man engaged in teaching mutes was explaining by signs the use and meaning of the particle 'dis' and requested one of them to write on the black board a sentence showing her knowledge of the sense of the prefix. A bright little one immediately stepped forward and wrote the following: Boy love to play but girls love to dis play.

☞ An Irishman being asked by his angry master what he did to the dog every day to make him cry out as if cruelly treated, replied. 'Cruelly trait him, ye honor?—not I! I never could hurt a poor dumb cratur in my life, but yer honor bade me cut his tail, and so I cut only a little bit off every day, to make it more easy for him.'

A Smart Woman.

The Chattanooga Advertiser relates the following:

A nice, respected lady, not a thousand miles away, had long noticed, to her dismay, that her "woser half" was growing foolishly suspicious and jealous of her.—She resolved to teach him a lesson.—Some evenings since as he was leaving, she told him he need not hurry back—she would not be lonesome—she wished her ducky to enjoy himself. Benedict smelt a veritable 'mire' under that hypocrisy, and resolved to be avenged. About eight o'clock an individual about his size might have been seen cautiously creeping along to the door, and noiselessly. Benedict peeped in. Just as he expected.—There they were a pair of boots, a coat on the back of a chair, and a hat on the table. Benedict shook like an aspen leaf as he stopped, pulled off his boots, and drew a pistol from his coat pocket. With "resolution flashing from his eye," he made tracks for the bed room. There he was, kneeling at the bed side, coat and vest off, and his head on the pillow. Miserable villain! his time had come.

"Say your prayers villain, your time is short"—and a flash and report told that the bullet had sped on its fatal mission.

"Help! murder! watch! oh is that you?" and Madame popped her little head up from the foot of the bed. Benedict seized the body and it was made up for his collation.

"I say, dear, what does all this mean?" exclaimed the husband, with a blank sheepish look.

"Well, dear" replied the wife, "I did get lonely after all, and just amused myself by dressing up that pupper, and making believe you were at home. I'm sure I didn't think you'd suspect'—

"There, there," said the chagrined husband, "say no more about it, I thought it was a robber, dear creature, I'm so glad it didn't hit you." &c., and went to bed, resolved not to watch any more at present.

Rosecrans.

During the advance from Nashville, Rosecrans had given orders that no fires be built. He had the habit of riding around the outposts of the army to observe how his orders were kept. So, on the 29th of December, 1862, while riding along the top of a hill, alone, on the very extremity of our right, just below him he saw a fire with a party of men gathered around it.

"Hallo, boys! what regiment do you belong to?"

'Second Michigan infantry," replied the soldiers not knowing who he was, as owing to the darkness they could only see he was a mounted man, and no more.

"Haven't you heard the orders about making fires boys?"

"Yes; but we thought we would make a little coffee. Besides the 'Butternuts' can't see us here."

Just as he said this a shell from one of the enemy's batteries, the gunners of which had observed the light, fell into the very centre of the little crowd and bursting, killed and wounded four of them.

"That's right boys!" cried the General, "make your coffee, break the orders, and catch shells!'

A Good Joke.

Two Irishmen, on landing in this country and sitting down to their first dinner on shore, found on the table a dish of prepared mustard, which neither of them had happened to meet before. One of them took a spoonful at a venture, which quickly brought a deluge of tears to his eyes.

"What are you crying about?' asked his companion

"I was crying at the recollection of my poor father, who was hung about twenty years ago.

The dinner proceeded, and soon the other made a dip into the mustard, with a similar result.

"What are you crying about? was the grave inquiry of his comrade.

"I am crying because you were not hung when your father was.

John Morgan and his Band

From the Cincinnati Commercial July 28.—The anxiously looked for party arrived last night, shortly after 10 o'clock over the Little Miami railroad, guarded by troops under Gen. Shackelford, the captor of Morgan and Cluke, with their staffs and orderlies, amounting in all to thirty one persons. On disembarking from the train they were taken in charge by a detachment of the 11th Ohio.

A large crowd was assembled at the depot, and as the prisoners moved, immense numbers were constantly added to it. When they marched down Ninth street not less than 5,000 persons surrounded the famous guerrilla and his aids. Many of these lookers on seemed excited and cried, "Hang the out throat." "Bully for the horse thief." Several of the spectators were flourishing pistols, but the guard quickly drove them away.

The field band of the 11th discoursed "Yankee Doodle" on the march, which the prisoners endured with complete sang froid. Morgan, on the way, interrogated the Captain commanding the guard, concerning the whereabouts of his brother. His questions on that point being answered, he turned and said: "Pass up that whiskey." The whisky was passed forward in a canteen which the General proffered to the Captain, who politely refused. The General then took a long pull.

They were ensconced in the City Pris. on shortly before 11 o'clock. Before locking them up they were deprived of a large number of pistols, which they stated they had been permitted to retain by the terms of surrender There was about a bushels of pistols, all loaded, stowed away in the office of the City Prison last night, all of them revolvers, many of the officers carrying a brace.

Morgan is fully six feet high, and of prepossessing though not imposing presence. He was attired in a linen coat, black pants, white shirt and a light felt hat. No decorations were visible. He has rather a mild face, there being certainly nothing in it to indicate the possession of unusual intellectual qualities.

Col. Cluke is very tall, rising probably two inches over six feet. He was attired much after the manner of his chief. He is slender, has sandy hair, and looks like a man of invincible determination.—His countenance is not devoid of certain savage lines, which correspond well with his barbarities as a leader.

The whole lot is a counter part of the squads we have heretofore seen of the same command. The same motly dress and the same decorous behavior (no great merit in this last trait) distinguishes them.

Protection to Soldiers.

The following General Order, No. 252, of the President is published for the information and government of all concerned:

Executive Mansion. Wash. July 30.

It is the duty of every Government to give protection to its citizens, of whatever class, color or condition, especially those who are duly organized as soldiers in the public service. The law of nations and the usages and customs of war, as carried on by civilized powers, permit no distinction as to color in the treatment of prisoners of war as public enemies. To sell or enslave any captured person on account of his color, and for no offence against the laws of war, is a relapse into barbarism and a crime against the civilization of the age. The Government of the United States will give protection to all its soldiers, and if the enemy shall sell or enslave any one because of his color, the offense shall be punished by retaliation upon the enemy's prisoners in our posession.

It is therefore ordered that for every soldier of the United States killed in violation of the laws of war, a rebel soldier shall be executed; and for every one enslaved by the enemy, or sold into slavery, a rebel soldier shall be placed at hard labor on the public works, and confined at such labor until the other shall be released and receive the treatment of a prisoner of war.

Signed ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

The Harvest in France.

A letter says the accounts received from various parts of France agree in the fact that the appearance of the crops is more promising than has been witnessed for a long time. The weather during the past week has been most favorable and if heavy and unseasonable rains do not stop the ripening of the corn, retard the harvest or wet the grain when reaped, there is every certainty of a most abundant harvest. In the south of France the wheat is several weeks more forward than usual, the bread has been made in Paris from this year's wheat, grown in the neighborhood of Aries. About a month or six weeks ago were complaints of the want of rain. Rain came, however at the very moment it was required. The moisture was timely and not excessive; it was sufficient to nourish the grain, and if no more falls the corn will necessarily be heavy. The central departments are looked upon in some sort as the granary of France, and from these departments we learn that the crops of all kinds are "magnificent." The north is not a corn growing district par excellence, and some disquiet prevailed there for a short time; it has now disappeared. The disquiet was caused by the appearance of rust, but the disease has yielded to the return of a warmer temperature. In a word, nearly all the advices from the country express great satisfaction at the prospect of the harvest. The corn market shows a tendency to a fall in prices.

New Postage Regulations.

In order that our readers who are not officially connected with the mail service may have a full understanding of the changes in postal matters effected by the new law, which went into operation on the first of the present month, we give below a condensed summary of those of its provisions of which it is necessary for persons using the mails to 'take due notice and govern themselves accordingly.'

1. The rate of postage on all domestic mail letters to be carried any distance within the United States is now three cents per half ounce or fraction thereof, to be prepaid by stamps. The former rate of ten cents to California, Oregon and Washington Territory is abolished.

2. All local or drop letters must hereafter be prepaid by stamps, at the rate of two cents for every half ounce or fraction thereof, instead of one cent each, as heretofore.

3. The postage on transient newspapers and periodicals, sent in one package to one address, is now two cents for each four ounces or fraction thereof, to be prepaid by stamps; on books, double that rate. The postage on single transient newspapers not weighing over four ounces is now two cents.

4. The rate of postage on circulars is now as follows: Three or any less number may be sent, unsealed, to one address, at the single rate of two cents, and in that proportion for a greater number, adding one rate for every three circulars directed to one address. They can no longer be sent at the former rate of one cent each. No extra charge is now made for business cards stamped or printed on the envelopes of circulars.

5. All communications to any officer or department of the Government (including the President,) written by a private citizen, whether on 'official business' or otherwise, must now be prepaid by stamps.

6. A fee of twenty cents (instead of five as heretofore) must hereafter be paid on each registered letter in addition to the postage.

7. A letter cannot be forwarded without a charge of extra postage when it has once been mailed according to its original address.

A Conviction.

On Wednesday last, in the Circuit Court of the United States, sitting at Louisville, Ky., Thomas C. Shacklett, indicted for treason against the United States, was found guilty, and sentenced by the Hon. Bland Ballard, presiding Judge, as follows:

You were arrested at or near your home—not in arms—away from the lines of the enemy, and have been brought before the civil tribunal of your country to have your guilt or innocence adjudged. You have been found guilty, and the enormity of your offense would justify the infliction of the highest punishment know to the laws. In all other countries the laws, it is believed, require judgment of death to be pronounced against all who are found guilty of treason. But our good government, in the exercise of that magnanimity which has always characterized it, and in view of the different drgrees of guilt which the judgment of mankind does and will attach to those who incited and set on foot this war, and those who were their instruments, has vested in the courts a discretion and authorized them to pronounce either judgment of death or imprisonment and fine. In the exercise of that discretion, and under a full sense of my responsibility to God and my country, I have concluded to spare your life, but the magnitude of your crime demands that your punishment be severe. The judgment which I approve, and which the court now makes, is, that you be imprisoned and confined in the jail of Jefferson county, in the State of Kentucky, for ten years from this day; that you make your fine to the United States by the payment to them of ten thousand dollars, and that your slaves be free.'

The Game Law.

There seems to be some misunderstanding in regard to the provisions of the Game Law That statute was amended at the last session of the Legislature. We print section two of the law as it now stands, that our readers may fully understand the matter:

'No person or persons shall kill, destroy or take, or pursue with the intent to kill, destroy or take, by any means whatever, any wild turkey, between the first day of February and the first day of September; or any woodcock between the first day of March and the first day of July; or any patridge, ruffed grouse or pheasant between the first day of February and the first day of September; or any prairie chicken or pinnated grouse, or any wild goose, duck or swan, between the first day of February and the fifteenth day of August; or any quail between the first day of January and the first day of October in each and every year: Provided, That no person or persons shall, at any time during the year, kill, or destroy with a punt or swivel gun, any of the game protected by this section.'

The penalty for violating the above section is five dollars fine for every animal or bird killed.

Gen. Lew Wallace of Indiana has called for a Court of Inquiry regarding his conduct at the battle of Pittsburg Landing, predicating his action upon Gen. The Man of Destiny.

It would be amusing, were it not too serious a matter to excite a smile, to read the shrewd reflections of the Press on the designs of Louis Napoleon—"the Man of Destiny"—in regard to Mexico, and this continent generally. We have read all that has come to our hands, both English and American interpretations of his intentions, and we must confess that we are not enlightened, in the least, respecting the present or prospective policy of the French Emperor towards Mexico.—That he will pursue any policy, on this continent or in Europe, that he regards as safe and which he believes will increase the material interests and glory of France, and especially his own aggrandizement we may well conceive from his past history. In one respect he is a greater man than Napoleon I. He has more prudence; and it is this quality of his mind combined with other great mental abilities that makes him the most formidable man of modern times. No one but a really great man—we do not use the term in a purely moral sense—could have performed the work that Louis Napoleon has accomplished in Europe. Under the weak and vacillating rule of Louis Philippe, France had fallen so low in the scale of nations, that the Great Powers of Europe scarcely deigned to treat her with respect. England openly insulted her with impunity on the Egyptian Turkish Question, and Austria sneered at her remonstrances respecting the encroachments, and iron rule of that Power in Italy. But from the hour that Louis Napoleon was firmly established as Emperor of France, his subjects discovered that they had a Ruler who would be obeyed, and Europe discovered, also, that France was a Power that could no longer be slighted or insulted with safety. Almost his first act of foreign policy was to send an army to Rome ostensibly for the purpose of protecting the Pope against the insurrectionary republicans, but in reality to watch and weaken Austria at the Papal See.

This, unquestionably, was the first step in a great plan conceived in his fertile brain to curb the gigantic power of Austria by separating Italy from the House of Hapsburg. For, in after days, when the comparatively small army of Italians aided by the vast forces of France, in two tremenduous battles, drove the shattered troops of Austria almost within their quadrangular fortifications at the base of the Alps, Louis Napoleon compelled the Emperor of Austria to surrender up Lombardy—the choicest jewel of his crown, with upwards of 8000 square miles of territory and nearly 3,000,000 of population. Thus effectually crippling the power of Austria in Italy, we trust forever, and laying a substantial foundation for the gradual consolidation of all Italy into one Kingdom under the liberal rule of Victor Emanuel the representative of Italian nationality.

Again, the policy of Louis Napoleon, during the Crimean war, resulted in France obtaining all the glory and England all the humility and mortification of an expensive campaign apparently fruitless so far as her material interests were concerned—a campaign that terminated in some degree of cordiality and friendship between Russia and France, but in bitter hatred on the part of Russia to England.

In closing, we may remark that Louis Napoleon has not failed in any enterprise that he has undertaken. Mexico may become another Algeria for France despite the "Monroe docrine," unless the administration can speedily subdue the rebellion and threaten the "Man of Destiny" with two or three hundred thousand bayonets on the borders of the Gulf of Mexico.

BIG SWINDLE IN CINCINNATI.—A very smooth and engaging young Englishman named M. H. A. Atkin, who has been engaged in business at Cincinnati for some time past, both on his own account and in partnership with others, left last Saturday evening for parts unknown, having first, by fraudulent means, secured a sum of money belonging to his mercantile acquaintances, variously estimated at $20,000 to $30,000. Mr. Cassidy, with whom he has been in partnership about two months, is among the victims. Atkin borrowed money of his acquaintances; and bought flour, and by vouchers raised money on it, before he had paid for it—Thus taking advantage of some of the loose customs of trade, he has swindled several dealers out of considerable amounts He was a single man, about 30 years of age, and lived with his parents.

An Irish relief fund of $707 has been contributed at Houghton, Lake Superior and forwarded to the sufferers in the "Emerald Isle."

Death of John D. Campbell.

From the Expositor.

Scarcely had our citizens received the intelligence of the illness of John D. Campbell, Superintendent of the Southern Rail road, and Mayor of this city, before the tidings of his death was flashed over the wires. It was startling in its suddenness as though a bolt had leaped to earth from out the dept'ns of the cloudless sky. Of all men in the city two weeks ago, counting one by one, he would have been the very last chosen as the one first to die. God seeth not as man seeth!

Mr. Campbell was born in Woodbury, New Jersey, in 1823, and was consequently in the forty first year of his age at the time of his death. He has been connected with Railroads, in one capacity or another from boyhood. Before he had attained his majority he was employed as an Engineer in laying out and building the Reading Railroad. Previous to this he had been a Cadet in the Military Academy at West Point between one and two years as near as we can learn, but did not prosecute his studies there to completion.

* * * * * * *

From Mr. W. H. Waldby, who was one of those who left this city with Mr. Campbell, and was with him throughout his journey to the melancholy end, we learn interesting particulars of his illness and death.

They left this city on Thursday, July 23d, and Detroit the next morning by way of the Grand Trunk Railroad. Going through Canada, spending some time in the White Mountains and at other places, they arrived in Boston from Portland on Wednesday evening of last week. They all partook of a hearty supper, being tired and hungry, and about nine o'clock Mr. Campbell ate a dish of oysters, having eaten another at Portland. It is well known that oysters are considered dangerous and unhealthy at this season of the year, and his death is attributed by many to this cause.

About midnight he awoke and complained of pain in the bowels, and took some camphor to quiet the uneasiness.—In the morning he seemed to be somewhat worse, and a physician was sent for and prescribed for the billious cholic, which was then thought to be his ailment. He was not very ill, and no alarming symptoms were developed and the Doctor thought he would be able to be off on the following day. He shortly after got up and dressed himself and remained about during the day, keeping to his room and complaining still of pain. Towards night he became worse and in the evening his symptoms became alarming. The physician was again summoned and remained with him throughout the night.—He rapidly grew worse in spite of every effort to relieve him, and on Friday morning other physicians were called in and a council held, when it was decided that his case was very critical, and well nigh hopeless. The disease had now developed into violent inflamation of the bowels, accompanied with great pain and raging internal heat. From this time on he grew steadily worse and sank gradually, but surely, until twenty minutes past two o'clock on Saturday morning, when he expired. For an hour and a half previous there had been no pulse at the wrist, an evidence of the tenacity with which his strong nature hung on to life.

On Friday noon, the physician apprised Mr. Campbell that his condition was dangerous, but, in answer to a question, said it was not, of course, hopeless. From that time forward, he seemed to be aware of the resistless progress of the disease, and the rapid advance it was making upon him.

He would have occasional sinking turns during the last hours, upon recovering from which he would remark that he could not long survive. He talked with his family and the friends that surrounded his bedside and desired to be remembered to all the employees of the railroad. Among his later expressions was this: "I have worn myself out"—a thought that must often have come to him during the last year or two of his life, but which was doubtless banished as quick as it presented itself. It was the literal truth.

His body was packed in ice, and left Boston on Saturday afternoon at three o'clock, and arrived in this city at nine o'clock last evening. All along the route the utmost attention and kindness was shown by the Railroad officers. At Albany, a special sleeping car was attached to the night train. At Buffalo, a special train took the remains yesterday morning and brought them through to Toledo, where they were transferred to another special train, in readiness, and brought to this city. They were met at Toledo by a large delegation of citizens and railroad men from this city, who accompanied the body hither. At the depot here a large crowd had gathered to witness the arrival, all painfully impressed with the circumstances of so sudden a departure from the scenes of active life of one who seemed to be in the prime of a robust manhood and physical vigor.

Mr. Campbell leaves a wife and one son. He had an insurance on his life of $5000, which expired at noon on Saturday, but was renewed, we understand, although that was needless as he had ere that time, passed away. A friend mentions to us the singular coincidence that he was married on the first of August, died on the same day, and his life policy began and expired on the same day.

The funeral obsequies of the late John D. Campbell were attended by a large concourse of citizens and persons from abroad, the latter composed chiefly of those connected with the Southern Road or those allied to it in business interests.

Secesh Letter.

The following sesesh letter was picked up by Ansel V. Badger of Tecumseh, near the Rappahannoch, a short time since:

I have just recd your very kinde epistle & my deare sister I have not the language to express to you how exceedingly rejoiced I am to heare that you & little children are still in the land of the living & enjoying good health I can inform you that I am still enjoying a reasonable portion of health hoping this may find finde you & family thus highly blessed. I have no news of much importance to relate at present our army have been to Pensylvania but have fell back into Maryland neare the potomac we had a very hard fight while we ware in Pensylvania neare some town I disremember the name. My Regt was in it two days & got cut all to mash. I was not in it a God would have it, I was left at Fredricksburg a little Sick so much so I was not able to march my reg't went in the fight with upwards of five hundred men & came out with 38 men, but have been recruited by the sick up to 125 men the co I belong to come out of the fight with only two men the rest ware all killed and wounded there will be a big fight here in a few days, the federals are advancing on here rapidly there was a pretty hard Calvry fight neare this morning in fack we would not surprised to be attacted at any hour. Sister I am a Guarding a man residence at this time to prevent our men from taking every thing they porsess I get jest the nices to eat in the world they are in favor of the United States, but they treat me with all manor of curtiey there is a young lady here I think likes me very well & I know I do her. I wrote her off the words of the Hymn that on the track you sent me in your letter she sais that she intends to keep it as long as she lives to remember me, there are some few session folks heare. Sister when I laid my eyes upon the hair of you & little children, I could not but weep, oh I would gives wourlds of stores to see you & little children.—Sister I think Gen. Lee made a bad move when he come over here, our loss is a bout 25 thousand at that Battle, the Yankees is equal that, if not more. I don't think we made any thing in that Battle there posisins ware so much better than ours, we ware oblige to fall back. Sister I would write very lenthey if I was shure you would get this but it is a bad chance to get letters in or out of heare now though you must write when you can & I will do the same. Direct to Frederickburg, Virginia. our Col was killed Liet Col wounded. major, wounded we have no Field Com at all at the present a Lieut of a com is in command of the Regt. I wornt add no more at present.

The Irish Placed Right.

In most of the papers that have come to us, the Irish have been made to figure as the exclusive actors in the New York riots. The New York Tribune, however, seizes an early opportunity to allay the prejudice which has thus been aroused in that city against this class of our adopted citizens, and in justice says:

'It is true that most of the immediate perpetrators of those outrages were of Irish birth or lineage; but it is not that all or nearly all the Irish, nor the Irish Roman Catholics, are either rioters themselves or sympathizers with the rioters.—On the contrary, we personally know many Irish who are loyal, as law-abiding, as hostile to all manner of riot and outrage as any men on earth. For example, our Sixth and Fourteenth Wards, which are pre-eminently, predominantly Irish, have not been disgraced by a single outrage, not even upon their negro residents. And from every quarter we have testimony that the industrious, sober, intelligent Irish—of whom there are thousands among us—indignantly declined all participations in the crimes of the grog-shop rowdies and ruffians who have done their worst to disgrace the Irish name. Nearly all who were eye witnesses of the shameful doings of the last week agree on this point.'

☞ Gen. Sherman has evacuated Jackson, after having destroyed the city. But two buildings were left standing—the State House and the Governor's mansion. The Federal forces have returned to Vicksburg.

Strength of the two Armies.

It is now two and a half years since this war commenced. Millions of money have been expended and thousands of lives sacrificed. Nevertheless the contest is still raging, and the consumption of men and money is by no means diminishing.

In estimating the effective strength of the two belligerant parties, at the beginning of the contest, we will include Missouri and Tennessee among the Loyal States, and consider Virginia, North Carolina, Louisiana and Arkansas as entirely disloyal.

By referring to the census of 1860, we shall find that the total population was

In the loyal States	33,345,000
In the disloyal States	7,993,000
White males in the loyal	13,317,000
" " disloyal	2,378,000
Colored males in the loyal	587,000
" " disloyal	1,689,000
Horses in the loyal	4,447,000
" " disloyal	1,408,000
Mules and asses in the loyal	343,000
" " —" disloyal	581,000
Cattle in the loyal	16,088,000
" " disloyal	9,715,000
Sheep in the loyal	19,214,000
" " disloyal	4,239,000
Swine in the loyal	19,295,000
" " disloyal	13,187,000
Bush. wheat in the loyal	144,446,000
" " " disloyal	25,957,000
Bush. Ind. corn in the loyal	594,374,000
" " " disloyal	229,917,000
Bush other grain in the loyal	210,354,000
" " " disloyal	31,149,000
Cash value of Machinery, &c. in the loyal States	$170,137,000
Cash value of Machinery, &c in the disloyal States	$75,622,000

It will be seen from these data how vastly superior in all the elements of military power are the loyal over the disloyal States.

However, in estimating the military strength of the two parties in fighting material, we must avoid the common error of basing it entirely on the white male population. The male colored population of the South give to the rebels as much real military strength as an equal number of non-combatant white males gives to the Union Government at the North. They are not only employed in the production of agricultural supplies, but in the manufacture of military munitions, in transportation, in constructing vessels and fortifications, and, in some cases, have actually borne arms in the rebel ranks. The real sources, then, from which the two armies derive their militastrength, so far as population is concerned, is Male population, of the Loyal States, 13,854,000.

Male population of the Disloyal States, 4,067,000

In other words, the military resources of the North to the South are, in male population three to one; in horses, three to one; in cattle, two to one; in sheep, four to one; in swine, more than equal; in wheat, five to one; in Indian corn, two to one; in other grains, seven to one, and value of machinery, implements, &c., two to one.

Douglas and Breckinridge Democracy--A war Policy Foreshadow.

The national committees of the Douglas and Breckinridge democracy are to have a meeting, either at Milwaukee or Detroit, between the 17th and 23d of next month, to arrange a programme for the approaching Presidential campaign.—It is already agreed to bury the hatchet, and to place the democratic party thus united upon a war platform. Ultraism is to be denounced, and resolutions in favor of the integrity of the Union to be adopted. The responsibilty of the recent riots in resistance to the draft is to be placed where it rightfully belongs. The present admistration is to be ignored, and no comment whatever is to be made upon its action. The negro question is also to be treated with utter silence. The leading democrats who will take part in this movement are convinced that no suggestion they may offer will have any weight or influence with the present administration, and they are agreed, therefore to confine themselves to the marking out of a programme of their own, by which the two wings of the old democratic party will be completely united and a strong bid made for the support of the conservatives of other parties throughout the loyal States. This movement is of great political importance. The meeting is not intended to be public, but a plan of operations is to be agreed upon which shall settle all differences and bring together, upon a war platform, all the democrats of the loyal States.—New York Herald.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 4.—Election returns from all parts indicate a decided Union victory. A portion of the State considered doubtful gives a large majority for the Union candidates.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The Richmond Dispatch of the 1st inst., received at Fortress Monroe, has the following:

As a partial relief from the unwelcome news which we have been receiving from the South, we have now the intelligence that our forces have gained a decided victory in Louisiana. The President yesterday received a dispatch from Lieut. Hardee, stating that Gen. Dick Taylor had an engagement with the enemy under Gen. Banks, and that he had completely routed them capturing 6,000 prisoners.

A Good Idea.

We perceive that Governor Curtin, of Pennsylvania, has hit upon the happy thought of buying some ten or twenty acres of the great and glorious battle field of Gettysburg as a cemetary for the heroes who here laid down their lives that the nation might live. This beautiful idea we hope will be fully carried out, including a special division of the field to the soldiers of each State connected with the army of the Union, and a national obelisk on Cemetry Hill, with the names engraved upon it of every regiment, and with a book inside containing the name, State, regiment and company of every soldier in those three days battles and in the outside incidental operations. We are glad to be assured at the same time that the Union soldiers of this war who have died on other fields will not be forgotten, but that in some suitable way the Government will preserve their names for the remembrance of a grateful posterity.

☞ Michigan has a good share in the capture of John Morgan. The 25th Michigan, under Col. Moore, whipped them at Tebbs Bend. Basil Duke gave his sword into the hands of Lieut. Cairns, of Co. B, 8th Michigan cavalry, who captured him and Dick Morgan and some other prisoners. At the fight at Buffington Island the 11th Michigan Battery did the principal artilery work. And to wind up with, 200 of our 9th Cavalry—which, in company with the 8th Cavalry, had pursued him hundreds of miles—whipped 500 of his men at Salineville, O, and drove his disordered forces and the great John himself, into the arms of Gen. Shackelford's infantry, who modestly thanked God that he, Shackelford, was enabled to capture "Morgan and his followers."

☞ While our surgeons at Gettysburg were attending to the wounded as they were brought to the hospitals, without regard to the side upon which they had fought, a Rebel Colonel, covered with blood, was ordered to be placed in a bath. He was lifted carefully in, and then cast his eyes about him, upon those who had taken him up so tenderly, he burst into a flood of tears, and wept like a child. Recovering himself, he said to those around him: "I hope I shall be forgiven for raising my hand against the Stars and Stripes, and if I recover from these wounds I will not only never do the like again, but try to make amends so far as I can for the wrong I have done."

John Slidell, the Secesh emissary, appears often in Paris, riding along in a splendid carriage, accompanied by his daughter, who is langvidly beautiful.—The coachmen are profusely wigged and powdered, the old gentleman leans on a gold headed cane and smiles placidly.—Slidell is very much patronized by young gentlemen with United States passports in their pockets, and oaths of allegiance fresh upon their lips. The old scamp made his fortune by cheating at cards, and holds a conspicuous position in politics by cheating the nation that once honored him.

INCREASE OF SHEEP IN IOWA.—The census of twenty-four counties exhibits the number of sheep in those counties for 1863, to be 153,686; the same counties, as per assessments of 1862, exhibited 96,719—increase in one yer, 56,967. These include five of the smallest counties. The same proportionate increase of the three fourths not yet returned will give an excess of 227,000 over the number in 1862, which was 322,300, and makes the aggregate near 550,000 head.

Everybody Read This,

If there are any of our subscribers, or readers, who wish to purchase a Sewing Machine, by paying one half cash and the other half in trade of some kind that we can use in business, we can accommodate them with either of two of Finkle & Lyon's: one $55 the other $50. One of Weed's, Moddle Machines, from $50 to $85. One Empire Shuttle Machine, from $50 to $85. One of Wilcox & Gibbs, $40. The above machines are all warranted.

ENQUIRE AT THE HERALD OFFICE.

☞ There will be no Agricultural State Fair in Wisconsin the present year.

☞ Claims for damages for property destroyed by the mob in New York, have been presented to the amount of $130,000.

☞ The Post Office at Marion, Livingston county, has been discontinued, and the mail matter for that place now goes to Howell.

☞ The veteran Chidlaw, of Cinn. and Dr. McAuly, of Phil., will speak at Bidwell's Hall this (Wednesday) evening, in behalf of the wounded in hospitals.

☞ The Hillsdale and Lenawee Union Agricultural Fair will be held on the Riding Park, at Hudson, on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, October 6th, 7th, and 8th.

☞ We were presented by our friend DANIEL GILLETT, on Tuesday last, with two gallons of very nice new Cider. Thanks for remembrance of good things to the printers.

☞ Any of our subscribers missing their paper at the Post Office, will please call at the Printing Office. In a long list of names, in copying, we sometimes may miss one, but not designedly.

☞ A Canadian at Waterville, Me., who wished to tell a Copperhead what he thought of him, couldn't remember the appropriate title and so relieved himself with. "You d—d old one cent!"

☞ Ransome Townsend, of Superior township, Washtenaw county, has this season sheared 1044 pounds of wool from his flock of 162 sheep; average 6 pounds 7 ozs per head. He has also raised 79 lambs, from his 87 ewes and 3 bucks.

Mr. & Mrs. Richard,

Left for the east last Tuesday, and expect to be absent some months. Mr R. requested us to say that his business matters are left with G. HEWITT, Esq, who is authorized to act for him until otherwise ordered.

Surprising.

It is indeed surprising to see what a rush there has been for those beautiful Albums at G. T. KETCHAM's, and filling them up with elegant Photographs purchased at the same place. Aside from the above George has a splendid assortment of Stationary, Envelopes, &c. At his news depot can be found the late papers and magazines, from the east, west, north and south. You can't find a better young man to deal with anywhere. Room in the Post Office Building.

What Next.

Curiosities and economy are multiplying daily. A curiosity may be seen at the room of Mr. S. R. FULLER, in Wm. Richard's new block, in the shape of a Knitting Machine. It will knit a pair of socks or stocking almost as quick as a streak of lightning will shoot—if you don't believe it just so call on Mr. F., with the yarn, and he will demonstrate it to you. He is agent for the sale of the knitter and the Florence Sewing Machines. See card in another column.

Concert.

Professor FOOT, & Company, of Ypsilanti, have been invited to give a Concert at Bidwell's Hall, on Saturday evening, August 8th, for the benefit of the Soldier's Aid Society—which they have accepted.

Now our citizens will have an excellent opportunity to manifest their good feeling for the soldiers who are periling their lives, in the front of battle, to save their freedom and their property, by giving a generous attendance at the Concert. Remember the sufferings of our soldiers are great, since the late battles.

Bounty Decision.

A special to the New York Times, Washington 31st ult., says: "On an appeal from J. C. Wetmore, Agent of the State of Ohio, Secretary Stanton has decided in the case of Sergeant Quints, 5th Ohio, who had served two years in the ranks, and was discharged for promotion, that he was entitled to his bounty of $100, the same as any non-commissioned officer or private who had served two years and been honorably discharged on account of disability. This decision covers all similar cases, whether past or in the future."

Preserving Tomatoes.

Put the tomatoes into a large dish; then pour on boiling water so that the rind or peel can be more readily taken off. After which, squeeze a good part of the juice out of the tomato while it is in the hand, and cut it into two or four pieces, according to size. Cook for a few minutes, until well heated through, and bottle, using no corks, thick drilling only, cemented on the bottle and pressed down and tied. Then with a spoon dip on the wax (rosin with a little lard) until the top is covered; when cool, set in the cellar and exclude the light.—Prepared in this way you get the real genuine flavor of the tomatoes when cooked, nearly equal to those just picked from the vines.

The Humbug.

A little excitement was created in our town Wednesday afternoon, of last week, just as we were going to press with our paper. A straggling company of three loafers and two things in the shape of women, had advertised to exhibit on the Black Art principle. A short time after the arrival of the caravan, a poster made its appearance on our streets headed, "Humbug," and in a few minutes after that, could be heard the roar of the leader of the gang, lecturing our citizens on the audacity of the printers in the Herald office. The trio, to be a little more positive where the poster was printed, made their appearance in our office, and demanded to know if it was done here. No reply being made to their silly twaddle, they came to the conclusion that silence was admission, and pitched into our foreman as the author of it, and were very fierce to whip somebody or something. Old George Washington (Press) stood out in the middle of the floor and invited them to pound away on him to their hearts content, however, taking him to be to hard a case they concluded to try what virtue there was in a legal point of view and called on one of our respectable magistrates for a writ of libel—who advised them to go on with their show, and prove that it was no "Humbug" first—which they wisely took. The show went off, and with it another tirade against the printers. When it broke up the exhibitors had to employ an officer to escort them to their lodgings, to save a sound flogging themselves for their imposition.

These mountebanks are paddling their schooner west, and it would be well for our western friends to be on the look-out for them.

Adrian Items.

From the Watchtower.—Equal Distribution of the Burden of the Draft.—Charles H. Dewey, Esq., in a letter to us, suggests that measures be at once taken in the several wards and townships of this county, to procure the men who will undoubtedly be called for under the conscription act.—Assuming that all who are liable to the draft should share equally the burden which must fall upon a few of their number, if the draft takes place, he proposes that each town and ward be canvassed to find persons who will be willing to go, and that all who are liable to be drafted, tax themselves a certain sum, say ten or twelve dollars, to be paid to those who will go. This would be but a light tax for all, while if the draft takes place the whole burden must fall upon a few, and it might not be possible for most of them to pay the money required to exempt them or procure substitutes. The fund to be paid to substitutes would doubtless be added to by some who are not liable to the draft. The suggestion we think worthy of consideration.

Mr Dewey very properly deprecates any resistance of the draft, and urges the necessity of obedience to law in all cases.—His suggestion if adopted and carried out, will leave no chance for complaint as to the inequality of the burden, and must prove salutary.

A little daughter of Mr. John Phetterplace, of this city, aged some seven or eight years, got up in her sleep one night last week, jumped out of a second-story window, and broke her thigh.

From the Expositor.—The ceremony of laying the corner stone of the new Methodist Church, at the corner of Broad and East Maumee streets, will take place on Friday, (to-morrow) at two o'clock. Bishop Simpson of Philadelphia and Rev. Dr. Eddy of Chicago, are expected to be present and participate in the exercises.

The 18th Michigan.

We have received a copy of the Nashville Daily Press, in which we notice an article highly complimentary to Col. DOOLITTLE, of the 18th Mich. The Colonel is now in command of the 3d Brigade, 2d Division, Reserve Corps, District of the Cumberland, is on duty within the limits of the city.

The writer says that although Col. Doolittle is in command of a Brigade, no higher compliment could be paid him than to say that he is Colonel of that splendid Regiment—18th Michigan—now doing Provost duty in that place—a Regiment not only a credit to its own State, but a credit to the National Army, in whatever shape a comparison can be instituted.

Among others belonging to the 18th, are spoken of in very complimentary terms, we notice the names of Lieut. CHAS. T. HEWITT, A. D. C., and Lieut. S. M. KNEELAND, A. P. M., both from this village, and those of us here who are well acquainted with these young gentlemen can have no doubt of the truth of the writers statement, when he says, that they 'are thorough and efficient young officers, and fill their positions with credit to themselves and the service."

List of Petty Jurors.

The following is a list of petty jurors drawn at the County Clerk's office, July 15th, to attend the session of the Circuit Court commencing on the third Tuesday in this month:

God gave the jewel. He marked her brightness in the earthly household and said, I have need of her that she may shine forever from my breast-plate in heaven.

Prayer for Editors.

I have heard many prayers, says Father Mathew, in the pulpit, in prayer meeting, and in the family circle—for parents and children, husbands and wives, brothers and sisters, masters and servants, rulers and subjects, ministers and people, for all classes and conditions—we do not recollect that we ever heard a prayer in our whole life, for editors. Why are they never thought of, and why is not the blessing of God asked for them and upon their labors? They have a great and hard work, many trials and solemn responsibilities, they do not only need wisdom from above to guide them, but they need more than the patience of Job to endure all they have to pass through with. And yet men abuse and find fault, and say all manner of evil against them, with or without cause—but never pray for them. Let us pray for the Editors.

For the Herald.

Acrostic.

Home and friends we've left, to go
And fight our nations hostile foe,
May our banner ever stand,
In each State throughout the land.
Let the Rebel's colors fall
To the earth with traitors all—
Onward let us drive such men,
No place on earth is fit for them.

Some Northern man their cause will plead,
How vain it is, they'll never succeed,
On earth your names will ever be,
Rebels through the land so free,
Except you do your steps recall,
Sustain the Union dear to all

Roback's Stomach Bitters.

It has long been the aim of the physicians to find a combination of medicines having the requisite stimulating and tonic properties to relieve and cure the common complaints of Billiousness, Liver disorders, Languor, Headache, Lowness of Spirits, Indigestion, Jaundice, Fever and Ague, &c., which are the diseases incident to this climate. The remedy has been discovered by Dr. Roback, and in the above complaints, and there is but one voice from the people, and that is in favor of these truly wonderful Stomach Bitters. We advise all who are afflicted and need an agreeable tonic for the troubles above indicated, to commence at once using the Bitters. See advertisement. 8w4.

UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER

"A child can readily wring out a tubfull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large percentage on its cost. We think the machine much more than PAYS FOR ITSELF EVEBY YEAR in the saving of garments. There are several kinds, nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs, otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly FOUR YEARS CONSTANT USE."

Reflective Retrospect.

BY GEORGE R. FULKERSON.

Here in our fertile country,
Where plenty crowns the land,
Kind nature pays her tribute,
With generous heart and hand—
And smiles upon our season's;
From nature's bounteous reign,
Gives glory to our landscapes
And fields of golden grain;
While the old familiar adage
Is ever proving true,
That all that's old must perish,
And every thing be new.

Our country, say what was it
Five hundred years ago,
And what of its existence
Did foreign nations know,
'Till genius rose exulting,
And marked with trembling hand,
A track across the ocean,
To Columbia's distant land,
Where with frail barques homely laden,
The mighty task was done,
That bestowed a lasting glory
On Genoe's humble son.

The pagent was not ended,
For soon their came again
A convoy richly laden,
From the sunny vales of Spain;
With shining spear and helmet,
And a force of hundreds told,
They had left their halls of splendor,
From a greedy thirst for gold,
But they lingered long and wandered,
And no compensation found,
While the horrors of starvation
Every lasting hope had crowned.

All traces of the living
Had vanished long before,
And reigned wild desolation
O'er rugged rock and shore;
When Britton power was bartered
To brave the storm and breeze,
And rear a new infatuation
Across the trackless seas,
Where the red man reigned triumphant,
Within his forest home,
With all his proud demeanor,
Free and unrestrained to roam,

Not thinking of the changes
That unto him drew nigh,
By Europe's sons engendered
Beneath an eastern sky
Not thinking that the woodland,
Where he sought repose,
Would be in times of danger
A refuge for his foes;
But he was made to suffer
For crimes, crimes without a cause,
How could he claim or merit
Great Britton's marshal laws.

A storm was fast arising,
Upheaving in its wake
Colonial foundations,
From boundless sea to lake;
Such a storm as present ages
Would glad enough pass by,
For the dark cloud of oppression
Stood black against the sky,
And New England's freemen gathered.
Of one accord and will,
To plant their country's banner
O'er the crest of Bunker's Hill.

What was it that they fought for?
Those heroes bold and brave;
Why did they fight so nobly?
Why lay their ranks so freely
Within one common grave?
Why did they fight so nobly?
Was it merely for renown?
Or was it in rebellion
Against the British crown?
Ah! hark and hear the answer,
Re-echoing from each shore,
W'eve been in chains of bondage,
But we'll be slaves no more.

They fought, they bled, they conquored,
They hailed the happy day,
With joyous acclamations,
For Free America;
That priceless boon of freedom.
All nations should bestow,
Without a frown or murmur,
On both the high and low;
And then the bonds of discord
Would never smite the land,
And amity and freedom
Would go onward hand in hand.

But every nation falters
To lose its chance of gain,
And bows in meek submission
Beneath the galling reign,
And ceases to be gracious,
As long as gold will buy
A sordid habitation,
Whereon to live and die;
And often brooding danger,
Sits on her gilded throne,
And hears with satisfaction,
A nation's fainting moan.

'Tis so, ye well may mark it,
Within our own fair clime.
We've rose up far and fearful,
Within the laps of time
And now the warring era,
A ceaseless flame shall fan,
By unholy traffic
Of property in man:
From the shores of the great pacific.
To the pine clad hills of Maine,
The stifled voice of freedom
Is sounding forth again.

Macon, Mich., July 1863.

☞ Did any of you ever see an Elephant's skin? asked the master of an infant school, in a fast neighborhood.

I have! shouted a six year old at the foot of the class.

Where inquired old specks, amused by his earnestness.

On the Elephant, was the reply.

—He shall be immortal who liveth till he hastened by one without a fault.

Chances for a Laugh.

A young lady, walking with a gentleman, stumbled, and when her companion to prevent her falling, grasped her hand somewhat tightly, "Oh, sir," she simpered, "if it comes to that, you must ask my papa."

A schoolboy being asked by his teacher how he should flog him, replied, "If you please, sir, I should like to have it upon the Italian system of penmanship, the heavy strokes upwards, and the down ones light."

"Can I show you anything more to-day sir?" asked a civil gentlemen behind the counter. "Yes, sir," was the reply; will you be good enough to show me the silk umbrella I left here three weeks ago?"

Don't try to teach your boy the folly of those things which you practice yourself.

Cure for love—Get married.

The New Orleans Picayune says that mosquito bars are the only ones that can be open after nine o'clock.

"I say, Dick, what did old Grimes give you for drowning that dog?" "Give!" why he give me one of the all firdest lickings I ever had."

If a girl thinks more of her heels than her head, depend upon it she will never amount to much. Brains which settle in the shoes never get above them. Young gentlemen will please notice this.

A Frenchman, wishing to say of a young lady that she was as gentle as a lamb, thus expressed himself:—"She be very tame like the little mouton!"

"Take off your hat, man," cried a judge to an amazon in riding dress. "I'm a lady, was the reply, I'm not a man."—"Then," said his lordship, "I'm not a judge."

A lady well advanced in maidenhood, at her marriage, requested the choir to sing the hymn commencing,

"This is the way I long have sought,
And mourned because I found it not."

A broker, whose mind was always full of quotations, was asked a few days since how old his father was. "Well," said he, abstractedly, "he is quoted at eighty, but there is every prospect he will reach par, and possibly be at a premium."

The tune of the conscripts:—"We are coming, Father Abraham, three hundred dollars more."

Samuel, can you tell us of what parentage was Napoleon the Great?" "Of Cors-I-can!"

Young ladies should certainly be subject to the Conscription. Jones says they are accustomed to "bare arms."

An Irishman on duty the other night was taunted by the rebels about the non. explosion of our shells, when a shell from the 16th Ohio battery burst immediately over the loquacious secesh.

"Bless ye," cried the Irishman, "stick that in your haversack and stop yer jaw."

A modest young gentleman, at a dinner party put the following conundrum: "Why are most people who eat turkey like babies? No reply. The modest young man blushed, and would have backed out, but on being urged finally gave the reason: "Because they are fond of the breast!" Two middle aged ladies fainted, and the remains of the young man were carried out by the coroner.

An Englishman had heard of the Yankee habit of bragging, and tho't he would cut the comb of that propensity. He saw some large water melons on a market woman's stand, and walking up to her and pointing to them with a look of disappointment said: "What, don't you raise bigger apples than these in America? The woman looked at him one moment, and retorted: "Apples! Anybody might know you was an Englishman.—Them's blackberries!"

NOT BAD.—The citizens of a small city in Pensylvania, being thrown into considerable excitement by reason of the report that rebels under Lee were advancing upon them, held a meeting for the purpose of organizing themselves into a regiment. During the organization of the regiment, the question of arms, ammunition, &c., was being discussed, when an old gentleman, very much excited, and towering a head and shoulders above the crowd, exclaimed, in a stentorian voice: "Are there not any cannon to defend the city?" Voice from the crowd—"Yes, but they are not mounted." Old Gent—"Why ain't they mounted?" Voice from the crowd—"Because we have no carriages." Old Gent—(still louder and more excited)—"Then, where the d—l are the buggies?"

PRETTY GOOD.—A good joke is told of an Indiana captain and one of his men, during the seige of Vicksburg. The captain is one of those fiery little fellows who think it cowardly to keep out of danger when one can do it just as well as not. While out with his company in the rear of Vicksburg, two or three shells came whizzing over them, when his men instinctively fell upon their faces, and sheltered themselves as well as they could behind the hill. When the men had arisen the captain exclaimed: 'Men! what mode of warefare is that?' 'That, captain,' replied a waggish corporal, 'is a lay mode!' The captain it is fair to presume, saw the joke.

STORY OF A MISSISSIPPI LANDLORD.—Printed bills of fare were provided, yet the landlord stood at the head of the table, at dinner, and in a loud voice read off the list of articles in a rhyming way: 'Here's boiled ham, and raspberry jam; baked potatoes, and cooked tomatoes; turnips smashed, and squashes squashed,' and so on. A stranger asked him, afterward, why he read it aloud when printed copies were on the table. "Force of habit,' replied the landlord; got so used to it I can't help it. You see I commenced business down here at Jackson" (the capital of Mississippi) 'and most all the legislature boarded with me. There was'nt a man of 'em could read, so I had to read the bill of fare to 'em."

DETROIT ADVERTISER & TRIBUNE.

PUBLISHED

DAILY, TRI-WEEKLY AND WEEKLY.

The oldest newspaper in Detroit, now in its 34th year—the Advertiser having been established in 1829.

In July last, by the consolidation of the Daily Advertiser and Daily Tribune, a circulation larger than that ever enjoyed by any paper in Michigan was attained. Since then a corps of editors has been secured second to none engaged on any western paper. Some have been employed for years on leading Eastern papers, and bring a rich fund of experience to the columns of the Advertiser & Tribune.

Our expenses for telegraphic despatches are larger than those of any other in Detroit, and more than seven times the amount paid by any one paper a year ago. In fact we now publish simultaneously with them, besides the regular Associated Press dispatches, all the most valuable of the special dispatches that are sent to the Philadelphia Inquirer Pittsburg Gazette, Cincinnati Gazette, St. Louis Democrat, and Chicago Tribune—the five leading papers in the cities in which they are published, and for enterprise not a whit behind the New York journals. Almost daily it occurs that we obtain news by special dispatches twelve hours in advance of the Associated Press, of the correctness of which statement we refer to the numerous readers of our Daily. In this city, where both the daily papers are habitually read by all parties, it is generally conceded that the dispatches of the Advertiser & Tribune are the most reliable and satisfactory of any published in Detroit.

We are now sparing no expense and intend to spare none to place the Advertiser & Tribune in the first rank as a newspaper. Particular attention is given to State news, and to intelligence from our soldiers in the army, a correspondent being maintained in every Michigan Regiment.

Politically the Advertiser & Tribune looks to the salvation of the country by the energetic prosecution of the war now waged against the accursed rebellion of the South. On humantarian grounds, as a war measure, and as a safeguard for the future quiet of the nation, it upholds the Presidents Emancipation Proclamation, and all other war measures of the Government; and while it admits the propriety of friendly criticisms, it holds that no direct and active opposition to the Government is consistent with loyalty, or should be tolerated in the North any more than in the States engaged in the rebellion.

As a commercial paper we aim to make the Advertiser and Tribune the best paper in the State and have employed to conduct this department a man of large experience and reputation. This will make the paper particularly acceptable to farmers, as well as merchants and millers.

Our facilities for printing a large edition have lately been greatly increased by the erection of the fastest press in use in this city, and our circulation is keeping pace with our capacity to print.

TERMS.

DETROIT DAILY ADVERTISER AND TRIBUNE.

To Mail Subscribers $2 00 per Quarter.

Contains twenty-two columns of reading matter including local news, telegraph reports, State and miscellaneous items, army correspondence, copious details of war and foreign news, editorial articles, personal and political items, commercial and marine intelligence, etc. etc.

Detroit Tri-Weekly Advertiser & Tribune

To Mail Subscribers $1 00 per quarter; 10 copies to one address $8 75 per Quarter.

Published every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Contains about thirty columns of news, comprising all the most important matter of the daily issue. This edition is well suited to farmers, merchants, and others living at a distance from a post office, or who are reached only by tri-weekly mails. It is becoming very popular throughout the State—so much so that it has increased in circulation about one thousand copies within eleven months.

Detroit Weekly Advertiser and Tribune.

$1 50 per year within the State. 20 copies to one address $25 00. Papers sent to soldiers in the army for $1 00 per year.

The Weekly is printed in quarto form, and is as large as any of the New York Weeklies. It is made up of articles carefully selected from the daily edition, and contains besides, a carefully prepared review of the news of the week, full commercial reports, a story, and a large amount of interesting miscellany, poetry, etc.

Every one wanting a good State paper should send for the

THE WILLCOX & GIBBS' Sewing Machine is the best Machine, without regard to price, for

Family Sewing,
Braiding,
Hemming,
Feiling,
Tucking,
Cording,

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seam, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances "to survive the wash-tub."

A patented device of great utility to learners, prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Willcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it.—Phila. Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder.—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines.—Pennsylvanian.

"This Machine, in the opinion of the committee, fills more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any other exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Willcox & Gibbs', as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report.

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Willcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21, 1860.

"After much wear and many washings, the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others"—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experience in our own family."—Boston Traveller

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well-merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette

"We esteem it the best machine for family use. The stitch is unexceptionable."—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED"
COMPOUND

Fluid Extract Buchu

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATER OR CALCEOUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflamation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, or CHILDREN.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEAKNESS

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot Hands,	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin,	Pallid Countenance,

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITZ, EPILEPTIC FITS,

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases,"

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION,

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

Requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU inverlably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

How the Money Comes.

Queer John has sung how money goes,
But how it comes, who knows? Who knows?
Why every Yankee mother's son
Can tell you how "the thing" is done.
It comes by honest toil and trade;
By wielding sledge and driving spade,
And building ships, balloons, and drums;
And that's the way the money comes.

How does it come? Why as it goes,
By spinning, weaving, knitting hose,
By stitching shirts and coats for Jews,
Erecting churches, renting pews,
And manufacturing boots and shoes;
For thumps, and twists, tongues, lungs, and thumbs;
And that's the way the money comes

How does it come? The way is plain—
By raising cotton, corn and cane;
By wind and steam, lightning and rain;
By guiding ships across the main;
By building bridges, roads and dams,
And sweeping streets, and digging clams,
With whistles, hi's, ho's and hum's
And that's the way the money comes.

The money comes—how did I say?
Not always in an honest way:
It comes by tricks as well as toil.
But how is that? why, slick as oil,
Ay putting pess in coffee bags;
And peddling wooden clocks and plums;
And that's the way the money comes.

How does it come?—wait, let me see,
It very seldom comes to me;
It comes by rule, on a rail;
But oftener that's the way it goes,
From silly belles and fast young beaux;
It comes in big, nay little cums,
Aye, that's the way the money comes.

JENNY IRWIN.

"Who Sitteth in Judgment?"

THE STORY OF AN OUTCAST.

CHAPTER II.

After a brief space of time the back room door opened, and Mrs. Levi's suspicious tones were arrested.

'By Josh,' says the boy as he bangs the street door after him, 'Jenny Irwin's going to do it up brown to-night; a carriage! well, may I be ticketed if she didn't come it heavy over the old woman. I only wish she could'nt come out quite so quick; I guess old fifty per cent would have caught rats then!' and popping a snow-ball facetiously through a basement window, where a poor woman was striving in vain to keep alive the embers of a dying fire, he kicked up his heels after the manner of 'Old Joe' and was soon lost in the distance.

The City Hall bell had struck ten, old St. Paul's had taken up the strain, and Trinity was just joining in, as a carriage rolled noiselessly over the snow up to the mansion of Solomon Levi. A moment after the door opened, and a lady, dressed in black, with her veil drawn, emerged from the dark hall and entered the vehicle.

'Where, madam?' said the driver.

'Taylor's!'

Slam went the door, and up the dark street the carriage made its way as noiselessly as it came.

A strange fire was burning in Jenny Irwin's heart, an unwonted energy buoyed her up, and seemed to carry her on a wave of supernatural life swiftly toward the speedy realization of the wild dream which had flitted through her mind as she sat a beggard outcast in her wretched room, with the cold wind drifting the fleecy snow, through the broken windows upon her desolate floor.

Arrived in front of Taylor's, the carriage drew up, and bidding the driver wait, she entered the rich saloon, and taking a seat in one of the unoccupied alcoves, gave her orders to the waiter.—'Coffee or tea, madam?' he asked, as he was about to depart.

'Neither, reponed Jenny; bring me brandy!'

As soon as her supper, made up viands such as had long been stranger to her lips, was placed before her, she moistened her lips with brandy, and proceeded to partake, and, although faint with long fasting, by an almost superhuman effort she mastered the cravings of hunger, and ate slowly and negligently, as though such affairs was an every-day matter with her. Finishing her supper, and draining the last drop in her goblet, she paid her reckoning at the counter, and bowing with a slight, negligent grace—with the same air that once marked her training as a lady—she thanked the servant who handed her to the carriage, and ordered the driver to stop at St. Nicholas, entered, and was driven noiselessly away.

The snow was still falling, and although it was but ten o'clock, merry parties of Christmas-seekers thronged the streets, and the merry sleigh-bells mingled in vivid harmony with the discordant notes of rival horns, which made the night hideous as they echoed from the passing sleighs.

Jenny Irwin looked from the tightly closed windows of her carriage. Old memories came thronging wildly and tumultuously back upon her ship-wrecked heart; she thought of the days when her father's equipage drove through the same thoroughfare, and she, with one who sleeps now beneath the snow—her mother—young, and beautiful and good, wrapped in the comforting furs, drank in together the full enjoyment of the scene; she thought of this, and very many things besides. At length drawing a little paper from her pocket, she unfoided a few small coins—the same which she had lain upon the table before her when she sat alone in her desolate home.

'Here it is,' she said: his last gift—a few small coins—three picayunes and a dime! a generous gift to a poor beggar for Christmas! I'll not mock the gift; perhaps it was kindly meant, and it shall be used for the purpose fitting well the giver. What weapons destiny sometimes puts into our hands! Perhaps the thought might have come had I not met him so strangely in the Park. He did not know me. Will he know me now! We shall see. Strange that all my hatred, all my vengence, all of the deep sense of wrong which I have harbored so long against him, now that my mind realizes the last vanish, and leave me only pity. Pity for him—pity, deepest pity, and scorn for myself.'

The carriage drew up in front of the princely St. Nicholas, and the door was again thrown open.

'Driver,' said Jenny, 'I am suffering so much that I believe I will go. Please stop into the drug store, and get me some laudanum; here is the money, three picayunes and a dime. I do not wish much, only a little to apply to my face; get a piece of cotton, too,—and stay—if the man asks for what it is required tell him it is for neuralgia—that a lady is suffering very much, and that her only remedy is a little ladauum applied on cotton to her face; get the money's worth.'

The man soon returned and handed her quite a large phial, which she took with a steady hand.

Where now madam?' he asked, still standing by the carriage side.

'No.— Fifth avenue: and once again the door was closed, and the vehicle rolled over the noiseless snow toward the upper part of the city.

The inmate sat like a statute upon the seat; she looked no more on the gay world, gay in spite of the storm, which gave constant evidence without of an unwonted holiday. If, perchance the carriage turned through the same well known street, or glided along the avenue she caught a glimpse of some happy home where the bright ligts within the parlor revealed the family group gathered under the 'missletoe,' or around the 'Christmas tree,' she gave no outward sign of heed, or any token that memory brought back to her such scenes when she, a maiden fair and pure, was full as glad as they, and blessed with full as bright and proud surroundings. Her hand, pressed tight against her bosom, rested upon the viper phial, which nestled there unconscious of its fatal errand.

The contrasts of life are very marked; and strange, and inscrutible. Beside the palace lurks the hovel, the church, the prison, the beautiful, the deformed, the good, the depraved, the altar, the tomb. Within a great city like New York, these contrasts are more vividly preceptible than in smaller places, or in quiet walks of country life; but no where else could one remark a stranger contrast between the princely home of Gilbert Thorne and the miserable tenement which had been the abode of Jenny Irwin.

On the Fifth Avenue—that great thoroughfare, which fashion, and wealth, and luxury have claimed as their abode—stands the house of Gilbert Thorne. Its exterior differs but little from the rest of the habitations in the block, but its broad and deep entrance, its porte-cochere, the heavy, copings of its windows, and the gorgeous curtains, half revealed through the rich plate panes, all stamp it as the residence of a man of taste and wealth.

Here, on the evening of our story, was gathered a joyous groupe of youth and childhood, the guests of Mary Thorne. The deep parlors, lighted with brilliant chandeliers and furnished with a magnificence which might well compare with some of the richest Parisian saloons of the days of Louis XIV., were thronged with as joyous and happy a groupe as ever danced around a Christmas tree. The youthful hostess, a girl of some fifteen years, the daughter of Gilbert Thorne, and his only child, moved among her guests with a sweet and child like grace, added to a queenly dignity of manner, which won the hearts of all beholders, and caused those of her parents to beat with unwonted pride.

Among this happy throng, with a smile and a cheerful word for all, with a hearty welcome and a joyous greeting alike for the children and their parents, and with an easy gracefulness of manner which adapted itself to every mind and state, now danced with a child of ten, and now with a grand-dame of seventy, Gilbert Thorne, the host, and the fond parent; mingled to all outward appearances, as happy and light of heart as the gayest of them all. Once used to study the human heart through its outward manifestations, through the subtle expressions which are caught in calm and placid eyes, or in the firm and immovable mouth, or the veiled muscles of the face, might have formed a different opinion of Gilbert Thorne from that usually entertained of him by his friends. Indeed, there were those who said, notwithstanding his wealth, and luxury, and position, that he would give them all to wipe out some of the experiences of his past life; that, wherever he went, in all of his brightest and proudest moments, in the midst of his triumphs, penetrating even the peaceful sanctuaries of home, following him through the courts and upon the mart, treading the busy streets, and keeping with him always, everywhere, a pale specture of the past haunted him at least, tence, and [illegible] of pleasure ever from his lips. But to the world at large, to his every day friends and to his accustomed associates, even unto his own household, he seemed, and was known only as the wealthy, gay, liberal and successful lawyer, and votary of fashion, with something more of talent, perhaps, than is generally attributed to those who worship at her shrine.

The carriages, one by one, had departed, and, the clock struck eleven, Gilbert Thorne sat alone in his library, reading by the light of the low drawn leader, and enjoying the luxury of his accustomed evening cigar. The rich surroundings, the massive case filled with books not only relating to his profession, but upon every subject, the elegantly carved desk, the secretaries, the heavy enameled sofa, the great arm chair, and the soft lounge, invitingly for favored clients, all these were in thorough keeping, not only with each other, but with the solitary inmate of the room.

There came a ring at the front door, an unusual thing at such an hour, and a few moments after, the servant appeared, at the library door, informing Mr. Thorne that a lady in a carriage wished to see him on important business.

'A lady in a carriage! who can it be?' and the lawyer sat abstractedly conning over which of his clients would seek him at so unseasonable an hour.

'Are you sure it is a lady, John?'

'Yes, sir.'

'How is she dressed?'

'In black, sir; silk dress, mantilla, velvet bonnet; a real lady, sir.'

'Very well, show her in;' and the lawyer laid his cigar aside, and took his slippered feet down from the chair on which they had been resting.

'Good evening madam,' said the lawyer, as the lady, closely veiled, a moment after entered the library; 'pray be seated; here, take this arm chair, near the register. The night is a wild one for a lady to venture out. Pray, what may be your business with me madam!

'I have business of great moment with Mr. Thorne,' the lady replied, in a low, husky tone, 'and I would speak with him alone, and where there will be no fear of interruption, or of being overheard.'

The lawyer went to the door just in time to catch sight of the retreating form of John, who had been doing servant's duty at the key-hole. Shutting the door he turned the key and wheeled in front of it a large screen. He then drew down the curtains, and closed tightly the window shutters, and faking the large arm-chair near his visitor, and as he supposed, client, he signified that he was ready to hear, what she wished to communicate.

The lady without uttering a word, slowly and with a quiet, determined deliberation, raised her veil, and confronted the lawyer.

"Great God!" he exclaimed, as he met her gaze, starting up and staggering backward. 'Is this Jenny Irwin?' Then quickly recovering himself, he resumed his seat and drawing up near to his visitor asked her in a hoarse whisper, what, in the name of God, had brought her there, and what she would have of him.

'I come, Gilbert Thorne,' she said, 'to have a final reckoning with you.'

'A final reckoning with me! Did we not have it six years ago? and did you not sign an agreement under oath, that you would never call upon me, seek me, speak to me, or in any way interfer with or address me again? What do you mean, Jenny Irwin?'

'I mean this—that when; six years ago, you, tired of me, and wished to cast me off, perhaps for another love, perhaps'

'No, no! Stop there; Jenny; stop there. You know full well that it was not for another love. You know full well that my sense of duty alone drove me to the step; that I provided handsomely for you'—

'False! It is false, Gilbert Thorne.—You left me worse than penniless—helpless, friendless, hopeless, homeless, aimless!'

'Nay, nay, Jenny, be just. If you wish to obtain more from me, tell me so plainly; but do not deny what I really have done. Give me the credit of at least generosity toward you. Did I not settle ten thousand dollars upon you in cash, when you signed that contract which you have this night broken? Did I not do more than one man in a thousand could have done? Could I, Jenny Thorne, she done more?'

'Now, still voice, and with much emotion—'let me say what I have to say without interruption; let us not quarrel to-night, but let me simply call to your mind some things which you may have forgotten, and some perhaps, which you have never known.

He motioned her to proceed, wresting his elbow upon the desk, and his head upon his hand, and gazing upon her with an abstracted, half sorrowful expression.

'You doubtless remember, Gilbert Thorne, eight years ago to-night. You will never forget it after I have called it again to your mind. You came with my brother Dick; you sat next to me at the table; it was a gay Christmas Eve; I knew not then, and scarcely thought for a long time after, whether you were married or not; you said fair things to me then; you often came, a welcome guest at my father's board. You were not rich then, Gilbert Thorne, far from it; well you sought to win my love—you won it.'

A slight tremor overrun the woman's frame, and drawing her hand across her forehead, as though to sooth its pain, she went on:

'Then my brother Dick went away to California, and who so kind and who so brotherly in his attentions as you? Then came the news of his death—shot by some traitor hand, pursuing his solitary way over the mountains, then my mother's illness—for Dick was all her love—her death!'

Another pause, and again the hand was pressed upon the forehead. And again she went on:

In the Coso range of mountains, 180 miles from Los Angelos, is Brimstone Mountain, a volcano now in active operation. Its altitude is about 1,000 feet. The exterior of the mountain is pure brimstone, hard yielding to the pick.—About 2 1-2 miles from the mountain are a lage number of hot springs, with temperatures up to boiling heat. About 3 miles distant from Brimstone Mountain is Iron Mountain, so called. It rises 3,000 feet above the ocean level, is of a reddish color and contains iron ore. A few miles distant from Brimstone Mountain rises another called the Glass Mountain, an extinct volcano. At a former period it discharged large quantities of glass, which is strewn over the surface of the earth for a distance of 20 miles or more. Some of the pieces weigh from 100 to 200 pounds. All of it is entirely free from impurities, and perfectly translucent.

Thanksgiving Sermon.

TECUMSEH, Aug. 6th, 1863.

REV. S. E. WISHARD:

Dear Sir—Believing that the religious and truly National sentiments, so appropriately discussed in your Thanksgiving Sermon, of to-day, ought to have a wider circulation—and believing that were it placed in the hands of every family and every soldier in the army, especially those who have gone out from us, it would be the means of much good in cultivating correct ideas relative to the destinies of our country, and the sustaining and encouraging of our faithful soldiers.

Therefore, it is the wish of many, some of whose names are undersigned, if agreeable to you that you furnish a copy at your earliest convenience for publication:

E. TINDALL, S. G. CONKLING, N. H. TINDALL, J. P. SLAYTON, WM. BALDWIN, L. DREW, ISAAC BROWN, G. W. KETCHAM, JOHN ROSEBROUGH, JOHN CULBERTSON, H. C. CONKLING, S. C. LEBARRON, B. L BAXTER, T. T. KNEELAND, P. BILLS, JAMES SHERARD.

TECUMSEH, Mich., Aug. 7th, 1863.

Messrs. E. TINDALL, S. G. CONKLING, and OTHERS:

Gentlemen—Yours, containing a request for a copy of my Thanksgiving Sermon for publication is received. I herewith furnish the same, as nearly as possible, parts of it not having been written before. If it will encourage a single desponding heart, or give edge to one sword drawn for our government, you are welcome to use it.

Yours for God and the Union.
S. E. WISHARD.

I CHRON. XXIX: 10—13.

10 Wherefore David blessed the Lord before all the congregation, and David said blessed be thou Lord God of Israel our Father for ever and ever,

11 Thine, O Lord, is the greatness, and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty; for all that is in the heaven, and the earth is thine; thine is the kingdom, O Lord and thou art exalted as head above all,

12 Both riches and honor [illegible] to give thou reignest over [illegible]

13 NOW THEREFORE, OUR GOD, WE THANK THEE AND PRAISE THY GLORIOUS NAME.

Near the close of David's eventful life, in the audience of the people and in their behalf, as well as his, he spoke these words. His experience had been long and varied. The shepherd boy, from leading his father's flocks, found his way to the highest position in the army of Saul.

After he had shown himself worthy of the trust, to which the providence of God had called him, he was made king in Israel. The crown, however, was not placed upon his brow until he had passed through the severest ordeal. These trials were repeated after he came to the throne.

I need not here speak of Saul's attempts upon his life, of the rebellion of Absalom, and of Sheba the son of Bichri, and of those calamities thro' which he passed, involving his nation as well as himself.

It is enough to say that they were protracted, and at times almost overwhelming. Looking back upon them he said, "Blessed be thou, Lord God of Israel our Father for ever and ever. Thine, O Lord in the greatness and the power and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty: for all that is in the heaven and the earth is thine; thine is the kingdom, O Lord, and thou art exalted as head above all. Both riches and honor come of thee, and thou reignest over all; and in thine hand is power and might, and in thine hand it is to make great, and to give strength unto all. Now therefore our God, we thank thee and praise thy glorious name."

He had learned that God reigned among the nations in the time of their darkest trial—that greatness, power and glory, were His—that He employed them according to His righteous counsel—that riches and honor were from God; also from Him came victory.

The providences in which his own life, and the life of his people, had been wrought out, were dark and mysterious. The way in which God had led them had been rough. At one time the plague of God stilled the pulse of seventy thousand citizens: again, rebellion with its perjured tongue and parricidal hand threatened the demolition of the government. The viper that hissed and stung, not unlike that which has attacked our own people, had been murtured in the palace. Not only the nursling of the government but the child of the king headed the revolt. "As a man wipeth a dish, wiping it and turning it upside down," so had the rebellion of Absalom emptied Jerusalem. David had fled for his life He "went up by the ascent of Mount Olivet, and wept as he he went up, and had his head covered; and he went barefoot, and all the people that were with him covered every man his head, and they went up weeping as they went up."

But the dark cloud was over past.—Looking back now on the trials thro' which God had lead them, he would make no complaint. Standing near the close of life, he would not change a single trial, he would not have a stroke less than God had given him. In view of the great promises of divine protection, and his experience of their verification, he could but render praise and thanksgiving to God. "Therefore"—in view of what we have experienced, both joyous and grievous—"our God we thank thee and praise thy glorious name."

We have not yet reached the end of this fearful struggle for national existence, but that our government is to-day under the broad shield of divine protection, I have no more doubt than I have that there is a God who vindicates the right. Besides, with repentance for sin and a humble reliance upon the God of eternal justice, we are as safe and should be as hopeful in the middle of the contest as at the last end. Shall we not, therefore, as humbled, chastened, christian citizens, "come before his presence with thanksgiving," to day? We have everything to be thankful for that David had, and even more.

God reigns above all the turmoil of war still. This was one "ground" of thanksgiving mentioned in the text. "Thou reignest over all."

True there are those who say in their hearts,—"there is no God,"—or what is equivalent to it, that God is disconnected in every way with the trials of our country. There doubtless is a God to create worlds, to balance systems, to thunder in the heavens and shake terribly the earth, but He has nothing to do with the affairs which are to-day engrossing the energies of our nation.

Possible? Whence comes so profound an assertion? From the word of God? From the experience of His goodness?

From neither. War is as much the scourge of God, and as much under His control, as disease, pestilence or famine. He not only "stilleth the noise of the sea, and the noise of their waves," but also the tumult of the people. God gives the explanation of the success of his people over their enemies, on a certain occasion, in this language: "There fell down many slain, because the war was of God."—He permitted the wickedness of men to break out in a desolating war, by which He scourged them for their sins. "He reigneth over all"—over all men, over all events; calamities as well as blessings.

All these afflictions are so many declarations of God's hostility to sin. He will cause the wrath of man to praise Him, and will restrain the remainder with check, thwart, hinder, and rules, and be-[illegible] We can trace the hand of our Great Father in the mysterious affliction which is upon us.

I pity the soul that puts itself outside of the consolations of this divine truth, that He ruleth our all.

I pitty the man who creeps down into the dark, damp caverns of earth, where lurk the poisonous gasses, and sits down there to bewail himself, and gasp out his life, crying—"Night! Night! Let him come into the light of a better life, where the sweet breath of heaven will vitalize him, and the beams of day fall about his path; where hope, begotten of God's truth and promise shall whisper courage to his fainting soul.

There is no light or hope outside of the precious truth that He ruleth our all.

We thank and praise His glorious name also, because He gives riches and honor. The material resources sufficient to equip our army and navy, to keep them in the field clothed and fed, are gifts from the hand of our heavenly Father. "Both riches and honor come of thee." God has not withheld the rains and dews.—He has filled our store-houses with plenty, and our wine-presses burst out with new wine.

Instead of exhaustion, such as was predicted by the enemies of the government, the earth has yielded her increase. God has given us bread, a gift not less important, in putting down rebellion, than powder and ball. Let the people acknowledge the bestowment with the profoundest gratitude and thanksgiving.

The victory also is with Him. For this we thank and praise His glorious name The battle is not to the strong but to whom our God will give it.

It is well for the world that men may not dispense victories. It is well for us that we do not hold the decisions of the battle-field in our hands. No created mind has wisdom, benevolence, and patience enough to use wisely such a power. How quickly we would have decided the contest in our favor, if we could have spoken the word. We would have triumphed over the rebellion long before we were ready. We grasp for victory; God is trying to secure the results of victory. We would be delighted with the casket, but God knows that the jewel which it contains will be worth more to us. The discipline of the struggle which brings us success is worth not less than the success itself. Hence God has enstamped the law of development upon all things. He could start us out in life full grown if he chose to do so. He could bring nations into being fully matured.—But He has chosen a different method.—Our life is only a breathing at first, but it rapidly becomes a walking, thinking life, full of struggling activity.

So national life begins in the germ.—It has its infancy, childhood, and manhood: but all under the control of God. Its struggles and conquests reach no further than He permits "Thine is the power * * * and the victory." It is well to remember that all the promises and attributes of God pledge Him to give ultimate victory to the right. Let the men of prayer and faith understand that God is devoted to the right

When justice and truth are trampled on, Jehovah will, at the proper time and in the proper way resent the indignity.—There may be inscrutable delay. But it will be a wise delay. God's triumph may hang in the balance, so that for a time we are ready to give up all for lost, yet in the end, God will triumph gloriously.

Hence we can afford to accept thankfully the promise of ultimate success for the right. Thankfully, I say. God be praised that He cannot take sides with iniquity, that He cannot approve iniquity in ourselves. It would be a very short-sighted selfishness which could not rejoice in the application of this principle to ourselves as well as others.

Letter to the Soldiers.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH,
Tecumseh, M., Aug 2d, 1863.

The Congregation being called to order, after the close of divine service, Rev Mr. Wishard gave notice that he was about to visit Nashville, Tenn., and, perhaps other places, where there are portions of our army. That it might suit the wishes of the congregation to prepare a letter of friendly salutation, advice and encouragement to those who have gone from us into the army and who may be visited by our Pastor.

Whereas, Rev. Mr. Wishard acting as chairman, it was unanimously

Resolved, That it be deemed expedient to have prepared and forwarded such communication.

Resolved, Also, that Rev. E. N. Nichols, John Tallman, Henry Coukling and P. Bills, Esq.s be a committee to draught a suitable letter, and, report the same on next Lord's day for consideration and adoption.

At the same place, and time, August 9th, 1863. The Congregation being called to order by the Pastor, the above-named Committee, reported the following communication, which was accepted, and adopted. Signed,

S. C. LEBARON, Secretary.

The first Presbyterian Church and Society of Tecumseh, Michigan, to such of their Friends and acquaintances, as are, at the present time, in the army of the U. S. and acting in defence of her Laws and Institutions, beg leave, as co-patriots and fellow christians with you, respectfully and affectionately to represent that—

We, with you, still continue to cherish that love of our common country, so natural to all genuine Patriots, and which so pre-eminently become us christians.—This spirit is founded in the law of our common nature. Like the life-tide, in the human system, it courses freely and strongly through every part of a healthy citizenship, and constitutes the basis of national vigor and national hope. The history of the world avows this spirit to have been the forming, guiding, and prospering genius of all distinguished nations. It were to be expected, therefore, that persons of generous, and cultivated, and devout minds, and of amiable and refined affections, would be particularly appreciative of a country like our own. Most of us were born here. Those who were not, sought it in early life, found it to be as a "Field which the Lord hath blessed." With its beauty and fertility they have been charmed, and, been led, also, with all the glowing enthusiasm of childhood, at once, to adopt it and make it their home. Hence to us all, it has become as

"OUR OWN—OUR NATIVE Land."

With this country, therefore, is associated mainly the fond recollections, the innocence and bliss of childhood days: the past times and joy of youth; and the more grave and rational enjoyments of manhood. These, and the like considerations, must ever endear to us the fields and woodlands, the valleys and hills, the fluent streams and placid lakes; the broad and majestic seas—the individual and collective glories every-where, ever and still, around us In a word,—In view of which, every place and every object, all the tender memories of the past, and, all the hopes of a more delightful future, are here paradised to us. Ever to, do we feel a desire, in some way or other, to give lasting expression of this endearment. If I forget thee, O my country, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth—if I do not remember thee. Or as Burns, that genuine child of Apollo, amid the hills and valleys of Scotland, said:

"A wish—I mind it's power,
"A wish that, to my latest hour,
"Will strongly heave my breast;
"That I, for poor auld Scotland's sake,
"Some useful plan, or book could make,
"Or, sing a sang at least."

Thus feel we for our country—so happy in the past—draped all in sorrow now.

Still glowing, and more glowing is our patriotic emotion, when we comtemplate the political Institutions which we here enjoy. We have read the history of tyranny in ancient nations. In times to styled modern. Over our ancestry, despotism rolled the grinding wheels of its ponderous and crushing and accursed enginery! Our Father's protested—were unheeded—and, rebelled—rose in their might, and, the genius of tyranny, like a storm on the hill passed away. Many a brave one had fallen. But the banner of Freedom stood. Amid the slain it stood. It stood also beneath a serene sky and prophetic of a government, under whose genial influence, "Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness," should become the delicious boon of every son and daughter of the land. Such a Government was soon developed, adopted, and became the aegis of popular rights, and universal tranquility. Eulogise it? That were to "paint the lilly," to "add another hue to the rainbow" "Ridiculous excess" indeed, No. It defies praise as sunbeams defy description. It transcends all laudation. To us who have felt the charm of its influence, praise lacks spirit, and, disgusts the moral taste But the thing itself is—"Noble, and bespeaks a nation proud"—what we have a right to be.—How such a government makes us love our country. Yes we do, with a love pure and serene as the clear blue sky, and, warm as the beams that flood it.

And this love of country, becomes more sacred still, and, verges to divine, as it receives the light, and, the baptism of our holy religion. Barbarians have not been strangers to patriotism. The civilized nations of antiquity, all untaught, and unblessed of christianity, produced many, and, very worthy patriots. But they had been more pure, and, attained a loftier sublimity, had they been cultivated and matured amid the beams of the gospel and round about the altars of God. We find the proof of this in the history of christianity, and, in our own experience.—There are no principles suggested by philosophy, no emotions awaked by earthly considerations, but are refined, elevated, and rendered, every way, more complete, by being contemplated in the light of the Holy oracles and that radience which beams from the Cross.

Now, Religion, as it came from God, is, eminently, the Religion of our country. Freed from pagan alloy, eliminated human traditions, it shines more pure, and more full upon our land than any other the world over. All the people are robed in it. Nor is this all. It has illumined our minds; and, greatly purified and ennobled the heart of the people. It has made the wise, wiser still: the good better still. It has made those whom we love, more lovely. It has hightened even the charms of nature. The earth is more verdant; the orbs shine more serenely; the aroma of the winds is more grateful; melody is more melodious; and, joys, every one, more joyous, where religion smiles. The "Silver lining," on the cloud of adversity, is but the soft pencillings of christianity, and, when the divinity of storms is in the heavens, and nature, like a "widow in her weeds," is draped in awful gloom, what a bow of promise, the outbeamings of the Cross! Thus, O Jesus—

"How glorious is thy girdle, cast
"O'er mountain, tower, and town;
"Or, mirrored in the the ocean vast,
"A thousand fathoms down!"

This, in life, and, at the grave of those we loved, and, who have passed from our fond embrace, it brings another life to view, and invites us to contemplate them in the depths of glory far above all the clouds, and, all the storms of life, and there it bids us seek our everlasting home. Oh, yes: Religion has made our country divinely beautiful, and, taught us to love it. We do love it and the Banner that waves ouer it, quickens our pulse, stirs our souls to their profoundest depths. All hail, and loud hozannah sing—Here is our "Home—home—SWEET HOME."

We have dwelt longer upon this theme, than, otherwise we would, because it is so dear to us—at all times dear to us, and, all the more so now, when our country is again, and, so seriously imperiled; also, because we know so well, how deeply you sympathise with us in regard to these things. They are matters of common interest to us all. They carry us back to the olden time: the time when our Fathers fought, and fought till the field was cleared of hostile foes, and then retired to frame our noble Constitution and Laws; and thence again, to remove the forest, and prepare habitations for the evening lour of a toilworn life; and which, when that life should close, they might bequeath to their children after them. 'Tis through these channels that we reach a true estimate of our present noble army—our army as a whole, and of you, our special friends in that army.—You are, in an important sense, fighting over again, the war of the Revolution—a war for "Freedom and the Rights of man." Ambitious men, have risen up in our midst; men of superlative selfishness, cruelty and oppression; men who sigh for arbitrary power that they may practice cruelty and oppression upon a broader scale; men who have deliberately sneered at, scouted and discarded our Republican institutions as unnatural, impracticable, and an utter failure: Men too, with all the cruelty of the savage in the wild-wood, have come out, and with every horrid enginery of war, are endeavoring to wrest these sacred privileges from us. In such circumstances, we again repeat, we can appreciate a pure patriotism. In such circumstances, a patriot in fact, appears the highest type of man. When, in such a state of things, we see you take your life in hand, and go forth deliberately to confront the foe; and to roll back the tide of purposed dessolation, our love and admiration swell, and, overleap their wonted bounds. You were dear to us, on that, so well-remembered hour, when you left us for the tented field; when we took you by the hand and said—"Farewell"—Heaven be with, bless, and defend you." Loved ones passing away, O how dear—and dearer still when we reflect that they may return no more.

And, as the conflict has worn on; and not a few of your comrads have fallen, and your toils and suffering are prolonged, and you still stand up to breast the storm, our endearment grows—we admire, and, are proud of you. Would that we could bear more of this burden with you. As we may not be with you in the field, allow us to assure you of our high appreciation of your patriotism; of our warm and unabating sympathy with you; of our purpose to contribute what we can for your comfort; and that, the sweetest orizens we breath to heaven, we breath for you. Brave and noble objects of our high regard; bear up, yet, awhile; "Be strong; quit you like men;" and we, and Heaven, and, posterity will remember you.

But, over and above, these considerations, there is another that deeply affects our minds and our hearts also. For your moral and spiritual welfare we feel much deep and solemn concern. They know but little of war, who overlook the tendences of the camp to efface the principles of morality and religion; to weaken and defile the conscience; also to corrupt and debase the character. No purity of marality but may be defiled. Religion itself, wears no lustre but may be tarnished and spoiled. "Evil communications corrupt good manners." Hence our intense and unsleeping solicitude for your moral and religious preservation. 'Tis not enough that you cultivate an unsullied patriotism; that you escape the mortal weapons, from time to time, hurled upon your ranks; that you fall not by the more subtle influence of disease: that you return again, by and by, bearing aloft a victorious banner, and, a victors wreath around your brow. All this we desire: for this we devoutly pray.

But we covet still more. We would have you return, pure in thought, undefiled in heart, and in manners uncorrupt. We would that you return better men, and, better christians; fitted not merely to shine upon the field of war, but to beautify the family circle, the social hall, and, the sanctuary of God. Dear Friends—Filial Sons,—and affectionate Brothers, peril not your lives on the high places of the field, to defend these sacred places, their hallowed endearments, pleasures and hopes, and then come back to defile them. The Angel of everlasting mercy, make you the pride of the army, and, victors on the field; and then, the ornaments of refined and elegant society, and, finally, and forever, of the 'Beautiful City of our God.'

Finally—fellow citizens—neighbors—friends—children—brothers—all and every one: as if you felt our heart's tremulous throbbings: as were our hands clasped in your's, we present you this testimony of the love we still bear to our country; of our kind regards, best wishes, and devout prayer for you. Should what we have said be as kindly received as it has been well intended we shall be, most happy. We doubt not it will be, and, are happy to feel such assurance.

With you, we long for the day when this unhallowed strife shall cease: when peace shall wave her gentle plume, once more, over all the land we love so well: when we of the cool north; and they of the warm south: when they of the hills; and they of the low lands: when from every mountain top and lowly vale—all with one harmonious acclaim, shall be able to say—

"Farewell! the plumed troop, and, the big war,
"Farewell! the neighing steed, and, the shrill trumpet,
"The spirit-stirring drum, the ear piercing fife,
"The starry banner; and, all quality
"Pride, pomp, and circumstance of glorious war."

Yes; come the happy day, when you may again return to the homes for which you sigh; to the fond embrace of those you love; to the joy of days lost in the past. Relatives and friends await you.—The fields and habitations await you.—Garden and grove; the viol and harp; musick's strain and every beauty await you. Joyful to you—Joyful to us, the day when the shout shall be echoed—"Hoorah—Hoorah—Hoorah—The War is over, and, the boys have come."

Destructive Tornado.

A destructive tornado passed through the south-east part of the township of Raisin, about 2 o'clock afternoon of Friday the 7th inst. It first developed itself in the timber of Nathan Spencer's and Deacon Rogers' farms, threw down trees and fences and next struck Moses Bowerman's orchard, tore up many trees and took the fruit from every tree in the orchard; then struck his corn house dashed it to pieces, took the roof from his barn and chimney from his dwelling house; then passed south-east into his timber which was prostrated for a distance of 80 rods, 20 or 30 rods in width. Mr. B. lost a yearling creature killed by the falling of a tree. Passing on in the same direction, all the fences for half a mile were scattered. It then struck the orchard on the place occupied by the widow of the late Henry Young. Many apple trees were torn out by the roots and all the fruit in the orchard was knocked off. Here it took the roof off one side of the barn and half of the other. Six children were playing in the barn but none were hurt. It next struck the farm of Wilber West, took the fences and timber in its course; and then struck the farm of James G. Wells, cleaned the fences and timber in its track, and took the doors off of his barn. Beyond this the tornado continued in a South-east direction, tore up some timber and prostrated fences, but we are not informed of the details of damage nor where its fury was exhausted. We are indebted to Van. R. Miller, Esq., for this discription. Mr. Miller says the tornado had the appearance of an enormous inverted pyramid and no train of railroad cars ever began to make the tremendous noise it made in its progress. Fence rails, timber, boards and shingles were flying in all directions with fearful violence, and carried long distances. At Mrs. Youngs' house three barrels were standing filled with water.—One of the barrels was carried off beyond discovery, and the others were thrown twenty to forty rods. Mr James Wells had a narrow escape from injury being in the midst of flying rails and boards, which he avoided by crouching behind a stump. As it was one of his fingers was slightly hurt. Mr. Wells was once raised from the ground by the wind.

All the growing crops of corn in the track of the tornado, are utterly destroyed Oats were prostrated, but most of this grain will be saved. The duration of the storm was scarcely a minute and a half, and its extent as far as at present known to us, was about three miles—Daily Watchtower.

MEXICAN AFFIARS.—A dispatch from Gen. Forey to the French Minister of War, announcing the election of Archduke Maximilian, was published in Vera Cruz and a salute of 101 guns was fired in h of the event. It is said that Doblado and Comonfort have declared their readiness to submit to the new order of things. Juarez has sent Commissioners to Washington to implore the aid of the United States. There was a rumor in Havana that the Vanderbuilt had been sunk by the Georgia, but it was not generally believed. Several arrests have been made in Havana for circulating a pamphlet against the Jesuits, and one for having a copy of Victor Hugo's Miserables.

The pretty story about Edward Everett's two drafted sons going to the war is spoiled by the fact that both have just paid their $300 substitute money to the Government.

Two of Gen. Meade's sons, were drafted at Philadelphia, the 31st ult.

Constitutional Duties and Privileges.

We have performed our duty as journalists by presenting to each subscriber a copy of the constitution of the United States, and we now ask them to devote a portion of their time—an occasional evening hour—after the labor and toil of the day is over, to the acquisition of a knowledge of the letter and spirit of the Great Charter of their rights and privileges as citizens of the United States.

We ask them to lay aside all prejudice engendered by political conflict; all questions of time-serving expediency; all knee-recumbency to power, to popularity, or to favor; all untried theories and notions of abstract principles; and read this Instrument as patriots, with the determination to comprehend its obligations and obey its mandates.

We shall then be better prepared to detect the fallacy and danger of those teachings which would persuade us that Constitutional Law is not a sacred thing—no matter how prosperous a nation may have been under that law—when it conflicts with individual notions of justice or stands as a barrier against individual ideas of reform. We shall be better prepared to fulfil our obligations to the government as citizens, because we shall be reminded of things which in the heat of partisan discussion we are apt to forget. We shall be reminded that by virtue of this Instrument, and by no other authority, Abraham Lincoln is the Chief Executive officer of the United States, legally elected in the regular order of succession, and whether we voted for him or not, he is OUR PRESIDENT, and we are under as deep obligations to sustain him, as he is to sustain us in all constitutional rights and privileges.

We shall be reminded that by virtue of this Instrument the President is solemnly bound to suppress insurrection or rebellion wherever it may exist within the States or Territories of the Union; that he would be an object of scorn and detestation to every true patriot should he fail to use all the lawful means within his power to crush the existing rebellion and enforce the obligations of the constitution in every section of the Union.

We shall be reminded that by virtue of this Instrument, Congress has the power to enact laws for the purpose of raising money and men; to enroll us as militia; to order us, under the call of the President by draft if necessary, into camps and from thence into the battle fields to suppress rebellion; and that as loyal citizens, we have no right to set up our consciences against these laws and attempt to violate them, directly or indirectly, because we may happen to think them unequal, unjust, oppressive, or "covenants with hell and in league with death." See Boston Liberator.

We shall be reminded that by virtue of this Instrument we are a Nation and not a mere "League of States;" that its provisions are ample to maintain our nationality in war as well as in peace; in insurrection or rebellion as well as in quietude and repose, and that it may be amended but cannot be overthrown unless the nation is overthrown at the same time.

And while we are reminded of these things we shall probably come to the conclusion that those who sneer at and malign this constitution, and who would destroy the instrument itself if they had the power, are either deluded by self-righteousness, or they are wilfully factious and dangerous advisers.

Do we not know that when we break up our constitution we virtually dissolve the Union and destroy the nation? and when this is done—supposing such madness possible—those who survive the shock will find it the most difficult of all human undertakings to make a new constitution that will effectually guard against the pressure of sectional interests and sectional ambition; against prejudice, intolerance and individual and political selfishness, and thus prevent the overwhelming majorities of the strong States from trespassing upon the minorities of the feeble States.

Since the adoption of our Constitution hundreds of other constitutions, in Mexico, South America and Europe have been written, idolized and adopted amid the solemnities of the most sacred oaths, and each in turn has been violated and abandoned for some new scheme of government.

Revolutionary France, after one of the most bloody struggles for freedom the world ever witnessed, presented so many forms, plans and projects of Constitutions which were successively made, adopted and abandoned, that the people at last found confidence in none.

We have been accustomed to look with reverence on our Constitution, and this feeling has given us National character and National strength. As we loose our reverence for that Instrument we deprive the nation of vitality, and when all reverence for the Constitution is gone the nation will die.

TECUMSEH, MICHIGAN,
August 7th, 1863.

EDITOR HERALD—I notice in your issue of July 23d, 1863, a published list of names of members of Company "E" 18th Regiment, Michigan Infantry, and think it would be interesting to many of your readers to learn the changes, and promotions in the company, after nearly one years service, I send you the following:

The Company was mustered into the service of the United States on the 26th day of August, 1862, at Hillsdale, and at that time numbered 100 men and officers. Among the names you published, John W. Exelby, Jas. O. Fitzgerald and Alonzo Hoxsie, were not mustered into service. They, however, afterwards joined the 26th Regiment, and as I understand, are on duty with their Company at Alexandria, Va.

Privates Geo. Burroughs and Charles A Pawson, whose names do not appear in the published list, joined the Company after we went into camp at Hillsdale.

The Company has suffered a loss by disease, of Chas. W. Bangs, A G. Shoemaker, Jerry Burroughs, W. C. Card, E. D. Turner and J. C. Snyder, who died at Lexington, Kentucky, last winter, while the Regiment was encamped at that place. Benj. C. Doke died at Nashville, the 27th of May last. And W. M. Crittenden, J. O. Edwards, W. H. Allen, John Brimley and Thos. Wyrill, have been honorably discharged from the service because of disability.

The following are the promotions:—2d Lieut. E. H. Hoag, to 1st Lieut. vice Lieut. Weatherhead transfered to Co. "K." 1st Sergt. C. T. Hewitt, to 2d Lieut., vice Lieut. Hoag promoted. 5th Sergt. E. W. Crane, to 1st Sergt., vice C. T. Hewitt promoted. 5th Corp. Wm. Wyrrill, to 5th Sergt. vice E. W. Crane promoted. Private John W. Cook, to 5th Corp., vice Wm. Wyrill promoted. 8th Corp. L. A. Hunter, to 7th Corp., vice John Lee (reduced by his own request.) Private Geo. H. Brewer to 8th Corp., vice L. A. Hunter promoted. Private C. J. Hoag, to 2d Corp., vice A. Rundell, reduced.

The following were taken prisoners at or near Danville, Kentucky, in a skirmish the Regiment had with the enemy on the 24th March, 1863, and were paroled two days afterwards: J. O. Edwards, (since discharged) W. W. Estes, Theo. H. Crane, C. H. Eddy, H. B. Hathaway, Chas. Taylor, Jas. A. Prentiss, and Thos. Smith. Lieut. Hewitt is on detached service, as A. D. C. to Col. Doolittle, who is in command of 3d Brigade, 2d Division, Reserved Corps, Dist. of the Cumberland. Private Henry D. Osborn is detailed and serving on a Gun Boat, on the Cumberland River, and private Wm. G. Pentecost is detailed with 1st Mountain Howitzers, serving at present in Kentucky.

Yours very respectfully,
C. D. STEVENS,
Capt. Co. "E." 18th Mich. Inf'ty.

Arrest of a Horse Thief.

A man named Hinton, was arrested in this city, last Thursday, for horse stealing. He had just been married and was accompanied by his wife, and was evidently on his bridal tour. He left under charge of officers from Eaton County. While at Eaton Rapids, he requested them to release his hands, as they were about to enter the dining room for dinner. They complied, and stepped into the room in advance of the prisoner, when the ungrateful but sagacious horse thief, immediately slammed too the door, locked it, and dashed away over the fields with the velocity of a sky rocket. The officers quickly released themselves, but were unable to overtake him. From accounts of Hinton which we find in our exchanges, he is evidently a successful and accomplished rascal.—Jackson Eagle.

It will be remembered that this gentleman(?) flourished in this village last winter, which may account for many missing articles at that time. It seems he was lately married, and was spending his honey-moon in Jackson as happy and as "merry as a marriage bell"

Miscellaneous Items.

The first shipment from Cario to New Orleans since the suspension of the river navigation, took place last Friday, when two boats started off, towing down 128,000 bushels of coal.

A Washinton gossip says it is rumored that Mrs. Lincoln, after the most cruel anxiety and hesitation, has concluded to have her summer dresses made up biassed with low necks and short sleeves.

The betrothal ring ordered by Senator Sprague for his intended bride, Miss Kate Chase, is a diamond solitaire set in enamel and not chased. The price of the ring was $1,000.

The wife of Samuel Knox, Emancipation member of Congress elect from St. Louis, died at the residence of a sister in in Worcester, Mass., on the 1st inst.

A raft containing 1,000,000 feet of lumber, was lately towed across Lake Michigan and consigned to some of the largest lumber yards in Chicago.

The recent thunder storms have done considerable damage at Albion and vicinity. On the 4th inst., the dwelling of Mrs. Haney, north of the village, was struck, the fluid passing down a stove pipe breakinging the stove, and killing a dog lying near. The same bolt killed a sheep near the house A wheat stack near Concord was burned, and much exertion was necessary to prevent the burning of stacks adjoining. In the town of Parma, twenty-one sheep were killed while lying under a tree.

During a circus performance in Detroit on Friday last, a pretended drunken man appeared in the ring, and was walking up to the clown, with the intention, of course, of carrying out the programme. He had scarcely commenced his part of the performance, when Deputy City Marshal Riley placed him under arrest! Who says that officer was not efficient.—

The Democratic State Convention of Maine, held on the 6th inst., nominated for Governor, Hon. Bion Bradbury of Eastport, the candidate of last year.

Boston Wool Market.

There has been a little more business doing this week than last, though consumers of wool are operating very cautiously, and do not purchase much ahead of their immediate wants. The primary markets are daily becoming easier, and contracts with wool-growers are being made on favorable terms. Agents in Ohio, Michigan, Wisconsin and Iowa, who have the money in hand, find no difficulty in securing lots of good fleece at a range of 55 a 63c, and in Canada the entire clip is offering at an average of 50c, including difference of exchange.—The receipts from Canada and the West have been quite liberal within the last ten days, and our market is now tolerably well supplied with good selections of the new clip from all quarters, if we except New York, Pensylvania and Vermont, in which States the farmers mostly continue to hold at rates above the views buyers.

There is but little probability, however, unless some sudden and important change should take place in our foreign relations, that manufacturers of this staple, in view of giving a greater price than they are now offering; especially as they have already succeeded in so great a measure in establishing these prices as the settled rates in Western markets, and in securing upon this basis so large a portion of the crop of that region.

At present they exhibit but little anxiety to lay in stocks, but seem rather inclined to buy only as wanted, and run the risk of such future events as may affect commercial values. The greatest danger attending this policy, however, is that the bulk of the supply, instead of remaining in first hands, may ultimately fall into the hands of speculators, in which event consumers would be likely to suffer, and the profits of manufacturers essentially curtailed.

Look Out!- The Draft.

The only definite and reliable news we have in regard to the draft comes to us this morning in a special dispatch to a morning paper, as follows:

"Provost Marshal Parrot is now canvassing the State, preparatory to the commencement of the draft."

This looks ominous. There is to be a draft and no mistake. The Provost Marshal General of the State is abroad, and is actually making arrangements. The boxes have been made according to the orders of the Department, the little slips have been incased in tin tubes, and all that remains is to appoint a period at which the drawing shall be made. The question is who shall be taken, and who shall be left.

In other States, ministers have been particularly unfortunate. The Methodist Conference has suffered immeasely.—Newspaperdom has come in for its full share. The three hundred dollar exemption is about a dead letter in these parts. Few of either class can conveniently raise that amount of funds, their business paying more in fame than funds. The former, however, may obtain a subsistance for their families as Chaplains and the latter as correspondents; so we do not see between praying and writing that the army is to be much benefited by such drafted men after all. We have heard of fighting parsons but a warlike correspondent is a thing not to be dreamed of.—History has no record of such an individual.

There may have been such in the ranks but if so, he wrote his letters by stealth, and received no pay for his pains. We knew an editor in the army, but he had wrecked seven flourishing newspapers, and went to the war in a vain effort to find his proper sphere of action. He resigned at the end of six months, and went home deeply in debt to start another newspaper.

The draft is a great institution. Many a man who would make a good soldier will be left behind, and many a weakly individual will take his place in the ranks. War is a great leveler, especially when the ranks are to be filled by a draft. We wait patiently for the time when the list shall be announced.

For the comfort of those of the second draft, we would state that the New York Herald's Washington correspondent says it is rumored in high places, although no orders to that effect have been promulgated, that if the draft of the first class under the recent enrollment is considered insufficient, a draft will be made without delay upon the second class.—Cincinnati Times.

Latest News.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—The rebels were lately very much outraged at our sending them in exchange some sick and wounded soldiers who, as they said, were of no use to them. It is understood that they mean to retaliate by sending back to us some of our worst wounded taken at Gettysburg.

New York has been agitated to-day over a story that Mr. Lincoln died suddenly this moring. He must have recovered rapidly, as he was in very good health this afternoon.

Judge Advocate General Holt decides that any man, abroad or at sea, who may be drafted, is not to be regarded as a deserter in the spirit of the law until he is notified of the fact that he has been drafted.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 11.—Lee's whole army is South of the Rapidan. Meade's army is being reinforced at the rate of 500 every day.

Four hundred drafted men leave Phila. to-morrow.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Jeff Davis is ill at Richmond, and doubts of his recovery are entertained. It is said that Gen. Lee has addressed a letter to Jeff Davis, calling upon him not to hang the two Federal officers now confined at Richmond as his son, Gen. W. F. Lee, would in consequence be hung. If this resulted, he declared his intention of throwing up his commission. It is no believed the rebels will hang any of our officers.

CAIRO, Aug. 11.—A reconnoisance, under Major Gordon, of Gen. Rosecrans, Staff, to Woodville, 70 miles from Natchez, destroyed five locomotives, 43 platform and 12 passenger cars, burned a rebel cotton factory at Woodville, also, cotton and manufactured goods to the amount of $200,000.

Cairo is thronged with twenty days' furloughed men from below on their way home.

Twenty deserters delivered themselves up after listening to a speech from Gen. Logan, at Marion, a day or two. Deserters are being captured daily in the southern counties of Illinois.

Daniel Goodwin was probably elected Circuit Judge of the new 11th Judicial Circuit, comprising the Upper Peninsular, on the 4th inst.

The Democratic State Convention of Wisconsin, on the 5th inst., nominated H. L. Palmer of Milwaukee, for Governor.

Ridiculous.

We do not wish to criticize to much but as the Sink hole north of the 'Mansion House,' must be very disagreeble to the inmates, as well as the public generally, we should think some means might be taken to fill it up, if not by the proprietor, by our Marshal: it certainly is a nuisance as it now stands.

A Little Sparring.

On Saturday evening last, a couple of returned soldiers—for the purpose of keeping their fighting pluck up—pitched into each other, with fists, pretty lively. Sheriff Slayton, however spoiled the most of the fun, by parting them. We believe there was no claret drawn and forbear naming the parparties;—hoping they will soon return to their company and be ready to give secesh harder blows than they received themselves

Died,

In this village, on the 2d inst., EMILY MARVIN eldest child of WILLIAM and SARAH MARIA, HAYDEN, aged 5 years and 9 months.

God gave the jewel. He marked her brightness in the earthly household and said, I have need of her that she may shine forever from my breast-plate in heaven.

Sleep on lovely Cherub, no more shall thou waken.
Thy body lies tenantless, cold and forsaken,
No more shall the eye of affection behold thee,
No more shall the arm of a parent enfold thee;
But the Saviour to us an assurance has given,
That for such as thou art is the kingdom of Heaven

The Concert.

The Concert for the benefit of the sick and wounded soldiers, which took place last Saturday evening, was wel' attended. The receipts were $44. Mr. Foor, and his corps, deserve the thanks of our citizens for the rich musical entertainment.

Contributions were taken up for the same object, on Thanksgiving day, at the various churches, from two of which we have received report—the 1st Presbyterian contributing $13 50—the Methodist $18 00—Making with the Concert, $75 50.

What ails the Purp's.

During a few days of last week, an epidemic (supposed to be caused by poison) visited the northern part of our village, causing many of the Canine race to kick up and die. The cause for it is unknown to any of the Purp owners:—Some are of the opinion that this was done that the night prowlers might have free access to the spare change that could be picked up, without disturbing the slumbers of the 'old folks at home.' It would be well for our citizens to keep an eye open for these fellows.

Large Watermelon.

Mr. Samuel Horton of Raisin, sent us a Pan ama Watermelon, weighing 20 lbs, last Monday morning—and the first we have seen in market this season. Our boys say that it cannot be beat—for size and flavor—and if any one thinks differently—and will bring a long another, that they will act as Judges and decide impartially. Mr H will please receive our thanks for his remembrance, and best wishes that his crop of delicious Mellons may yield him a rich reward. His load went off like hot cakes in frosty morning.

A Big Thing.

Cannot something be done to avoid the nuisances to which our pleasant village is subjected. Some time since, we remember of hearing, with great satisfaction, that our city fathers had ordered the building of a new walk from the corner of Chicago street to the Depot on R. R. street. If rightly informed the time allowed by the Board, for the execution of the same, has expired, and we are glad to see even one load of plank delivered. We hope the 'Big Thing,' (for such it is) will not stop until shaped so that we all CAN SEE IT.

All Right Again !

Yes! The Globe Mill is all right again,—the new shaft in—and one of the finest running Mills in the State of Michigan. Its pleasant proprietor, Mr. Wm. Hayden, is ready to pay the highest market price in Cash for wheat delivered at either the Mill or his Warehouse, where the correct accountants J. S. Shermen and J. C. Lester, will give you every fraction that it is worth.

The Stave and Heading Maufactory, by Messrs. Blinn & Hayden, is in full operation, with a heavy stock of Cut Staves and Headings, ready to be delivered according to order.

Mr. Hayden is also agent for the reliable "HOME INSURANCE COMPANY, N. Y." Risks taken on merchandize from eastern cities coming westward; flour or other western produce going east by rail, lake and river transportation.

Capt. C. D. Stevens.

This officer, and truly a gentleman, will receive our thanks, and no doubt that of this community, for the interesting report he has presented for publication, of the condition of Co. "E," 18th Mich. Infantry, which left this place about a year since. Capt. Stevens, as we remarked two or three weeks ago, returned home to recruit his health.—He is now on the mend and will leave today for his company, at Nashville, being anxious to be with them. From the slight acquaintance we have enjoyed with the Captain, we are certain, if we were entering the service, there is none that we would choose to go with sooner than him. No doubt but the boys will hail his appearance with three times three and a tiger.

Roback's Stomach Bitters.

It has long been the aim of the physicians to find a combination of medicines having the requisite stimulating and tonic properties to relieve and cure the common complaints of Billiousness, Liver disorders, Languor, Headache, Lowness of Spirits, Indigestion, Jaundice, Fever and Ague, &c., which are the diseases incident to this climate. The remedy has been discovered by Dr. Roback, and in the above complaints, and there is but one voice from the people, and that is in favor of these truly wonderful Stomach Bitters. We advise all who are afflicted and need an agreeable tonic for the troubles above indicated, to commence at once using the Bitters. See advertisement. 8w4.

ORANGE JUDD of the "American Agriculturalist," says of the

UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER

"A child can readily wring out a tubfull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large per centage on its cost. We think the machine much more than PAYS FOR ITSELF EVEBY YEAR in the saving of garments. There are several kinds nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly FOUR YEARS CONSTANT USE."

Every Wringer with Cog Wheels is Warranted in every particular.

NO WRINGER CAN BE DURABLE WITHOUT COG-WHEELS.

A good CANVASSER wanted in every town.

☞ On receipt of the price from the places where no one is selling, we will send the Wringer free of expense

Probate Notice

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the City of Adrian, on Monday the twentieth day of July, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty three,

Present, ROBERT R. BEECHER, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Sarah A. Cole a minor residing out of this State On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Allen B. Ward, a friend of said minor, praying that Benjamin L. Baxter may be appointed guardian of said minor.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 31st day of August next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said Petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the Petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

ROBERT R BEECHER,
Judge of Probate.
(A TRUE COPY.) 656w3.

Commissioner's Notice.

THE undersigned appointed by the Probate Court of Lenawee County, commissioners in the estate of Jonah Dibble late of Ridgeway in said county, deceased, and said Court having allowed six months from the eighth day of June instant, for the creditors of said estate to present their claims to us for allowance. Notice is therefore hereby given that we will meet at the Justice Office of L. N. Sanford Esq., at Ridgeway, in said county, on the 4th day of August next, and at the law office of E. B. Wood in the village of Tecumseh, in said county, on the 1st day of December next at ten o'clock in the forenoon on each day, to receive, hear and determine upon such claims.

EDWIN B. WOOD,
SAMUEL WILLIS,
Dated, June 20th, 1863. Commissioners

The manifest answers to prayer, which God has given us should also be recognized as occasions for gratitude and thankfulness. This was what we might have expected, and what God gave us as soon as we began to expect it.

The 3th of April 1863, will be a day long remembered by the christian people in the north. You remember with what anxiety you came to that day, how business and social pleasure were abandoned and how you came to the house of prayer bowed down before God. I shall never forget the solemn earnestness which I saw in your faces, the felt presence of God which opened your hearts as we confessed our sins. The earnest and importunate prayer which was offered at the other Church (Baptist) in the afternoon, indicated that the answer was coming.—Many of you went away assured, not so much from what you had seen as from what you had realized, that God is a present help." And as the news came to us, thro' the religious papers, from the churches, it gave no uncertain sound.—It was "commonly reported" of Zion—'God is in the midst of her.'

The nation, for once, had been before God in humble earnest entreaty—and the answer came. At first it was like the Lord's answer to the Syrophenician woman—"It is not mete to give the children's bread to dogs." The battle of Chancellorville sounded very like a denial. But we could only say "Truth Lord, but the dogs eat of the crumbs."—We could not give up our confidence.—Yet, as the supplications of God's children went up with groanings which could not be uttered the night grew darker and more foreboding. The rebels had tried our strength and were now determined to make an end of us They began to move north, threatening Pensylvania, but actually meaning to celebrate the 4th of July in our national capitol. The anxiety increased as nothing was heard from our forces. In the meantime there was renewed entreaty at the throne of grace—Believers prayed and hoped—days became weeks, while the advance of the rebels and and the change of our commanding officer was all the news that came to us. It did seem that a great calamity was about to fall upon the nation. The blackened heavens seemed charged with divine wrath, and the flaming bolts ready to fall upon us were hardly restrained.

The two armies met—the one under an old and tried leader, the other under a commander almost unknown. The first day of July closed without victory on either side The second day was alike indecisive. The third was to determine the victory for the rebels as they supposed. They had determined to break our centre, and, to accomplish it, had massed one hundred and twenty guns. Here I may quote the words of Col. Morrow, (of the 24 Mich. Inft'y.) who had been taken prisoner, and had learned the enemy's plan of attack. He says, 'I went into a Church steeple to view the fight between the two armes, and see the great attack by Lee upon our centre * * * The rebel lines, three in number, stretching as far as the eye could see, deployed and I watched them advance. Our skirmishers fell back before them, and also a large body of troops.

I began to fear. The rebels were within quarter of a mile of our position. Then I saw the Star Spangled Banner advance, then another, then bodies of infantry. An old man who had came up into the steeple, white haired ane venerable, stretched up his hands and made such a prayer as I never before had heard, beseeching most earnestly for the victory of our arms.

It was an exciting momen. There was an awful pause, such as often preceeds infantry contests. The rebels opened with a volley, thick smoke arose. * * * Finally the firing ceased—the smoke was lifted and revealed the rebels fleeing in confusion. We had gained a glorious victory.'

We thank Col. Morrow for putting on the record of history the prayer of the old Christian patriot. This brings us back to the olden time, when Aaron and Hur stayed up the hands of Moses until the sun went down, and Amalek was discomfited. It plants our feet again upon the promise that "The effectual fervent prayer of the righteous man availeth much."

But this defeat of the rebel army was only the harbinger of other answers which were quickly to follow: Vicksburg, Port Hudson, indeed almost the entire state of Mississippi, has been wrested from the hands of rebels. Is this the work of our arms? Yes—by the help of God—and in answer to prayer. Hence let God be thanked for the manifest answers to prayer which He has given us.

We thank and praise his glorious name too because of the extent of those answers, that they assume already the dimensions of a great success on the part of the government. In addition to the fact that God helps in answer to prayer, is this other consideration that His favors have been neither few nor small.

And this thought presents a field broad enough for a thanksgiving sermon itself. I have only time to glance at the aggregate of progress which God has given the government.

You remember that on the firing of the first gun the rebellion instantly took possession of the southern states cities, forts, arsenals and citadels; crowding itself up to the southern line of Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois. You remember that the States of Tennessee, Kentucky, Missouri, (and Maryland almost) were in the hands of the rebels.

You remember that it was only by a timely and shrewd movement of Gen. Lyon that the city of St. Louis was saved to the Union, and that for the first year the rebels expected every month to secure it to themselves. Cairo was barely saved while Paducah, Columbus, New Madrid, Island No. 10, Memphis, Vicksburg, Natchez and New Orleans were in their hands and thoroughly fortified. It is enough to say that they had possession of almost every fort from New Orleans around on the Atlantic coast to the line of loyality, the government Capitol sticking in the throat of rebellion neither going up nor down.

But how stands the account to day?—Behold what God hath wrought! The Capitol plucked from the monster's jaws—Maryland saved. Baltimore, where I believe the first loyal blood was spilled is true to the Union. Her citizens to-day are caring for more wounded soldiers perhaps, than are to be found in any other city; and doing it with a heart and will. Missouri, cleaned out, is not only loyal but virtually a free state. Kentucky, having vomited forth her traitorous crew, has spoken at the ballot box for the Union, with a voice that reverberates from Maine to California. Thank God! Kentucky, the land of Clay is to be given to the Union and freedom forever. Tennessee—bleeding, outraged, plundered, burned and sacked! Tennessee is speaking too. The handful of corn in the top of the Mountain is begining to shake like Lebanon. Fort Donelson, Fort Henry, Columbus, Paducah, Memphis, New Madrid, Island No. 10, Yazoo City, Vicksburg, Port Hudson, Natchez, Baten Rouge and New Orleans with her fortresses bear aloft the Stars and Stripes; while the Mississippi from head to mouth bears the commerce of the Union and of freedom. The success of the government on the Atlantic coast has scarcely been less. The territory of the Union is rapidly being reclaimed.

But what of the armies of the government, the braves who stand for us in field the "much, every way." They have destroyed the rebel army at the west, have driven back the middle army across two States into the third, capturing a large amount of prisoners. They have defeated Lee's army, and have sent him back from his visit to the old ex-president Buchanan, minus thirty-five thousand rebels, disappointed and chagrined over his failure.—A few thousand horses, and a few trains of plunder will hardly compensate him for the thirty-five thousand men who "go no more out with him to battle."

And yet some will say, that God has given the government no success, that there is no prospect of conquering the rebellion Alas that men "having eyes see not, an having ears to hear, hear not" the notes of victory which are borne to us on every breeze. The truth is that since the first of July we have taken between seventy and eighty thousand prisoners, and now hold five thousand live officers, without counting the four thousand horse thieves recently taken in Ohio.

Here is actually as large a force taken from the enemy since the first of July as our own government put in the field at the first call.

But we have lost so many thousand brave men, you say. Yes we have.—Thousands upon thousands of the loyal sons of the government have fallen.—Their blood has stained every battle field. Their loss is felt in every social circle.—Brave men, Loyal men, Sons of the Republic, honored dead! Let the nation speak reverently of the fallen. Let us teach our children to cherish their names and imitate their deeds of devotion to civil government. Let their graves be the place where party feuds shall forever be entombed. As we weep for the soldier fallen let us strike hands around the sacred spot, all men of all creeds and parties and devote ourselves anew to God and the government which He has given us.—They have fallen! But it was the price which God has put upon our national life. What we refused to purchase by our obedience to the eternal principles of right, God offers us at the price of suffering.—We have prayed "If it be possible let this cup pass from us." But since our Father has thought best to press it to our lips we humbly accept it, We thank God that he has heard prayer—that even at such a price He is giving us deliverance.

We thank Him that He has put it into the hearts of parents to give their sons to the government, that wives have given their husbands, to see see their faces no more, that sisters have given their brothers. We will say with David, "What am I, and what is my people that we sho'd be able to offer so willingly after this sort." "Now therefore, our God we thank thee and praise they glorious name."

We thank Him also that in the progress of the government the causelessness of the rebellion is becoming more and more apparent.

Were this uprising of the southern people a mighty impulse moving them to assert their violated rights, had they drawn the sword to strike off the chains and manacles which your tyranny had fastened upon them, every success of our government would only make you hide your heads in deeper shame. But history is putting their madness on another basis. They have actually had the government in their own hands, and ruled as they pleased, until an outraged public sentiment rebuked them at the ballot box.

They have not the shadow of an excuse for unchaining the demon civil war.

Hear the fearfully prophetic words of the vice president of the rebellion, (not of any confederacy,) as he stood up in the Georgia Convention and plead for loyalty to the Union. Would that he had like some other union men of the South stood true to his noble utterances. Said he, in the Convention:

"This step once taken could never be recalled, and all the baleful and withering consequences that must follow, as you would see, will rest on the convention for all coming time. When we and our posterity shall see our lovely South desolat- by the demon of war, which this act of yours will inevitably invite and call forth; when our green fields of waving harvests shall be trodden down by the murderous soldiery and fiery car of war sweeping over our land, our temples of justice laid in ashes, all the horrors and desolation of war upon us, who but this convention will be held responsible for it? and who but he who shall have given his vote for this unwise and ill-timed measure, as I honestly think and believe, shall be held to strict account for this suicidal act by the present generation; and probably be cursed and excreated by posterity for all coming time, for the wide and desolating ruin that will inevitably follow this act you now purpose to perpetrate.

"Pause, I entreat you, and consider for a moment what reasons you can give that will even satisfy yourselves in calmer moments, what reasons you can give to your fellow-sufferers in the calamity that it will bring upon us. What reason can you give to the nations of the earth to justify it? And to what cause or one overt act can you name or point on which to rest the plea of justification? What right has the North assailed, what interest of the South has been invaded, what justice and right, has been withheld?—Can either of you to-day name one governmental act of wrong deliberately and purposely done by the government of Washington of which the South has the right to complain? I challenge the answer.

"Now for you to attempt to overthrow such a government as this, under which we have lived for more than three quarters of a century, in which we have gained our wealth, our standing as a nation, our domestic safety while the elements of peril are around us, with peace and tranquility, accompanied with unbounded prosperity and rights unassailed, is the height of madness, folly, and wickedness, to which I can neither lend my sanction nor my vote."

Noble words and truthful!—and every march, every political move of these deluded men, every battle field testifies how fitly they were spoken.

The instigators of this rebellion stand charged before God and the world, and that too by their own showing, for the guilt of this war. It had neither cause nor plausible pertence. We thank God that this is being brought out in the progress of the government, and is being engraven in history with the pen of a diamond.

The objects of the rebellion also are being revealed. It is not to resist northern fanaticism, not to defend any principle of liberty or government, but to destroy the republic. The honest confessions of privates and officers which are made to our men, who feed and care for them, attest the truth of this. After one of our loyal men (Rev. Geo. Duffield, jr.) had ministered to the necessities of one of these rebels on the field at Gettysburg, a conversation ensued, in which the wounded man, a man of intelligence, and who knows what he said, declared that the rebels were fighting for a monarchy—"We are done with republics we want a monarchy and mean ts have it." Witnesses are rising up on every hand asserting the same.—We thank God that the rebellion is unmasking itself, and its true objects are beginning to be known, according to the scripture, "be sure your sin will find you out."

God is also to be thanked for the developement of christian patriotism which He is making. While the hideous forms of rebellion are being brought to the light, the better out growth of free institutions is rejoicing the heart of the nation.

Patriotism, the most self sacrificing, laborions and persevering, is active all over the loyal north. The contributions of the people are unprecedented. The claims of the government are taking hold of all that we have esteemed dear, and we freely make the surrender. After contributing cheerfully of our best citizens, no other sacrifice will be esteemed too great to make. And the thousands of boxes of clothing, provisions, sanitary stores of every kind, which are daily borne along the thoroughfares of the north, are but the pulsations of the heart of a free people, beating in sympathy with the Union.—God is blessing us in teaching un unfaltering devotion to the government which He bequeathed to our sires.

Our best men, and those unused to such toil and hardships, covet no higher honor than to dress the wounds, to bend over the emaciated forms, and to minister, even in the washing of feet, to the brave soldier. While these at home pour out their treasure like water. You heard last evening that Boston had given over $30,000 and for the relief of our men at Gettysburg. To day the telegram acknowledges 53,000 dollars from the city of Boston. God bless the old city of historic memories! She always has behaved herself well, from the day she upset the British tea pot, to the present. May her record never be tarnished! She will hardly be set off to herself, though some have advised it, while christian patriotism is the cement that holds the Union together.

For all that we are, all that we do, all that we suffer, and all that we hope for in the future of our nation, we are this day profoundly grateful. We thank and praise thee, O God, thro' our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

"No pent-up Utica contracts our powers,
For the whole boundless Continent is ours."

DR. ROBACK'S
and
BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,

Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
	Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

DETROIT ADVERTISER & TRIBUNE.

PUBLISHED

DAILY, TRI-WEEKLY AND WEEKLY.

The oldest newspaper in Detroit, now in its 34th year—the Advertiser having been established in 1829.

In July last, by the consolidation of the Daily Advertiser and Daily Tribune, a circulation larger than that ever enjoyed by any paper in Michigan was attained. Since then a corps of editors has been secured second to none engaged on any western paper. Some have been employed for years on leading Eastern papers, and bring a rich fund of experience to the columns of the Advertiser & Tribune.

Our expenses for telegraphic despatches are larger than those of any other in Detroit, and more than seven times the amount paid by any one paper a year ago. In fact we now publish simultaneously with them, besides the regular Associated Press dispatches, all the most valuable of the special dispatches that are sent to the Philadelphia Inquirer Pittsburg Gazette, Cincinnati Gazette, St. Louis Democrat, and Chicago Tribune—the five leading papers in the cities in which they are published, and for enterprise not a whit behind the New York journals. Almost daily it occurs that we obtain news by special dispatches twelve hours in advance of the Associated Press, of the correctness of which statement we refer to the numerous readers of our Daily. In this city, where both the daily papers are habitually read by all parties, it is generally conceded that the dispatches of the Advertiser & Tribune are the most reliable and satisfactory of any published in Detroit.

We are now sparing no expense and intend to spare none to place the Advertiser & Tribune in the first rank as a *news*paper Particular attention is given to State news, and to intelligence from our soldiers in the army, a correspondent being maintained in every Michigan Regiment.

Politically the Advertiser & Tribune looks to the salvation of the country by the energetic prosecution of the war now waged against the accursed rebellion of the South. On humantarian grounds, as a war measure, and as a safeguard for the future quiet of the nation, it upholds the Presidents Emancipation Proclamation, and all other war measures of the Government; and while it admits the propriety of friendly criticisms, it holds that no direct and active opposition to the Government is consistent with loyalty, or should be tolerated in the North any more than in the States engaged in the rebellion.

As a commercial paper we aim to make the Advertiser and Tribune the best paper in the State and have employed to conduct this department a man of large experience and reputation. This will make the paper particularly acceptable to farmers, as well as merchants and millers.

Our facilities for printing a large edition have lately been greatly increased by the erection of the fastest press in use in this city, and our circulation is keeping pace with our capacity to print.

TERMS.

DETROIT DAILY ADVERTISER AND TRIBUNE.

To Mail Subscribers $2 00 per Quarter.

Contains twenty-two columns of reading matter including local news, telegraph reports, State and miscellaneous items, army correspondence, copious details of war and foreign news, editorial articles, personal and political items, commercial and marine intelligence, etc. etc.

Detroit Tri-Weekly Advertiser & Tribune

To Mail Subscribers $1 00 per quarter; 10 copies to one address $8 75 per Quarter.

Published every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Contains about thirty columns of news, comprising all the most important matter of the daily issue. This edition is well suited to farmers, merchants, and others living at a distance from a post office, or who are reached only by tri-weekly mails. It is becoming very popular throughout the State—so much so that it has increased in circulation about one thousand copies within eleven months.

Detroit Weekly Advertiser and Tribune.

$1 50 per year within the State. 20 copies to one address $25 00. Papers sent to soldiers in the army for $1 00 per year.

The Weekly is printed in quarto form, and is as large as any of the New York Weeklies. It is made up of articles carefully selected from the daily edition, and contains besides, a carefully prepared review of the news of the week, full commercial reports, a story, and a large amount of interesting miscellany, poetry, etc.

Every one wanting a good State paper should send for the

DETROIT ADVERTISER & TRIBUNE.

Subscriptions may be safely remitted by mail, or will be sent by any Postmaster.

WILCOX & GIBBS,

SEWING MACHINE.

Price, with Hemmer and Feller, $40.

THE WILCOX & GIBBS' Sewing Machine is the best Machine, without regard to price, for Family Sewing.

Braiding,
Hemming,
Felling,
Tucking,
Cording,

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seam, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances "to survive the wash-tub."

A patented device of great utility to learners, prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it.—Phila. Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder.—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines.—Pennsylvanian.

"This Machine, in the opinion of the committee, fills more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs', as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21, 1860.

"After much wear and many washings, the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others."—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experience in our own family."—Boston Traveller.

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well-merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette

"We esteem it the best machine for family use The stitch is unexceptionable."—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED"

COMPOUND

Fluid Extract Buchu

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the

BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excites the absorbents into healthy action, by which the WATER or CALCAREOUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflamation, and is good for man, woman, or CHILDREN.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEEKNESS

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot Hands,	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin,	Pallid Countenance,

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITZ, EPILEPTIC FITS,

in one of which the patient may expire Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases."

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION,

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truthfulness of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

Requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU inverlably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Female,

OLD OR YOUNG, SINGLE, MARRIED, OR CONTEMPLATING MARRIAGE.

In many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the Customary Evacuations Ulcerated or Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhœ or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the

The War Worn Soldier.

BY SAMUEL HOSMER.

O carry me back to my cottage home,
That home that's far away,
O carry me to my friends so kind,
And with them let me stay.

I am tired of marching o'er the hills,
To hunt the Rebels bold,
O, the horrors of a soldiers life
My tongue hath never told.

For here each day we have to march,
Or fight the dradful foe,
There many a brave and noble heart,
Is to the earth laid low.

I am tired of hearing the canon's roar,
'Mid storms of iron hail;
No wonder that the soldier's heart,
And courage doth him fail.

Half starved and thirsty many a time,
We march from night 'till morn;
Oh I want to go to my native home!
The home where I was born.

I want to see my children dear,
And wife so true and kind;
It would lift my drooping spirits up,
And ease my troubled mind.

Thus sang a weary soldier,
As on the ground he lay,
Thinking of his cottage home,
And friends that's far away,

But I will stay and wield the sword,
While the traitors can be found,
For no place is fit for them
Upon this sacred ground.

Oh soldier's brave! remember now,
Your father's that are gone;
They fought and bled, our flag to save,
And for us freedom won.

So let us be like our father's bold,
And never fail to stand
At our post, and help drive
The traitors from our land.

Gratia's Fortune.

CHARLES EVERETT,—in New York—, shot through the heart!"

The newspapers dropped from Gratia Everett's nerveless hand as her eye met that one line in the gastly list of "Killed and Wounded," and the blood receeded from her cheek, leaving it whiter than a marble statue.

The morning sunshine lay on the purple violet wreaths of the Axminster carpet, and glimmered over the gilded chairs of the dainty little apartment where the young heiress sat at breakfast with her solemn old governess. She was a slight, fragile little thing with large, brilliant eyes, and cheeks just tinted with tremulous pink, like white roses stained with sunset, and her dress, of snowy muslin tied at the waist with simple blue ribbons, seemed exactly adapted to her pure childish loveliness.

Mrs. Allaire took up the paper and scanned the columns through her gold spectales,

"Charles Everett—so it is," she muttered. "Gone at last, poor fellow! I wonder what his wife and little ones will do. You ought to help them a little, Gratia."

"Help them? of course I will. He was my distant cousin, wasn't he, aunty?" she asked, unconsciously using the pet name by which she had known her governess for years.

Mrs. Allaire nodded her head.

"Your cousin, child—and your rival for years."

"My rival, aunty? I do not understand!"

"Your rival in the affections of old Colonel Everett, my dear. Ah, you may well look surprised—you have been heiress to this property ever since you were a child, and never knew how it came to you."

"Tell me about it, aunty," said Gratia, setting down the tiny Sevres chocolate-cup and folding her hands together.

"There is not much to tell, Gratia, only Charles was own nephew to Colonel Everett, while you were but a remote cousin. And when Charles displeased his uncle by marrying a poor young girl in open defiance of his wishes, the old man willed all the property which was to have been his nephew's to you, a babe in the cradle, there were plenty to declare it an act of gross injustice."

"It was injustice," said Gratia, with burning cheeks and compressed lip.—"Why have I never been told this before."

"My dear, Colonel Everett had a right to bestow his property where he pleased!"

"Had not Charles Everett been brought up in expectation of being his uncle's heir? Was he not the nearest blood relation, while I am but a distant connection?"

"Yes, but—"

"More than this, has not Charles laid down his life, under the crimson folds of his country's flag—are not his wife and children in destitution, while I am reveling in the wealth that should have been theirs? Great Heaven, that this thing should have been for years, and I not to know it!"

Gratia had risen from her seat, and was walking up and down the room with strange fire flashing in her humid dark eyes. Mrs. Allaire watched her with a troubled face.

Suddenly she stopped.

"Aunty, this injustice shall be repaired—this wrong shall be righted as far as in me lies. I will give this money back to the widow and the fatherless—alas! that it should be too late to render restitution to the brave man who lies on the red field of Gettysburg!"

"Gratia, my child, are you insane?"

"No, aunty, I am only sane. Do not irritate me with useless arguments and unmeaning sophistry—my mind is made up and I wish to loose no time. Will you send for a lawyer?"

"For Mr. Southall?"

The sudden carmine blazed in the pearl pure cheek—the eyelids dropped with momentary shyness, but it was but for a second.

"For Mr. Southall, if you like. He has always had charge of my affairs, and is perhaps the best person to consult in this emergency."

"Very well, my dear, I will do as you desire; but I am quite convinced that he will think with me that this is an absurd piece of Quixotism."

"He will not, aunty," said Gratia, softly, yet positively, "I know that he will not."

"Oh, dear, dear," groaned poor Mrs. Allaire, in a conflicting tempest of annoyance and vexation; "if I had only held my foolish tongue about Charles Everett and his claims!"

But Gratia, wrapped in deep thought, had no ear for the poor old lady's lamentations.

It was a quaint old room that library, with its heavy Gothic furniture and nut-brown carpet sprinkled with scarlet and amber gleams from the stained glass window, in whose deep recess stood the round oaken table. There was a faint odor of Russia leather in the apartment, and a strange sense of quiet rested in every nook and corner.

Gratia sat at the table one round arm, white as carved pearl and circled with a plain band of gold, resting upon the piles of papers; and the other hand toying idly with her watch chain, while her wistful eyes were fixed full upon Warren Southall's face.

"The deed, then, gives all unconditionally to Charles Everett's widow and children—all?"

"It does, Miss Everett."

"And it takes effect immediately?"

"Yes."

Gratia drew a deep breath of relief.

"You will see that they receive the benefit of this document as soon as possible, sir?"

"Certain, if you wish it. And now, Miss Gratia, another subject demands your consideration."

Gratia looked up at the dark bright eyes fixed with such kindness on her childish brow, and looked down again with a strange quiver at her heart.

It was not a handsome face—no one had ever called Warren Southall handsome—yet there was a nameless something in the grave eyes and earnest mouth that irresistibly impelled you to turn and look after him as he passed you in the street. People had said, "What a pity, poor fellow," when he came back from Antietam with his left sleeve fastened, empty, to his breast; but Gratia had always felt a strange secret pride in that folded sleeve—was it not a badge of the Legion of Honor brought back from the rolling clouds of battle, the very mouth of red-throated artillery.

"Another subject?" she repeated hesitatingly.

"Yes. You have transformed yourself from an heiress to a poor girl—almost a penniless girl."

"I know it," said Gratia, calmly. "I have been thinking it all over, Mr. Southall. I am perfectly aware that it now becomes necessary for me to earn my daily bread. Need I say how cheerfully I shall do it."

He bowed most reverentially before the clear light of those hazel eyes, and she went on:

"There is but one way in which I can hope to maintain myself, and that is to go out as a governess. I know but few people, Mr. Southall; but your circle of friends is large, and—and if you would interest yourself for me a little—a word of recommendation from you—"

Gratia stopped to hide the tremulousness in her voice. Southall was regarding her with earnestness.

"I think I know of a situation for you Miss Gratia."

"Do you?" Her face lighted up.—"Oh, Southall! Do you think I could do justice to it?"

"I have no doubt on that head."

"But you know I am so young, so inexperienced."

"Neither of these facts would militate against you," he returned smiling, although he had grown quite pale.

"Yet I have such a dread of going into the world. Do you think they would be gentle with me, Mr. Southall—at first you know, until I learned the nature of my duties? Would they be kind?"

"I am sure of that," he said, vehemently. She looked at him, a litte surprised.

"What is the situation?"

"As my wife, Gratia; as the light and love of my whole being. Nay, dearest, do not turn pale at my temerity. Will you love me? Will you trust in me? I should never have ventured to woo the wealthy heiress, maimed and battle-scarred as I am; but, Gratia, I may tell you how I have loved her all these years; how my last thought when they left me for dead on the field, was of her. Dearest, I could not love you more, but this day's noble renunciation has taught me to revere you still more deeply. Will you accept the 'situation,' Gratia?"

Something in her eyes had answered him ere he ceased speaking, for even as the words crossed his lips, he drew her to his breast with a deep thrill of tenderness.

"My love! my wife!"

And so on the same day that Gratia Everett gave up her worldly wealth to the children of the dead soldier she found a greater treasure in Warren Southall's love—a treasure which neither time nor change could take from her. Truly, "it's more blessed to give than to receive."

The Printer's Estate.

The Printer's dollars! Where are they? A dollar here and a dollar there, scattered over numerous small towns, all over the country, miles and miles apart—how shall they be gathered together? The paper maker, the building owner, the journeyman compositor, the grocer, the tailor, and all assistants to him in carrying on his business, have their demands, hardly ever so small as a single dollar.—But the mites from here and there must be diligently gathered and patiently horded, or the wherewith to discharge the large bills will never become bulky. We imagine the printer will have to get up an address to his widely scattered dollars, something like the following "Dollars, halves, quarters, dimes, and all manner of fractions into which ye are divided, collect yourselves and come home! Ye are wanted! Combinations of all sorts of men, that help the printer to become a proprietor, gather such force and demand with such good reasons your appearance at his counter that nothing short of a sight of you will appease them. Collect yourselves, for valuable as you are in the aggregate, single you will never pay the cost of gathering. Come in here in single file, that the printer may form you into batalion, and send you forth again into battle for him and vindicate his feeble credit. Reader are you sure you havn't a couple of the printer's dollars sticking about you clothes?

How Dick took the Turkeys.

A story is told of Dick, a Darkey, in Kentucky, who was a notorious thief, so vicious in this respect that all the thiefts in the neighborhood were charged to him. On one occasion Mr. Jones, a neighbor of Dick's master, called and said that Dick must be sold out of that part of the country, for he had stolen all his (Mr. Jones) turkeys, Dick's master could not think so. The two, however, went into the field where Dick was at work, and accused him of the theft.

"You stole Mr. Jones' turkeys," said the master.

"No, I didn't, massa," responded Dick.

The master presisted.

"Well," at length said Dick, "I'll tell you massa; I didn't steal dem turkeys but last night I went across Mr. Jones pasture, and saw one of your rails on de fence, so I brought home de rail, and, confound it, when I come to look, dare was nine turkeys on de rail."

Bring us some Wood.

Slander.

One of the most detestable, disgraceful and abominable acts of which poor fallen human nature can be guilty, is that of Slandering. How debasing is this evil propensity in the sight of Heaven; and how careful should all be who lay claim to christianity or morality to keep their skirts clear of this immoralizing trait of our corrupt nature. The practice of villifying the character of others has become one of the prevailing vices of the times. It pervades all classes of society. How many professing the name of Christ indulge in this evil propensity. In charity let us impute it to no other motive in such, than thoughtlessness; for we know no one professing the love of Christ will deliberately traduce the character of his neighbor, or assist in circulating reports of which he may not be conversant, or if knowing the truth thereof, will he not rather cover them with the cloak of charity? The Savior while on earth, though without spot or blemish, escaped not the vile imputations of the Slanderer. Then can it be wondered at, that others less righteous than he should not escape the foul aspersions of these disciples of Satan? Let us picture to ourselves the destruction and the misery that this moral siroccо casts over communities, families and individuals. How often have we seen the social intercourse of communities broken up, the fraternal feelings of families obliterated and the reputation of an individual destroyed, by the foul imputations of the Slanderer. How many hearth stones have been made desolate, how many followers of the Lord have been made to relinquish their steadfastness and return to the world, through the satanic influence of the Slanderer. Many persons who in other respects may be well disposed, indulge in this practice without knowing the mischief they are doing by retailing reports of what they may have heard. Reader do you even indulge in this vice (for vice it is,) perhaps while endeavoring to entertain company, by retailing to them reports about others, at the expense of their characters and perhaps happiness. Do you ever picture to yourself the mischief and misery you may cause by indulging in this morbid habit of retailing scandal. Do you never see any of the evils resulting from the practice of scandalizing your fellow beings? If you do and still persist in it, then may God in His infinite mercy have pity on you. This propensity to lay bare the real or imaginary faults of others has become one of the crying evils of the times. It seems to be a monomania with some to hear and retail scandal. This evil prevails to such an extent that it behoves every christian, every moralist and every good citizen to discourage every attempt to injure the reputation of any person be he rich or poor. Poverty oft presents a shining mark and furnishes much material for scandal mongers to manufacture capital out of. Especially is this the case in regard to females. Many seem to think that it is almost impossible for a female to be poor and labor for a subsistence and be virtuous; hence so many gratuitous opinions on persons of this class. How often the most insignificant affair after passing from mouth to mouth, assumes large proportions somewhat after the manner of the story we all probably have read, of the man who was said to have vomited the crows, making good the adage that "a story by being oft repeated loses nothing." What a vast amount of tea-table chat is made up in canvassing the characters of others. Much of it happily begins in nothing, ends in nothing, and finally amounts to nothing. The following is a specimen of some of it.—Miss Fizzle an inveterate talker, Miss Snooks a pretended christian and Miss Dobbs an old maid of 40. Miss Dobbs observed that old mother Dumps had told her that she had heard Jones' wife say, that Joe Johnson's wife had told her that young Thomas heard that the widow Craig should have said that Captain Snyder's wife supposed, that Bill Simpson's wife thought Peter Funk's wife believed, old Mrs. Ring reckoned Sam Foster's wife had told Bets Fleming, that she had heard that Mrs. Hobbs did say, that Fanny Dunks presumed that Molly Dobbins had heard black Jack's wife say that her grand mother had told her aunt Jerusha that Ruth Sharpshins had heard that old mother Fisk said that it was reported as a matter of fact, that Miss Dolly Lightfinger had stolen a new Corset Lacer!!! At other times a report does not terminate in such a trivial manner, but charges both grave and weighty are brought against the character of the slandered person, which if not substantiated still leave a bad impression on the minds of the hearers. How much better would it be if the time consumed in scandalizing was spent in moral, intellectual and religious conversation. Is there a character so much to be despised as the smooth faced slanderer, the retailer of falsehood, instigated perhaps by feelings of jealousy and revenge, who seeks to wound the reputation of his fellow-being with the dagger of detraction? And it may be he does it at the same time while professing friendship for his victim. Let every good member of society discountenance all efforts to blacken the character of his fellow-man, and let us all instead of canvassing our neighbor's imperfections, reflect on our own failings and shortcomings. We cannot better close this article than by quoting the following lines from a well-known author:

"Nay, speak no ill! a kindly word
Can never leave a sting behind,
And, oh! to breathe each tale we've heard
Is far beneath a noble mind
Full oft a better seed is sown
By choosing that the kinder plan;
For if but little good be known,
Still let us speak the best we can.

Give me the heart that fain would hide—
Would fain another's fault efface;
How can it pleasure human pride
To prove humanity but base?
No: let us reach a higher mood,
A nobler estimate of man;
Be earnest in the search for good,
And speak of all the best you can.

Then speak no ill—but lenient be
To others' failings as your own;
If you're the quick to find fault to see,
—Be not the first to make it known;
For life is but a passing day.
No lip may tell how brief its span:
Then oh! the little time we stay,
Let's speak of all the best we can." W.

Aunt Jemima on Health.

Yes, man is fearfully and dreadfully made, as the scripters says, and women are a good deal like him. Now all diseases rises in the stomach, and a body must keep a takin' medicine to keep um out, and if a body hadn't any stomach why there'd be no danger of there bein' sick and they wouldn't have to take medicines. And that is a true sayin' that "An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," only I think in order to make it all sure it's best to take an ounce and a pound aforehand, afore the evil day cometh, as the scripters says, fur you can't tell aforehand what sickness or ailing a day may bring forth, as the scripters says. Now Providence has provided an arb or root to cure every disease flesh is heir to; though when I told Yedekiah so, he said they must a been created then after Adam got under the wrong apple tree, and concluded to move out of the garden, and quit the fruit business and playin' gentleman, and go to farmin, 'cause they'd ben no use for them afore that, and nothin's made in vain, as the scripters says, but he's always a askin' questions jest to make everybody and everything look rediculous, till I don't pay any attention to his nonsense any more; but as I was sayin there's a medicine to fit every disease, only we can't always jest tell what it is, cause it may be one thing and may be another, so I jest give all on um I think of, cause if one don't hit it why who knows but another will, jest as I thrash all the yunguns when one of um has been cuttin' up, so as to be certain of gettin' the right one, and then two to one they all deserve it for some mischief or another, or leastways will deserve it afore a week's over, fur children's as prone to do mischief as the sparks is to fly up chimney, as the scripter says

A Cool Thief.

An infirm old gentleman was found by a rougue moaning sadly for something lost.

"What is the matter, sir?" said the fellow.

"O, sir, a villain has just stolen my hat from my head, and ran away with it!"

"Why don't you run after him?" asked the rogue.

"Bless your heart, sir, I can't run at all. I can hardly walk."

"The duce you can't!" said the rogue. "And he stole your hat?"

"Yes, he did, sir."

"And you can't run?"

"Not I."

"Nor catch him?"

"No."

"Then here goes for your wig!" and accordingly, pulling off the thatch from his head, the fellow went off like a shot from a skillet, and the old gentleman was left as bald as a coot.

The Two Strong Arms.

A great scholar in Germany who was anxious to find the right way to heaven, but for all his learning could not succeed, went one day to church. On his way he met a poor old man to whom he wished "Good morning." The poor man thanked him, but added, he did not exactly remember ever having a bad one. "Well, then I wish you much luck." "I thank you, sir; but to tell the truth, I never yet have had bad luck" The scholar did not know what to make of the man, so he requested him to explain his meaning. "With pleasure," said the poor man. "I have never yet had a sorrowful morning; for if I am hungry, I praise God; if I am cold, I praise God; if it rain or snow, thunder or lighten—let the weather be what it may, I praise God; and am always joyful. And I have never had a bad week. I resign myself to my dear Lord and Savior, and am sure he does nothing wrong. What he permits, whether sweet or sour, joy or grief, I know is all for the best, and accept it with thanks and joy. 'All things work together for good to them that love God.'"

The scholar was astonished at the faith of the poor man, and asked again, what he would do if God should thrust him into hell at last. "Thrust me into hell? that he will never do," answered the poor man; "but if he should, I have two arms—the arm of faith and the arm of love—with them I would grasp him and hold him so fast, that he must go with me; and where my Lord and my God is, there is my heaven."—American Messenger.

Always too Late.

There is a portion of mankind who are always, either naturally or habitually, behind hand. This trait of their character is easily discovered in every thing that relates to their conduct and pursuits in life. Such a man goes too late to bed, and, as necessary consequence, gets up too late in the morning. Being out of bed too late, he is too late at breakfast, and this deranges the affairs of his household all the forenoon. Having been behind hand at breakfast, he is of course behind-hand at dinner, and lastly at supper. If he makes an appointment, he never gets to the place in season, and if he is to meet a board of directors, or a committee, or any public body whatever, he is always twenty minutes or half an hour too late, and upon being reminded that he has obliged his associates to wait, and thereby to waste their time, he charges his delay to his watch, which like its owner, is almost invariably at least a quarter of an hour too slow. If he intends to take his departure in a steamboat, you will meet him two streets off as the last bell tolls, and after running down to the wharf till he is out of breath, he finds the boat hauled off, and if he gets aboard at all, it is at the hazard of his life. If he is an attendant upon public worship, he never reaches the church until after the services have commenced, and greatly disturbs the congregation by entering in the midst of their devotional exercises.

In short, such men labor and toil and drudge on through life, just as uniform and regular in their concerns half an hour too late, as punctual people are in season. If such persons could by some great exertion redeem that half hour and set their watches right, they might go on with the same ease they do now and always be in season.

☞ Generation after generation have felt as we do now, and their lives were as active as our own. The heavens will be as bright over our graves as they are about our paths. Yet a little while and all this will have happened. The throbbing heart will be stilled, and we shall be at rest. Our funeral will wend its way, and the prayers will be said, we shall be left in the darkness and silence of the tomb, and it may be but for a short time we shall be spoken of, but the things of life shall creep on and our names be forgotten. Days shall continue to move on, and laughter and song will be heard in the room where we died, and the eyes that mourned for us be dry and animated with joy, and even our children will cease to think of us, and remember to lisp our names no more.

☞ Our infinite obligations to God do not fill our hearts half as much as a petty measuring of one own; nor his infinite perfections as much as our smallest wants.

☞ I've resigned the bench, says the bench. That's what a lawyer said on quitting the profession and taking up shoemaking.

Affairs at Charleston.

A gentleman who has lately arrived at New York from Richmond and Charleston, professes to have been a resident of the latter place much of the time during the war. He was there when Sumter was first bombarded by our iron-clads, and he has positive knowledge of the injury sustained by that fortification during the attack. He says that a breach was made large enough to drive a horse and cart through, and that after the vessels withdrew the utmost exertions were used, by sending to the fort bales of cotton and sand bags, to repair the damages sustained. Every one supposed there would be a renewal of the attack the next day; they imagined the first to be only a feeler—and thought if it was, Sumpter's chance would be a poor one if, on the next attempt, a determination to reduce the work was manifested.

This informant states the precise locality where four of the shells from Gen Gillmore's "Swamp Angel" struck the city of Charleston, at the first bombardment. Three of them struck within four blocks of each other, and the four were within the space of half a mile. One hit the spire of a church, two burst in warehouses, and one in the street. The utmost consternation prevailed in the city. When these terrible missiles began to arrive the firemen were all ready to extinguish the fire that might be caused by the exploding shells, and the alarm bells summoned every one to arms, no one knowing what might be expected next.—At this time there were not more than 3 400 non-combatants in the city, and these have since taken their departure for a safer locality leaving the city entirely to the care of those who would rather fight than run away. He says that the citizens of Charleston have fully determined to destroy the city rather than surrender it. The latter they will do, and have everything ready to apply the torch in a manner to render its destruction complete when it is found they can no longer keep possession of it.

Beauregard's force is estimated at about 14,000 men. Many of them are veterans, and even the home guards are as well drilled as regulars. Beauregard will delay our approach as much as he possibly can; he will dispute every inch, and strive in every way to recover the prestige he lost when he permitted Gen. Gilmore to obtain the foothold on Morris Island that must eventually cost them the loss of their beloved city the hotbed of Secession, and the point from whence sprung this cruel and unnecessary war.—Beauregard lost much of his reputation as a soldier and engineer officer when he lost Morris Island. His popularity has fallen off wonderfully, especially with the people of Charleston, who idolized him before as the man who compelled 75 men to surrender to a force of 10,000, aided by batteries of the heaviest description, and gave them possession of their Sumpter, the fort that now possesses as much value to them as a woork of defense as any pile of old bricks. The Carolinians will never forgat or forgive Beauregard when Moultrie, Sumpter, and the ground upon which Charleston stood passes from their possession into that of the Yankees.

Border Ruffians in Nebraska.

The territory of Nebraska has not escaped the excitements and violent scenes of border warefare. A sad condition of society exists in the southeast portion, adjacent to Missouri and Kansas. A man named Thomas Sloan lately arrived at St. Louis as a fugitive from Richardson county. He says that a party of his neighbors, disguised, went to his house about 2 o'clock on the morning of the 3d inst., broke in his door, and after some parley, gave him four days in which to leave the Territory, threatening that if he did not do so they would burn his house down. Then, after robbing him of his rifle, they left, and served three other families the same way. The Sunday night following, a body of sixteen men past within half a mile of Sloan's house, going towards the Great Nemaha river. They went to the place of ex Sheriff Keeper, and robbed him of $400 in county orders, $200 in money, and three horses. Other citizens were robbed in the same manner. Some of the men engaged in these exploits are said to have been members of the 5th Missouri regiment. Saturday night, 12th inst. Sloan gathered up his property, and took his family, consisting of his wife and little daughter, into the hazel brush, where they stayed all night, being afraid of an attack. He leaves a field of 1400 bushels of corn at the mercy of the gang.

Sharpshooters' Feats.

Some of the sharp-shooting on the Rapidan in Virginia has been very sharp. A rebel officer appeared mounted near the river, when 40 shots resounded, and the venturer dropped instantly from his saddle. A squad of the 8th New York cavalrymen ensconced themselves in a carpenter's shop, making barricades and breastworks of the bench and some heavy cherry plank, boring loop-holes with an augur, out of which they contrived to fire with deliberate aim and make good hits. Lieut. Dick Taylor had fired many effective shots through one of these, when, dropping behind the woodwork to reload—"chick"—in an instant came a well directed bullett through the upper edge of his loophole, shivering the plank, and releasing him from an honorable death or an ugly wound by the narrowest escape. Corporal Banks of the 3d Indiana, had built a breastwork of logs across a space between two houses, and for five hours, with deadly aim, did execution whenever a head or limb appeared above the enemy's rifle pits. At last, he laid his carbine again upon the log, a minie ball entered his forehead, and he fell, a sacrifice to his bold persistence.

Any number of papers may be sent by mail under a two cent stamp, provided they do not exceed four ounces in weight. This fact, it appears, people will not remember, although it has been frequently published.

☞ Mr. J. C. Watson of Ann Arbor, has discovered a new planet.

General Gillmore's Guns.

Gen. Gillmore's success in battering down with his 200 pounder Parrott guns the walls of Fort Sumter, seems to have produced more excitement and discussion in Europe than any event of the war.—Such feats of artillery practice amaze and confound them, and have already given them more respect for us than any other of our achievements. The London Army and Navy Gazette says that the Americans have constructed and put to service at Charleston cannon of calibres which to the English are known only as of theoretical and probable attainment. "Before such projectiles as these guns carry, the breaching of masonry whether of brick or stone, is but a question of short time. Had such guns been available in the trenches before Sebastopol, the Allies would have made short work, not only of the Redan and Malakoff, and bastion du mat, but of the shipping and of the forts on the other side of the harbor." "It is undeniable," continues Mr. Russell, "that the establishment of a few of Brig. Gen. Gillmore's batteries before Sebastopol, on the 17th of October, 1854, instead of the 'tremendous armament of which Lord Granville boasted, would have 'knocked the place into a cocked hat in twenty-four hours." Even the terrible ship, the Warrior, would not be safe against the new American artillery, they are beginning to suspect; for the same authority says: "Unquestionably the Admiralty would be rather nervous about the result of firing a 450 pound shot against the side of the Warrior, at the distance of 200 yards notwithstanding the experiments," &c. The question then arises—have the English any such guns? And they are forced to a loud negative. "In the face of these facts we are obliged to record that our scientific officers are of opinion that the best English gun for breaching purposes is the old 68 pounder!" It is a lamentable confession but it seems to have an excellent effect upon the soul; for the Army and Navy Gazette deduces the following remarkable bit of philosophy from the startling facts which have been revealed to it: 'Do not let us pooh-pooh the Americans. If we are wise it is the last thing we ought to do." Yes, yes.

Great Riches from Oil.

Col. Forney writes to one of his papers, the Philadelphia Press, a graphic letter from the oil region of the Keystone State. His letter is dated at Corry, and he says:

"All that I saw reminded me of what I had heard of California. The value of the oil transported from this point alone is estimated at $60,000 a day! Men who one year ago were bankrupts, and some of them almost beggars, are now realizing from 1 to $3,000 per diem—and these are net profits. The process of extracting the raw material once you get a good well, is cheap and simple, and the supply seems to be inexhaustible. A great change has naturally come over the whole of this border. Everybody goes into the oil trade. The New Bedford whalers have given up their hazardous toils on the treacherous sea, and are getting good wages or making large fortunes here. Over 4,000 wagons are daily engaged in the transportation of the precious liquid to the different points of departure. The barrel trade alone is a source of enormous profit. The population of Titusville, Crawford county, has increased in one year from 400 to 4,000, and Oil City the great centre of the 'flowing wells,' is already a rough and vigorous borough, never before known on the maps. It is most difficult to obtain laborers, for where wealth is so easy to obtain every man expects to be a millionaire. And yet strange to say the pioneer of this wonderful development, the man who first bored deep enough into the bowels of the earth to cause the oil to burst forth in countless gallons, Mr. Drake, of Connecticut, is now a poor man at Titusville, living upon the proceeds of Justice of the Peace, while those who came after him are making incredible fortunes. Mr. Downer's great works, marvels of Yankee daring and skill, marvels of science and trophies of his successful investigation, are most extensive and perfect; and I was not surprised to see that while reaping a fair reward for his own great sacrifices and energy, he did not forget Drake."

An Ambitious Woman.—The imprisonment of Mrs. Major Jones as a spy, in the Army of the Potomac, is of doubtful benefit. "Major" refuses to leave on parole. She is tall, robust, comely, only nineteen, of independent means, and a Yankee girl from Cambridge, Mass. She entered the army nominally as a vivandiere in a New York regiment. Once in the field, she boarded at a farm-house, applied herself to military study, and desired to obtain service as a spy or scout. She determined to prove her value, and sought to reach the front of the army by an irregular pass. From thence she trusted to enter the enemy's lines, and triumphantly to return with information which would render her value unquestionable. The result was incarceration in a prison. One is reminded of the inventor of the steam engine, whom Richelieu enclosed in a cage for his importunacy in urging his ideas. "Major" Jones must not be employed, because she is a woman, notwitstanding that the ready-witted Southerners have availed themselves of Belle Boyd, and others of her sex, with great effect in the same duty, and notwithstanding that in Europe, both armies and Governments find women among their most valuable aids in circumventing enemies.

☞ The trunks of two trees have been sent from the battle-field of Gettysburg, one for the Pennsylvania Historical Society, the other for the Historical Society of Massachusetts. The trees were growing in a part of the field where the fiercest encounter took place, as shown by the fact that one of them has 250 bullet holes in the trunk within the space of 21 feet, the other 110 bullet holes in about the same space. The trunks are not more than a foot in diameter.

TECUMSEH, MICH., OCT. 1, 1863.

To Our Patrons.

Having purchased Mr. Castle's interest in the Herald, we, this day, assume the responsibility of Editor and Publisher. This we do in part from good will, a hearty love of journalism with which we have long been familiar; and in fact also from the earnest solicitation of the business men in town, and to some extent, from our patrons in the country. All feel that we must have a local paper in Tecumseh. We want it for the sake of its general intelligenc; we need also a medium of general and constant business information; and we must have a Press for the publication of such incidental and contingent notices as are generally found in newspapers. We must have all these means of intelligence at home or none of them. We must do our own advertising entire or go abroad for it, and that too at a great outlay of both time and money; besides contributing to the interest of competitors in business in adjacent towns which we cannot well afford to do. If we are to be a thriving town and community it must be so far as possibly by doing our own business of every kind, and retaining the profits of it ourselves.

To meet these wants we have made the needful outlay, and assumed the responsibility of conducting and issuing the Herald. We shall devote to it all our time and ability. On these conditions we hope for success.

It may be proper to add that our paper will be the advocate of no system of party politics, but will be governed as recently by the principles of our motto—"The Constitution, the Union, and the Enforcement of the Laws." The Union now as ever in time past has our heart; and our hopes are for its speedy relief from all embarrassment and its lasting prosperity. Such intelligence as bears upon its interests selected with all possible care and impartiality, will as far as possible find a place in our columns. We shall write nothing ourselves and we desire our correspondents to write nothing in contravention of this general principle. And we also add that we shall at all times gratefully receive and publish as we have opportunity and the means, any kindly and judiciously prepared communications our friends may be able and willing to give us. And we simply say that no pains on our part shall be spared in conducting the paper.

The State Fair.

The State Fair, which came off at Kalamazoo during the past week, has been a perfect success. It speaks well for the natural resources of the State of Michigan and the industrious enterprise of its inhabitants, that notwithstanding the great draft made upon its substance by the war, it still possesses wealth and energy sufficient to afford the display that characterized every department of the late Fair.—The efforts made by the people of Kalamazoo to entertain their visitors and accommodate all, were attended by more success than could reasonably have been expected, and no candid person would refuse to acknowledge the enterprise displayed by that thrifty town. The arrangements were on an extended scale, and although in some instances they proved inadequate, that is rather due to the entirely unexpected rush of exhibitors than to any lack of ability or desire to accommodate them. The Fair grounds were pleasantly located, and admirably fitted for the purpose, and we do not think that we err in saying that the Fair was the completest success of any similar exhibition in this State for some years.

The best praise, however, for the late State Fair is the fact, that it has freed the Association from debt and left it with a large surplus in the treasury, which, if economically managed, will prove a fund for the establishing of the Association as a fixed and permanent institution. The thrift and care that has guided the Association amid many financial complications has established no common claim upon their gratitude and should receive no mean reward. We close with the wish that succeeding fairs may be as prosperous and as successful as the present.—Ad. & Trib.

The Scotchman who was killed on the railroad near Saranac, Iona county, last Saturday, was named Arthur Hawkins. He was an employe of the Railroad Company, and it is supposed that in going out to smoke he fell from the platform, and was not missed until the following freight train coming along, which also run over him.

From the Eighteenth.

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 18, '63.

I said in my last since Tennessee was now clear of rebels in arms, and thus is recovered to the Union as far as arms can effect this purpose, that it might be interesting to your readers to know something about the views and feelings of Tennesseans in regard to the old Government.

As far as East Tennessee is concerned, it is scarcely necessary that I should remind you that it is as loyal, yea more loyal than many districts in the northern States. The men and women of East Tennessee have suffered for the Union as no other portion of the nation has suffered, and may they long enjoy in tranquility the homes to which the late success of Burnside has restored them.

I have talked with many East Tennessee refugees and not only are they in favor of the Union as it was and the Constitution as it is, but they believe in all the measures of the Administration and are unqualified advocates of Emancipation, and this is true not only of them but of all the original Union men whose opinions I have heard expressed in this city.

There have lately been two Union meetings at the Capitol, and every speaker spoke in favor of emancipation. Most of those who spoke were East Tennessee refugees; but Judge Bryant of this city spoke in favor of emancipaiion, and advised that a legislature should be elected as soon as possible, and the Constitution of the State revised so as to make it agree with the emancipation Proclamation. A young man of this place also spoke in favor of immediate emancipation, declaring that Federal bayonets had liberated not only four millions of black men but quite an equal number of white men, who until now our arms have prevailed, never dared to discuss slavery.—He said that the young ladies had no small share of the sin of the present rebellion on their heads, since it was next to impossible to withstand their eloquent appeals supported now by smiles now by tears, and that he himself had escaped as by miracle from their subtle wiles.

In speaking of the people of Middle and West Tennessee we must remember that a large portion of the able-bodied are yet in the rebel armies, and not a few paters-familias and some maters-familias are refugees in Rebeldom. You know that when our arms have expelled the rebel armies from any portion of a State three alternatives are offered to the inhabitants—to take the oath of allegiance, the non-combatant's oath, or else to go beyond the lines. Some have left the State at the approach of our armies.

Thus it will be seen that in all districts held for any length of time by our armies, there are only those who have taken either of these oaths, while in districts newly regained there may be some who will yet have to be sent beyond the lines. One word here about Tennessee soldiers. Scarcely a day passes without the arrival of twenty to fifty deserters. These are of course all privates who were poor men and the sons of poor men little interested in the fate of the Confederacy when Tennessee is abandoned, and prefer serving the government that is protecting their poor relatives to one that has been forced to abandon them. They say that they were forced into the service, and now that they consider the Confederacy a sinking ship they lay hold on the first plank that offers them hope of safety.

The officers, sons of wealthy slave-owners, or slave-owners themselves, not only see the loss of their property in the fall of the Confederacy, but they deem their honor at stake and will hold out while they have the shadow of an army, to which slim dimensions it is being reduced in this department if all accounts are true.

The greater part of those who have taken the non-combatant's oath are ladies who prefer to enjoy the good things of this life under the protection of those Yankees whom they despise, to the privations awaiting them as refugees among those whom they are pleased to call the gallant defenders of southern rights.—These ladies and indeed many who have taken the oath of allegiance are at but little pains to conceal their southern sympathies and yankee antipathies. Abe Lincoln, the yankees, the foreigners, &c., are terms, if not used in connection with the most abusive epithets, are spoken with a twist of the nose, and a curl of the upper lip, expressing the deepest contempt.

This same strong undercurrent of hatred to all the northern people whom they are pleased indiscriminately to call yankees, is seen more plainly still in the language of the children. Straws show how the wind blows, says the adage, and the secret principles of any family find the truest expression in the language and action of the younger members less trained in deception.

Some men too, have taken the non-combatant's oath and of course they are rebel sympathizers and do not deny it.—I have had much opportunity of late to hear the opinions of this class of men.—They claim to have been for the Union to the last, and now loudly denounce the fickleness and inconsistency of some men who were the unqualified advocates of secession at the first, and now that the cards are turned are its loudest denouncers. These men seem to have voted the Bell-Everett ticket and might be called the melior pors societatis, if by melior pors is meant the wealthy, the learned, the refined, the church-going.

But however much we may admire the consistency of these men, still they are the men to be feared. No doubt a large number of those who have taken the oath would be as good secessionists as they are now Union men if the rebels regained the State. But as there is little to be feared in respect to such a contingency, we may count upon them, though it be true of them as Shakspeare says:

"Ah, simple men you know not what you swear.
Look, as I blow this feather from my face,
And as the air blows it to me again,
Obeying with my wind when I do blow,
And yielding to another when it blows,
Commanded always by the greater gust;
Such is the lightness of you common men."

But still I doubt not that not a few are sincere in their conversion. They say that they were carried away by a storm of passion that swept over the State and voted for the Separation, (a euphemism that repenting rebels prefer to use instead of Secession,) even against reason. Their sympathies were with the south, and though they believed secession wrong in principle yet they went with their feelings.

It reminds me of some men whom I have known to join the Presbyterian Church, because they liked better the decorum of its service than that of some other Church whose doctrine they preferred.

The friendship of the poorer classes may be counted upon with the greatest certainty. Not only are they reconciled to the government because of its feeding the needy whose relatives are often fighting against it, but they come in contact with our soldiers whose superior advantages in point of education and other privileges, make them feel the superiority of our northern free institutions.

Hence the poor are nearly all now in favor of emancipation, though by no means believing in negro equality—two ideas very distinct though many cunning demagogues (north and south) have mixed these ideas to turn the minds of the poor against emancipation. D. BOYD.

Instruments of Torture.

A series of lectures has recently been delivered in London by Madame Clara Leyton Lecard, with a view to bringing to light and explaining certain instruments of torture said to have been discovered recently in the fortress of Castellamare, at Palermo, and supposed to have been used on political prisoners during the reign of the two last Bourbon Kings of Naples. The instruments of torture were produced, and it was stated that a certain Dr. Guiseppe Mani, of Palermo, having had reason to believe that peculiar instruments of torture were concealed in the fortress of Castellamare, obtained a commission from the present Government to search for them; and the result was, within a walled up recess three special devices for cruelly punishing perverse and non-confessing prisoners were discovered. They consist of a foot-burner made of plates of copper, beneath which flames are kindled, and which scorch the soles of the feet of a person chained upon it; of a chair of iron and copper very ingeniously and with much mechanical skill devised, in which the sufferer is helplessly confined, while beneath him a fire is caused to burn; and a cap of iron which fits on the head and beneath the chin of the wearer, can be screwed up to any given point of tightness. These singular machines for inflicting pain were exhibited in a harmless fashion on the person of a freeborn Briton, who, when a "little fire" was about to be created beneath the iron chair in which he was bound fast, asserted his liberty by very decidedly declining to have it brought into contact with the warm metal on which he was seated and within which he was enclosed. The finding of the machines is very punctiliously and authoritatively attested, but no clue is given as to the period to which they could positively be assigned.

New Patents to Michigan Men.—The following were among the patents issued from the U. S. Patent Office, for the week ending the 15th September:

To Frederick Aldrick, jr., Augusta, Mich., for improvement in ladders.

To Wm. B. Robinson, of Detroit, Mich., for improvement in side valves for steam engines.

To C. Ross, of Hartland, Mich., for improvements in machines for measuring grain.

To B. W Boyce, of Lansing, Mich., for improvement in door weather strips.

To I. W. Lamb, of Detroit, Mich., for improvement in knitting machines.

To J. Stiles, of Salem, Mich., for improvements in ladders.

New York, Sept. 28.—The Herald says: "The reported movement of troops, as published in one or two papers, are nothing better than sensation paragraphs. There is very little doubt that the statements have been made by interested parties for the purpose of operating on Wall street."

A special to the Herald contains the following: "The sanitary condition of this army is very satisfactory. It is generally thought that it was never in a better condition than at present. There is good reason to believe that Lee is not anxious to press an engagement, and that if he should attempt a flank movement, his labor will be in vain. A large portion of our army is uncamped near Culpepper."

A special to the Times says Gen. Slocum, commanding the 12th Army Corps, has tendered his resignation to the President.

New York, Sept. 28.—The Herald's special, Washington, Sept. 27th, says: "The good news received from Rosecrans is interpreted by the official organ this morning to mean that reinforcements have reached him, and that he may soon decide when he shall resume the offensive. It would be highly improper at present to reveal in full the nature as to render an attack on our lines exceedingly improbable."

Cincinnati, Sept. 28.—The Commercial's correspondent gives a less gloomy account of the battle in Georgia than those by other correspondents. Our losses in artillery and baggage have been greatly exaggerated. All our divisions fought well. Our army was drawn up around Rossville, in good order, awaiting an attack, but the enemy declined to offer battle, and the army moved back, and took up a strong position near Chattanoga. The soldiers are in good spirits. There is no lack of guns, ammunition or provisions.

There is nothing new from the Army of the Potomac. Reports of its embarkation for a new field of action are denied. It is mostly encamped near Culpepper, and Lee does not seem anxious to force an engagement. It has been generally supposed that the Union army would be anxious to do that. Gen. Slocum of the 12th Army Corps has tendered his resignation.

There are 500,000 effective arms in the different arsenals in the country.

Figures in the Provost Marshal General's office show that the absentees from all our armies number 92,788.

Gen. Burnside's resignation is said to have been accepted, and Gen. Hooker is spoken of as his successor.

The story going the rounds of the press that 18,000 men were absent from the Army of the Potomac alone, or in other words, had deserted, is incorrect. From figures in the Provost Marshal General's office, it is ascertained that on the 1st of July, 1863, there were but 92,780 deserters from all the armies in the field. Since the establishment of a Bureau of Deserters, over 15,000 of these miserable skulkers have been returned to their regiments.

Baltimore, Sept. 28.—The steamer Spaulding arrived at Fortress Monroe yesterday with dates from Charleston Bar to Friday morning. Nothing of importance had occurred. Gen. Gilmore was actively engaged in erecting seige guns. Bad weather interfered with naval operations

The exchange of prisoners up to Sept. 1st releases about 20,000, and still leaves on our hands 40,000 more.

Washington, Sept. 24.—Telegraphic information has reached here stating that Richmond papers up to yesterday have been received from Gen. Meade's front, wherein are many interesting telegrams from Bragg's army. They say that in the engagement of Saturday and Sunday last they lost Maj. Gen. Hood, of Texas, whose leg was shot off, and Brig. Gens. Wm. Preston Smith, of Tennessee; Woolford, of Georgia; Waltham, of Mississippi, and Deshler, killed; Maj. Gens. Wm. Preston, of Kentucky; Cleburne, of Ark. and Gregg; Brig. Gens. Benning (in the breast,) David Adams, Brown and Jno. Helm were wounded. If Ben H. Helm, who is a brother-in-law of Mrs. President Lincoln, is a Major General, he may be the one announced as killed; if not, the reference must be to Brig. Gen. Jno. Helm.

The Richmond Enquirer of the 23d says: "The battle commenced eight miles from Ringgold, and on the 20th Rosecrans' army was driven two miles by a combined charge of the corps of Gens. D. H. Hill and Polk; the Union artillery fire being the heaviest that has taken place in the war." Also, that "on Saturday, Hood's Division of Longstreet's corps made an attack and was repulsed." A dispatch reports that on Sunday the Union forces fell back 8 miles, and says that the rebel loss was 5,000 killed and wounded in the two days fight. The proportion of officers was very heavy.—It claims that the rebels took 2000 prisoners and 7 pieces of artillery on Saturday and that Rosa, was burning his stores.

The Salt well at Lansing has now reached a depth of 1000 feet, and is to be prosecuted to completion, it being estimated that 300 feet more will reach the lower salt rock. There is at present an immense flow of fresh water. The company suspended work for one week, recently, until a new assessment could be voted for raising funds.

The proposed railroad from Hastings to the Michigan Central has at least one energetic supporter. Henry Willis offers to guarantee that it shall be built by the first of December, 1864, provided the citizens to be benefited by it will subscribe promptly for $60,000 of the stock, and procure the right of way.

The Jackson Citizen says that about fifty dwelling-houses and several new stores are now in progress in that city.—W. M. Bennett is erecting the finest looking and most costly residence in that flourishing place.

There are 200 naughty boys in the State Reform School, at Lansing.

The Soldiers' Aid Society at Marshall will furnish 10,000 dinners at the County Fair, for the benefit of sick and wounded soldiers. The Fair takes place Sept. 30th, and Oct. 1st and 2d. Every dollar of receipts will be applied to the above priseworthy object.

At the recent term of the Circuit Court in Jackson county, the U. S. Internal Revenue law was very ably discussed—Judge Lawrence declaring it to be constitutional, while many Justices of the Peace in the county had decided in opposition thereto, as evidenced by the fact that they did not stamp their official papers in strict accordance with the law. Any affidavit, certificate or bond, not properly stamped according to the revenue law, was regarded by his Honor as invalid, and ruled out, and this caused the attorneys considerable anxiety.

The dwelling house of N. E. Latham, at Jonesville, was burned to the ground on the night of the 17th inst. The flames probably caught from a stovepipe in the attic. The house was a large-sized two story wooden one. Very little furniture was srved. The loss is $2600; insurance $1000.

Charles Devoe, of Parma township, Jackson county, has had over $300 worth of sheep killed by lightning this season, including his most costly wool bucks.

In Grand Rapids township, on Wednesday morning, an infant child of Ralph Clusterhouse, fell into a large jar of sour milk, during the temporary absence of its parents, and was drowned. The infant—16 months of age—had been left in charge of two young children. When found it had fallen, head downward, into the jar, and life was wholly extinct.

Mrs. E. E. Beebe, of Lansing, accidentally set her clothes on fire while warming her feet, on the 18th inst., and was unable to quench the flames until she ran out of doors and plunged into a barrel of water. She is in a very critical condition.

Snow fell to the depth of three inches in Juniata township, Tuscola county, on the 19th inst. Frosts have occurred throughout the State, during the week, which will give vegetation its quietus for the season. At Hastings, on Tuesday morning, the ground was frozen in places so hard that flakes six or eight inches square might be taken up, on plowed fields.

As a Tennessee lady was entering Memphis with a couple of bales of cotton, she was stopped by three guerrillas, who benevolently offered to relieve her of her burden by burning it. She demurred and produced a revolver, intimating that if the guerrillas did not go off the revolver would. There was no occasion for shooting.

The new dome of the Capitol at Washington, the architect says, will be completed before the session of Congress.—Unexpected delays have heretofore occurred on account of reasons connected with working at a height of 300 feet; but things are now so far advanced as to warrant positive assertions in the premises.

Since the war began the great demand for blue army cloth, wherewith to clothe our soldiers, has been such as to raise the price of indigo from $1 50 to $2 25 per pound, and the article is growing scarce. Indigo—the real Bengal article—is the only coloring substance yet known to manufacturers which gives a permanent blue. If some scientific genius will discover a substitute for indigo, equally good, but cheaper, he will be on the quick road to fortune.

A woman residing in Peoria, Ill., by the name of Crowley, exceeds anything on record for brutality. On Sunday last she beat her own child on the head so seriously as to cause almost instant death. A few days previously she had broken an arm of another child with a dray pin.—At another time she caught one of her children by the nose and twisted it until she fractured the bone—while throwing them over fences, or running after them with a pitchfork or an axe, was a daily amusement.

Twenty woman have been arrested for disloyalty at Westminster, Va., but they thought the county jail "horrid" in comparison with taking the oath of allegiance, and, having taken the oath and governed themselves accordingly, were set at liberty.

ENQUIRE AT THE HERALD OFFICE.

This is the last day of our County Fair. We will give particulars next week.

We understand that a new Bakery has been started in the room one door east of Hood & Co's Store.

The Social of the Methodist Church of this village, will be held at the house of Mr. Richard Ford, on Friday evening, October 7th. Let there be a general attendance.

"Ketch" complained of a bad smell about the Post-office, and asked Charlie what it could be. Charlie didn't know, but suggested that it might be caused by the "dead letters."

A paragraph has been going the rounds, of an old lady who has a moustache on her lip. It is not uncommon for young ladies in this vicinity to have moustaches on their lips.

A. B. Ward has and is receiving daily addition to his already large stock of Goods. He keeps a good assortment and sells cheap. He will give the particulars in a short time in an advertisement

A. Hood & Co, are now receiving a large stock of Ready Made Clothing, Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps, and Dry Goods — Give them a call, and you will not leave the store without buying something.

Mrs. Bissell, Photographic Artist has removed her rooms to her new residence, opposite the new Methodist Church. She will be happy to wait upon all whom may favor her with a call at her new quarters.

Joseph Herbison, of this town, bro't into our office, one day last week, a stalk of sugar cane which measured 14 feet. The beauty of the thing is he has got half an acre that will average that height.

P. Goetchius has started a tailor shop over Bidwell's Shoe Store, where he will be happy to do work for all who may favor him with their patronage. He is a good workman and we bespeak for him plenty of work.

Any of our subscribers that have more wood than money, will do us a favor by bringing in some. And those of our neighbors who have more wood than newspapers, can make a fair exchange at this office.

L. Drew, has just returned from the eastern cities, where he has purchased a large stock of Hardware. When his goods get here go in and see how very cheap he sell. His advertisement will appear next week.

B. J. Bidwell, the prince of merchants, has returned from the eastern cities and soon he will be in receipt of an enormous stock of New Goods. He believes in quick sales and small profits. His advertisement will appear soon.

The man who can stand the grabbing of our 'loungers' when he brings a bushel or two of peaches into market, and preserve his equanimity, is entitled to a place by the side of the man who put the stove pipe together without using profane language.

Godey's Lady's Book for September has been received, and is as beautiful as ever. Three dollars is well invested in the purchase of this model Lady's Magazine.—L. A. Godey, Philadelphia, Pa. G. T. Ketcham, has them at his News Room.

Van Tine & Smith are daily receiving additions to their splendid assortment of Furniture, and in a short time they will have their large fall stock. They sell cheaper than the cheapest, and their motto is never to be undersold. Call and get your setting out.

Read G. T. Ketcham's new advertisement, and when you want School Books, Sheet Music, Stationery, Photograph Albums, or anything belonging to his branch of business, give him a call. Do not go to a Dry Good Store for Stationery, a Jewelry Store for Hardware, nor to a Blacksmith's Shop to get Printing done.

Mr. M. L. Sykes, the Vice President and acting Superintendent of the M. S. & N. I. R. R., in the place of Hon. J. D. Campbell, deceased, is a gentleman very highly esteemed by all who know him. Mr. Campbell, was an excellent manager, and we believe the company have in the person of Mr. Sykes, equally as good a one.

There has been such a rush at R. C. Moore's store, since the arrival of his new goods, that he is obliged to go to the city to make another purchase. He has a large stock of Black Silks and other dress goods now on hand. There is no such thing as buying goods cheaper than he sells them If you don't believe us just call in and ask the prices.

J. Ameigh, a shoemaker of our village, was the dupe of pick pockets, while at Jackson last week. He had been saving his money to buy leather with and was on his way to make the purchase when he was relieved of $117. It was a hard blow for him as it was all he had. We understand a subscription paper is in circulation for his benefit and each and every one should give a little to help him again to carry on his business.

A Railroad Project.

A correspondent of the State News suggests the importance to our citizens, of a railroad from Fentonville to Adrian via Ann Arbor, thus connecting southern Michigan by the shortest and most direct route with the Saginaw Valley, bringing its lumber and salt to our doors, and enabling us to send up our produce in exchange

The writer says that Fentonville is on an air line between Flint and Ann Arbor, and the proposed road from Fentonville to a connection with the Southern branch at Tecumseh will be about 56 miles long. He takes it for granted that a road will be built from Fentonville south, and that if our citizens do not move in the matter, and that soon, it will go by Jackson, Dexter, or some more enterprising town than our own. In confirmation of this we may say that the citizens of Howell are already moving with considerable spirit for a road from Fentonville via Howell to Jackson, and that the free right of way is generally pledged through Livingston Co. The distance from Fentonville to Jackson is a little some four or five miles—less than from Fentonville to Tecumseh, but Jackson is over thirty miles from Tecumseh, thus leaving a large margin in favor of a southern connection by the way of Ann Arbor.

Capital is now seeking investment in railroads, various routes are being talked up in our State, and if Ann Arbor is ever to have a North and South road now is the time to strike. Let a road be built from Fentonville to Jackson and we need ever look for direct railroad communication with the Saginaw Valley or with the Southern Railroad, Will our capatalists both think and start?—Ann Arbor Argus.

Accidentally Killed.

The Hudson Gazette, of Sept 10, gives an account of the instant killing of a young woman named Mary Jane Wires which took place at Posy Lake three miles from that village on the 16th inst., the result of carelessly leaving loaded guns in the house. Two guns were left standing in a room at the house of Mr Augustus Harris, one of the guns being loaded, heavily charged with shot for killing turkeys. Miss Wires was alone in the room sweeping, and it is supposed she raised both guns in one hand, for the purpose of sweeping where they stood, when the guard of one caught upon the hammer of the other, causing it to discharge as she leaned over the muzzle. The whole charge passed into her neck and out at the lower back part of her head, striking the ceiling above. When found, both guns were lying near her and the broom across her.—An inquest was had before Justice Pierson, and the jury returned a verdict that deceased came to her death by the accidental discharge of a gun in her own hands. The deceased was an amiable and industrious girl.

DIED.

In Dundee, Sept. 8th, of Dysentary, Mr John Fuller, aged 62 years.

In Macon, Sept 6th, Willie, son of J. V. and Louisa Hoagland, aged 1 year and 8 days

Gone from this vale of tears,
Gone from the earth away,
From future weary years
Passed to eternal day.

Gone from the ceaseless din,
Of earthly care and strife,
Quickly too enter in
To everalsting life.

Gone, too, in life's spring time,
From earthly home and love,
From sorroms ceaseless chime.
To the sweet rest above.

And to the parent's hearts,
With bitter anguish riven,
This hope what peace imparts,
We'll meet the loved in heaven.

En Route for California.

See Jan 28-1867

Last Monday Elijah Anderson and family left this village for California via Panama, with the intention of making that their future home, Mr. Anderson was a pioneer in the settlement of this village, it having been his home for thirty years. In their departure we have lost one of our most worthy citizens and society has sustained a loss that will not be easily repaired. Especially will Clarence and Olivia be missed among the musical fraternity, they having been members of our excellent string band since its first organization. That they may have a pleasant journey and realize their best hopes in finding a PLEASANT HOME in the Pacific State is the sincere wish of this community.

A Frightened Family.

A gentleman who does not live more than a thousand miles from town was the innocent cause of a terrible scare in his family a few days ago. He went home and entered as usual without knocking, and took a seat, when he observed that his better half appeared alarmed and the children, taking the cue from their mother, scampered out of the way and enseconed themselves behind the chairs and stove. The cause flashed upon all at once, and an explanation ensued, and his has been a "happy family" ever since.—The man had been to George Heesen's Clothing store, and purchased a new suit of clothes, which so improved his appearance that the "dear ones" didn't know him.

The Bugle Call.

The Bugle Call, a collection of about fifty beautiful and popular National Airs, edited by G. F. Root, and published by Root & Cady, 95 Clark street, Chicago. Price $3 per dozen

This book is designed for use in all gatherings of loyal people, whether around the camp fire or the hearth stone, wherever the fire of patriotism burns, there may its tones, like the bugle call, arouse every true heart to a greater love for the Union and a sterner determination to protect it to the last.—Nearly all of the pieces are of a stirring, cheerful character, some humorous, but all having a purpose which we believe will not be misunderstood.

The Michigan Farmer.

We have received the September number of this valuable monthly. Its list of contents presents an attracting variety of useful and agreeable matter suitable for evening family reading as the nights are becoming longer and cooler. The price of the Farmer is so low and the benefits to be derived from it, to the farming interests in our State so considerable, it should be liberally patronized.—Bond & Snyder Publishers, Detroit.

The Atlantic Monthly for October, with its usually varied table of contents is received. Among the contributors to the present numbers are Chas. Sumner, John G. Whittier, R. W. Emerson, J. P. Quincy and G. B Prescott. Although strictly a partisan publication it deservedly ranks high in the literary world and the articles that are entirely free from the taint of partisanship alone, are worth the price of the magazine For sale by G, T. Ketcham

Mr. David Van Tine, one of our earliest citizens, had two of the fore fingers on his right hand so badly smashed on Monday afternoon last, as to cause them to be amputated It seems he was tending a planing machine, when instead of laying his hand upon a sett screw, as he thought he was doing, he placed it on a cog wheel, which soon rolled his hand under.

We have received from G. T. Ketcham a copy of "Beadle's Dime Tales, Traditions and Romance of Border and Revolutionary Times." They will place before the public, in unusually attractive form, those stirring stories of Border and Indian Life, of the American Revolution, of the Settlements, of Hunters' Experiences, and of Heroic Deeds, which give to American history all the elements of a wild romance. G. T. K. has them for sale.

Essay on War Measures and Men.

BY A. BERDAN.

CONCLUDED FROM NO. 638.

TO DAVID BERDAN SIR:

Oh—take me away, for a million years
Place me beyond, this vale of tears,
Place me in the beggarly cot.
Where untamed passions, without a bribe
And a common right, is man's lowest pride.
. . . . . .
Oh, I wait for the time to break the spell
To take them, from their growling cell,
And place them in a brighter sphere
Where whitlings, ne'er can drum my ear.
There s a moral teacher, an endless soul
That pervades the universal whole,
And every being that breathes and thinks,
Helps make that great, soul chain, of links;
Some hang lower, some hang higher,
All hang in, as they aspire,
Every being seeks his station,
According to his organization;
Sometimes, man, reaches to high a sphere
Higher than his condition will bear,
Then he must pass to a lower cell
Where he in life. can only dwell;
A fop can little wisdom share,
'Tis death for him to dwell up there,
So 'tis with the man of greater sense,
He feels agrieved, at much nonsense,
He has a greater march of mind
And for higher spheres, he's inclined,
Let him live, or let him die,
His truthful thoughts will ever fly,
Marching on in that endless soul,
That prevades the universal whole.
But sin, will often sever the chain
That wisdom lives to heal again,
So the chain, must oft be parted,
'Til humanity lives to be true hearted;
But there's the principle of common right,
Ever exposed, to human sight,
But all along that rightful shore,
Is compound ignorance by the score,
Farewell, humanity, I leave thee,
To form a higher fraternity,
Over the right, or under the wrong,
The world will ever be wagging along,
And whenever the right comes upermost,
Then, ever will justice, rule the host,
'Til I meet you beyond the vale of tears
Farewell, farewell for a million years.

A Down East Clam Bake.

A large party of eastern men came on a pleasure excursion at the East. They went through Canada. At Portland, Me. they were treated to a clam bake, which is thus described by a correspondent of the Chicago Journal:

Where to begin or end in describing this institution of New England, one hardly knows. We were all amazed, delighted. It was so unique, bizarre, strange wonderful, and so little understood by us. At ten o'clock, we went (1200 strong) on board the Grand Trunk steamer Forest City, down the bay, it being too foggy to go out to sea, as nothing could be seen there. We cruised among the islands, and wound around them, watching the mackerel vessels. All hands enjoying themselves to the fullest extent with dancing, playing euchre, chatting with the many pretty girls and married ladies until two o'clock, when we steamed up to a splendidly wooded island, whose sloping side was dotted over with white tents, under which could be seen dinner tables of extraordinary length and breadth. About 1,000 additional passengers had arrived from the city in small boats and a large barge, and now the clam bake begins.

Upon the ground, in a space eight feet in width by forty-five feet in length, were placed smooth, round stones, about the size of a person's head, and not very near together. Upon these, early in the morning, had been kindled a fire of three cords of wood. This had been burnt down to a coal, and the stones were hissing hot. Over these stones were placed a six inch layer of rock weed, just from the water and dripping wet. Then on the top of this was placed sixty bushels of soft shelled clams, ten bushels of oysters, one hundred lobsters, sixty dozen of eggs, one hundred pounds codfish, three barrel of green corn. A sail was then laid over the whole, and about six inches of rockweed was placed on top of it. Then the steam began to come through in a dense, continuous volume. After three quarters of an hour the sail was rolled back sidewise, and there was the whole "Bake" cooked admirably, and as clean as could be. And now the fun commenced, each one running with a plate to dip into the window of clams, piping hot, the steam coming up in great volumes and hiding those on the opposite side of the pile from view. Some darted into the hot fog and came out with a plate of clams, others with a single oyster, another with corn, another with potatoes and a lobster.

A friend of ours from the west came rushing past us (fearfully demoralized by the hot steam) holding in his hands the legs of an enormous lobster—some luckier individual getting the balance of the fish and claws. We inquired what he had got. 'I've got them,' he exclaimed holding up the legs of the lobster, 'but what in t'under they are, I don't know.' He had never seen a lobster before.—Bushel baskets were filled with clams, others with the various other edibles, fresh from the kiln, and conveyed to the tables by the attendants, the grass being dotted over with small parties enjoying themselves to the fullest extent. Four bushels of charming fish chawder had been prepared in a large kettle, and this was relished by all. Large wash tubs full of claret punch, well iced, stood around in profusion, while the commissary tent was piled to the ceiling on every side with boxes of claret, Spanish olives, sardines, cigars, and everything calculated to make one happy and contented. Taken altogether, it was a festive scene that none of us will ever forget, carrying with it so many pleasant memories.

Chances for a Laugh.

☞ Aunt Betsey has said many good things: Among the rest, that a newspaper is like a wife, because every man should have one of his own.

☞ We wont indulge in such horrid anticipations, as the henpecked husband said, when the parson told him he would be joined to his wife in another world, never to separate.

☞ Boy, what's become of the hole I saw in your pants the other day?

(Young America carefully examining his unmentionables,) It's worn out, sir.

☞ Cotton is going to be drafted, I see, remarked Valentine, languidly, as he dallied with the English Items.

Is it so?

Yes, replied Valantine, they are now trying to find a substitute for it in England.

☞ An orator, perspiring freely, in a husky voice said: In short, ladies and gentlemen, I can only say that I wish I had a window in my bosom that you might see the emotions of my heart.

The newspapers printed the speech, leaving the 'n' out of window.

☞ It seems that a lawyer is something of a carpenter. He can file a bill, split a hair, chop logic, dovetail an argument, make an entry, get up a case, frame an indictment, impannel a jury, put them in a box, nail a witness, hammer a judge, bore a court, shave a note, grind an axe, chisel a client, and other like things.

☞ Pomp, what am de difference between a citizen what am loyal and one what am not?

Pompey—Dere am no difference, Mr. Johnson, accordin' to my wismal 'ceptibilities.

Johnson—How so, Pompey?

Pompey—'Kase, Mr. Johnson you see dey am bofe in favor of dis-union.

☞ At one of the hotels in Washington several Members of Congress made themselves conspicuous by calling to one another across the table. Will the gentleman from Maine pass me the bread?—Will the gentleman from——pass me the salt, etc., etc. There was a gentleman present who was exceedingly annoyed by their conversation; and turning to the waiter at the back of his chair, he politely requested, Will the gentleman from Africa pass me the butter?

☞ A friend of ours a few days since met a vocalist of some note in Broadway, and after exchanging the usual salutations, he said:

So you are about leaving the city, eh?

Why, yes, replied the other, I leave for Baltimore to-morrow.

Ah, replied our friend, well, you have 'bawled' to a great many people in New York, and now you are are going to bawl to more!'

☞ A judge was trying a prisoner accused of felony. While delivering his charge, and minutely recapitulating and commenting on the evidence, the jury and the counsel fell fast asleep! The sheriffs who had charge of the prisoner, being soon after seen to nod, a spectator, who happened to be awake, and apprehending the prisoner might escape, suddenly exclaimed:

Wake the sheriffs!

Never mind, said the judge (who was a wag in his way,) the sheriffs may have their nap out, for the prisoner is fast asleep also!

ORANGE JUDD of the "American Agriculturalist," says of the

UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER

"A child can readily wring out a tubfull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large per centage on its cost. We think the machine much more than PAYS FOR ITSELF EVERY YEAR in the saving of garments. There are several kinds, nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs, otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly four years constant use."

Every Wringer with Cog Wheels is Warranted in every particular.

NO WRINGER CAN BE DURABLE WITHOUT COG-WHEELS.

A good CANVASSER wanted in every town.

☞ On receipt of the price from the places where no one is selling, we will send the Wringer free of expense.

THE GREAT

AMERICAN TEA COMPANY,

51 Vesey Street New York;

Since its organization, has created a new era in the history of

Wholesaling Tea in this Co.

They have introduced their selections of Teas and are selling them not over

TWO CENTS (03 Cents) per pound above COST,

Never deviating from the ONE Price asked.

Another peculiarity of the Company is that their Tea Taster not only devotes his time to the selection of their TEAS as to quality, value, and particular styles for particular localities of country, but he helps the TEA buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this, but points out to him the best bargains.

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all others.

If he is no judge of TEA, or the Market, of his time is valuable, he has all the benefits of a well organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.

This enables all tea buyers—no matter if they are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York merchants.

Parties can order Teas and will be served by us as well as though they came themselves, being sure to get original packages, true weights and tares; and the tea warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Company's Teas, which will be sent to all who order it; comprising

Hyson, Young Hyson; Imperial, Gunpowder, Twankay and Skin.

Oolong, Souchong, Orange & Hyson Pekoe,

JAPAN TEA OF EVERY DISCRIPTION, colored and uncolored.

This list has each kind of Tea divided into FOUR classes, namely: Cargo, high Cargo, Fine, Finest, that every one may understand from description and the prices annexed that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea Trade.

We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over two cents (02 Cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who have heretofore been paying Enormous Profits.

THE WILCOX & GIBBS' Sewing Machine is the best machine without regard to price, for

Family Sewing,

Braiding,

Hemming,

Felling,

Tucking,

Cording;

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seam which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut in intervals, and also under all circumstances to survive the washtub."

A patented device of great utility to learners prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially no other will bear any comparison with it.—Phila. Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder.—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines.—Pennsylvanian.

"The machine, in the opinion of the committee, more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs' as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report.

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibbs' Sewing Machine We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not as was supposed necessary to a good machine.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 27 1860.

"After much wear and many washings the stitching is found to retain all the roundness evenness and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others."—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experience in our own family."—Boston Traveller

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette

"We esteem it the best machine for family use The stitch is unexceptionable."—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

Fluid Extract Buchu

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the

BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS,

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATER or CALCEROUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflamation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, or CHILDREN.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEEKNESS

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power.
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot Hands,	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin,	Pallid Countenance,

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITZ, EPILEPTIC FITS,

In one of which the patient may expire Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases."

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION,

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

Requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Female,

OLD OR YOUNG, SINGLE, IMARRIED, OR CONTEMPLATING MARRIAGE,

In many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the Customary Evacuations Ulcerated or Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the SUMTER.

BY GEO. LANSING TAYLOR.

Sumter silenced! How I wonder
If 'tis true! and no sad blunder!
Silenced, shattered, crushed! blunder!
Sumter captured! Let it thunder
O'er the land and o'er the ocean!
Let it sweep in grand commotion
Up the rivers to their fountains,
O'er the valleys, prairies, mountains,
O'er the plains and deserts glowing,
O'er sierras ever snowing,
Down where tropic gales are blowing,
Down bright streams to sunset flowing,
Till from ocean unto ocean
Sweeps the rapturous commotion—
Sweeps the mighty acclamation
Of a great triumphant nation,
And with twenty million voices
Half a continent rejoices
O'er the sure and glorious token
That Rebellion's power is broken!

Sumter fallen! God is holy!
God, who hears the poor and lowly—
Hears and answers, soon or slowly—
From His heavenly habitation
Saw our sin and tribulation,
Heard our contrite supplication;
Sent us succor and salvation!
Blessed be God's name forever!
Let the golden gateways sever!
Let the swelling bursting paean
Fill the opal empyrean!
Let the adamantine arches
Tremble as the anthem marches
Up the everlasting river,
Up to God, the glorious giver,
God, almighty to deliver!
Let the harp-strings leap and quiver,
Let the crystal columns shiver,
Let all earth, all heaven endeavor,
Blessed be God's name forever!

Blessed be God's name forever,
Never, never, never, never,
Shall another slave dominion
Stretch o'er earth its midnight pinion.
Hear, O Earth, through all this battle,
Hear thy broken letters rattle,
Shout, O Earth, sing, child and mother,
Wife and husband, lover, brother,
Through this land and every other,
Shout and sing, through the nations,
Through all human habitations,
For, though ours the tears and slaughter,
Our the brave blood poured like water;
Ours the shame, the sin, the sorrow;
Yours shall be the golden morrow,
Yours with us, though round us closing
Banded tyrants stand opposing;
God's great hand, o'er all disposing,
Still all good shall save and cherish,
Till all evil fail and perish

The Transplanted Lily.

They were neat little pallets. One could find no fault with their snowy sheets and Mosaic quilts of patchwork.—In each was a little homeless, houseless orphan taken in for shelter. Miss Betsy had been the rounds and seen each little head duly deposited on its pillow. A very nice particular proper person was Miss Betsey! The Board of Directors said so and Miss Betsey thought so herself. Her hair was as smooth as her tongue and her kerchief starched as stiff as her manners. Not one of those little vagrant hands would have thought of touching that immaculate calico dress.—She had heard them all say their prayers; listened at the door to see if any dared break the rule that forbade their speaking and went down to a comfortable dish of tea and hot buttered muffins, satisfied that she had ministered to every want of their childish natures, temporal and spiritual. Blind Miss Betsey! there are depths even in a child's soul your's cannot sound!

A little head is cautiously raised from its pillow. The eyes that look slowly around upon those sleeping forms are large dark and sorrowful. Hot tears fall thick and fast upon the clasped hands.—'Mother! mother!' is wrung from a little heart too young to bear its weight of grief unshared; and the little head falls back again in helpless hopeless misery, on the pillow. Lily closes her eyes but she is not asleep. No, not! she sees a form languid and emaciated, stretched upon a dying bed. She feels the soft touch of a dear hand on her forehead; large mournful eyes follow her sleeping or waking. A sweet low voice lingers ever in her ear: 'God protect my orphan child!'

Miss Betsey has told Lily that He has done it; that she ought to be very thankful she is in such a nice institution, and that if she is good she shall live out to service some day with a good lady. And Lily pushes back the thick hair with her delicate hand and wonders what going out to service means; and Miss Betsey takes the long curls she has clipped from her head and throws them out of the window and asks her if she don't feel grateful she has such a kind friend as herself? And Lily tries to swallow a great lump in her throat that seems like to choke her and says, 'Yes ma'am,' while she forces back to their source the large tears that are gathering under her eyelids. Then she looks at the unbending prim figure of Miss Betsey, and wonders if she was ever a little girl? and did her mother ever die and leave her all alone? And she feels as if she must throw herself on somebody's neck and ask them to love her. And then she looks again at Miss Betsey, but the quick instinct of childhood says, 'No, no, not there! And then she wonders what makes all the children in the house seem like grown people, and why they tremble if they tumble down or drop a book by accident; and why they eat less and less every day of their little soup dinners; and what makes her head so dizzy when she tries to knit. And then she wonders if heaven is a great way off, and how long it will be before she gets there. And then her over-charged heart can restrain itself no longer amid those voiceless silent sleepers, but finds vent in a long and bitter cry of anguish.

Miss Betsey comes up and tells her she is very 'naughty to break the rules;' and Lily says amid her sobs, that she 'wants to go to heaven with mamma!' Miss Betsey asks if 'mamma belonged to the church,' and Lily 'thinks not;' and Miss Betsey shakes her head doubtfully—tells her she hopes she will be better than her mother. Advises her to say her prayers, and goes down again to her buttered muffins.

* * * 'I am tired of life, Mary,' said the elegant widow Gray. 'I'm sick of its hollowness and insincerity. I owe all my friends save yourself to the accidents of wealth and position. If Heaven had only blessed me with children!—Could I find one to my mind, I'd adopt it to-morrow; but it must be a poetical child, Mary; a little fragile spirited delicate blossom. Wouldn't it be a joy to watch such a mind unfold itself! to listen to all its naive original sayings, and teach it to love me as only such a child can love! Where's my bonnet? I'm off to the Asylum! That imaginary child of mine must have its counterpart somewhere.'

'This is our school-room, Mrs. Gray,' said Miss Betsey. 'The children are all very comfortable and very happy, as you see. It would be hard for one of them to leave me I suppose; but I shall say it's all for the best if you find one to your mind.'

Mrs. Gray glanced up and down the long rows of benches, and her artistic eye failed to be favorably impressed with the little cropped heads and bolster-like forms in factory gingham; and she was just about retiring disappointed, when her eye caught sight of Lily. A quick bright flush came to her cheek, and her eye kindled, as she stood before her.

The vigil of the night previous had exhausted the little creature. Her knitting lay upon the floor, her small hands had fallen listlessly on her lap, her head resting lovingly on the shoulder of her next neighbor. Her long lashes were damp with tears that still trembled on her cheek; her silken hair spite of Miss Betsey, had formed itself in little rings about her temples; and the careless grace of her attitude notwithstanding her unbecoming dress, was a study for a painter.

'Will you go with this lady?' said the prim Miss Betsey, as the startled child unclosed her eyes at the touch of those skeleton fingers. Lily brushes her hand across her eyes, as if bewildered with the sweet face before her and not quite sure that she is not dreaming 'My mother smiled at me so,' she said musingly, as she slid her little hand into Mrs. Gray's.

* * At the side of a richly canopied bed kneels our little Lily. 'Please God bless my new mamma and let her go to heaven with me.' Mrs. Gray stands concealed behind the curtain; her lip quivers, her eyes fill; she has never prayed that prayer for herself! She struggles with her pride, then gliding forward she kneels by the side of the little petitioner and says, 'Let us pray together, Lily.'

And days and months and years glide by, and Lily grows more beautiful every day in the sunshine of love, unspoiled by prosperity. The gay world has lost its power to charm the mother—her ear is deaf to the voice of adulation for she has taken an angel to her bosom, and in that pure presence she looks shuddering back upon long wasted years of frivolity, and blesses God that a little child has led her.'

But Lily's mission now is over. The bright hectic glows with fearful brilliancy on that marble cheek. The eyes are bright with a fire that is fast consuming her. Mother and child! knit together by a spiritual birth, how shall they part now? 'Earth is still fair—Heaven is fairer!' whispers Lily.

"Arms empty of her child she lifts,
With spirit unbereaven,—
God will not take back all his gifts,
My Lily's mine in heaven

Still mine—maternal rights serene,
Not given to another,
The crystal bars shine faint between
The souls of child and mother.

Well done of God to halve the lot,
And give her all the sweetness!
To me the empty room and cot;
To her the heaven's completeness.

To me, this grave—to her the rows
The mystic palmtrees spring in;
To me, the silence in the house;
To her, the choral singing!

For her, to gladden in God's view;
For me, to hope and bear on;
Grow, Lily, in thy garden new,
Beside the Rose of Sharon."

FANNY FERN.

Valuable Pocket Piece.

Among the victims of the Henry Clay disaster, was Stephen Allen Esq., an aged man of the purest character, formerly a Mayor of New York, beloved and esteemed by all who knew him. In his pocket book was found a printed slip, apparently cut from a newspaper, of which the following is a copy:

Keep good company or none at all.—Never be idle. If your hands cannot be usefully employed, attend to the cultivation of your mind. Always speak the truth. Make few promises. Live up to your engagements. Keep your own secrets, if you have any. When you speak to a person look him in the face. Good company and good conversation are the sinews of virtue. Good character is above all things else. Your character cannot be essentially injured except by your own acts. If any one speaks evil of you, let your life be so that none will believe him. Drink no kind of intoxicating liquors.—Live within your income. When you retire to bed think over what you have been doing during the day. Make no haste to get rich if you would prosper. Small and steady gains give competency with tranquility of mind. Never play at any game of chance. Avoid temptation for fear you may not withstand it. Earn money before you spend it. Never run into debt unless you see a way to get out again. Never borrow if you can possibly avoid it. Do not marry until you are able to support a wife. Never speak evil of any one. Be just before you are generous. Keep yourself innocent if you would be happy. Save when you are young that you may spend when you are old. Read the above maxims at least once a week.

What thou doest, do quickly.

Quick, young man! life is short. A great work is before you, and you have no time to lose. If you would succeed in business, win your way to honor, and save your soul, you must work quickly.—The sluggard dies. The wheels of time roll over him and crush him while he sleeps. Aim high and work hard. Life is worth the living death is worth the dying, because worth the gaining.

Quick, ye men of might in the road of life! your life is more than half gone already. You are going down the hill, and the shadows begin to fall around you. If ye have aught to do do it quickly The morning has fled, midday has passed away and the night cometh.

Quick, ye aged men, quick! Once you thought three score years and ten to be endless time, and that they could never pass away. They have come and they have gone and what have they left? The days of darkness are here. Have you left any work undone? Have you come to infirmities with no preparation for death? Ah! quick, ye aged fathers and grey bearded sires. Already are the messengers of death beginning to tender their services to bring you to the sepulchre of your fathers. With the feeble remnants of existence struggle to heaven. Work, pray, seek while life lingers, mercy waits and God is gracious.

☞ While Buchanan was President, the Pottadam Bank came into existence, and out of compliment to him the notes contained his portrait. But of late the bank has received so many mutilated notes, with the words "traitor," "Judas Iscariot," &c., inscribed under the portrait, that it has resolved to call in the old ones bearing his portrait and issue new ones. It must be done to abate a nuisance

A Bird's Egg.

I think that, if required, on pain of death to name instantly the most perfect thing in the universe, I should risk my fate on a bird's egg. There is first, its exquisite fragility of material, strong only by the mathematical precision of that form so daintily moulded. There is its absolute purity from external stain, since that thin barrier remains impassable till the whole is in ruins—a purity recognized in the house-hold proverb of "an apple, an egg, and a nut." Then, its range of tints, so varied so subdued and so beautiful—whether of the pure white, like the martin's or pure green, like the robin's, or dotted and mottled into the loveliest of browns, like the red thrush's, or acqua marine, with stains of moss agate, like the chirping sparrow's, or blotched with long weird ink-marks on a pale ground, like the oriole's, as if it bore inscribed some magic clew to the bird's darting flight and pensile nest. Above all, the associations and predictions of this little wonder—that one may bear home between his finer all that winged splendor, all that celestial melody, coiled in mystery within these tiny walls! Even the chrysalis is less amazing, for its form always preserves some trace, however fantastic, of the perfect insect, and it is but moulting a skin; but this egg appears to the eye like a separate unit from some other kingdom of Nature, claiming more kindred with the very stones than with feathery existence, and it is as if a pearl opened and an angel sang.

A Heroine.

Among the insurgents belonging to Wysocki's corps I found a young lady so timid, and so afraid of being looked on as a wonder, that she keeps herself in almost perpetual seclusion, but so brave that, on the day of battle, she insisted on being placed in the first line, and greatly distinguished herself in the action. Her relations had done their utmost to persuade and even force her to remain at home, but she threatened to commit suicide if she were detained, and they feared that she might keep her word. She had changed her name from "Marya" to "Maryan" (the christian name of Langiewicz,) and was known in her company as "Panna Maryan," or, as Englishmen, if they had met her in the woods, would call her, "Maid Marian" Maid Marian has now returned to her family; and I am sorry to add, that this prodigal daughter—prodigal, at least to acts of daring, is badly wounded.—Times Correspondent.

A Sharp Trade.

A Michigan lawyer, who writes a very bad hand, sends us the following

Several years ago I was practicing law in one of the many beautiful towns in Wisconsin. One very warm day, while seated in my office at at work, I was interrupted by the enterance of a boy, the son of one of clients, who had walked into town, six miles, in a blazing sun, for the purpose of procuring a Bible. He had been told, he said, that there was a place there where they gave them away to people who had no money; he said he had no money, and was very anxious to get one of the good books, and asked me to go with him to the place where they were kept. Anxious to encourage him in his early piety, I left the brief on which I was engaged, and went with him over to the stand of a Presbyterian deacon who had the much coveted books in charge.—I introduced him to the deacon, telling him the circumstances. He praised the boy very highly; was delighted to see a young man so early seeking after the truth, etc., etc.; and presented him with the best bound Bible in his collection. Bubby put it into his pocket, and was starting off, when the dacon says, "Now, my son, that you possess what you so much desired, I suppose that you feel perfectly happy?" "Well I do, old hoss; for between you and I, I know where I can trade it for a plaguy good fiddle!"—Harper.

JON'S PROPHECY OF THE IRON-CLADS.—'His scales are his pride, shut up together as with a close seal—one is so near to another that no air can come between them. When he raiseth himself up the mighty are afraid; by reason of breakings they purify themselves; he esteemeth iron as straw, and brass as rotton wood. The arrow cannot make him flee; strong stones are turned with him into stubble. He maketh the deep to boil like a pot; he maketh the sea like a pot of ointment; he maketh a path to shine after him; he maketh the deep to be hoary."

Newspaper Patronage.

The thing called newspaper patronage is a curious thing. It is composed of as many colors as the rainbow, and as changable as a chameleon.

One man subscribes for a newspaper and pays for it in advance; he goes home and reads it with the proud satisfaction that it is his own. He hands in an advertisement, asks the price and pays for it. This is newspaper patronage.

Another man says please put my name on your list of subscribers; and he goes off. Time passes, your patience is exhausted, and you dun him. He flies in a passion, perhaps pays, perhaps not.

Another man has been a subscriber a long time. He becomes tired of yours and wants a change. Thinks he wants a city paper. Tells the postmaster to discontinue, and one of his papers is returned marked "refused." Paying up for it is among the last of his thoughts, besides he wants his money to send to a city publisher. After a time you look over his account and see a bill of "balance due.' But does he pay it freely and cheerfully? We leave him to answer.

Another man lives near you—never took your paper—it is too small—don't like the editor—don't like politics—yet goes regularly to his neighbor's and reads his by his fire—finds fault with the contents, disputes its position, and quarrels with its type. Occasionally sees an article he likes—pays half a dime, or begs a number. This, too, is newspaper patronage.

Another supports a fine horse, or perhaps a pair of them,—is always seen with whip in hand or spur on foot—single man—no use for him to take a paper—knous enough. Finally he concludes to get married—does so—sends a notice of the fact, a "please send me a dozen copies." This done, does he ever pay for the notice or papers? No! "But surely you don't charge for such things!" This, too, is newspaper patronage.

Another man—bless you it does us good to see such a man—comes and says the year for which I paid is about to expire, and I want to pay you for another. He pays, and retires.

Reader! isn't newspaper patronage a curious thing? And in that great day when honest men get the reward due to their honesty, which, say you, of those enumerated above, will obtain their reward? Now it will be seen that, while certain kinds of patronage are the very life and "existence" of a newspaper, there are certain other kinds that will kill a paper stone dead.

The Beggars of Moscow.

In Moscow there exists about forty thousand beggars by profession—rather a strong proportion in a total of three hundred and eighty thousand inhabitants—who chiefly ply their trade in the shops and galleries of Ghostinoe Dhor, a kind of Oriental Bazaar. On every step you fall in with women carrying their children with them, with burned out people from the neighborhood, and that particular species of the Russian beggar who appeals to your generosity on behalf of recruits and starving families they have left behind them. The most impudent of all are discharged officials and soldiers, who are generally drunkards, in rags and decorated with orders and clasps. Then again you meet old women carrying open coffins with them, and begging alms to defray the cost of burial. Other women, of the same stamp, apply to you in the name of a bride who would like to be married, but wants a dowry. Peasants will stop you to enable them to buy a new horse, the old one having gone to the wall by some accident or other; soldiers in full uniform who have broken a glass in the barracks, clamor for a trifle to replace the departed one. With the secular member of the fraternity is admixed a strong proportion of monks and nuns, walking in the sombre garments of their order, and asking a mite for the erection of a new church, the restoration of a chapel, or such like purpose. All point imperatively to the boxes, plates, coffins, prayer books and altar covers, which they present to you with an entreating look.

☞ An Iowa orator wishing to describe his opponent as a soundless man, said:

I have heard that some persons hold the opinion that just at the precise moment after one human being dies, another is born, and the soul enters and animates the new-born babe. Now, I have made particular and extensive inquiries concerning my opponent thar, and I find that, for some hours before he drew breath, nobody died.

Coming Back Soon.

You are coming back soon! every one says to the eager boy who is going out from the quiet of his native village to make his way in the great, bustling world beyond.

Oh, yes, as soon as I have made my fortune, is the laughing reply, and the good byes are exchanged and the coach rolls off, bearing more hope and happiness on its back seat than will the same occupant it will ever bring back again.

Coming back soon! The little boy knows that he may never come back!—Something may come that will be taller, and more graceful and attractive, and call his parents father and mother—something that will look half sadly and half contemptuously on the old familiar place where his youth was spent, but the boy—happy, eager, hopeful and innocent—has gone forever.

Coming back! Is this young lady, ringletted and flounced and gloved, who plays the piano to a charm and looks askance at kitchen, towel and broom, the sun-browned good natured little Maggie, who wore her curls flying in the summer wind? This young lady's locks are primatumed, scented, carefully done up to the latest fashion. Maggie wore a blue gingham frock, which had always danced before his vision as the most charming thing in existence, but "Miss Marguerite" always dresses her dainty limbs in the most expensive silks, and wears hoops of such circumference that he can only stand and admire at a respectful distance. Sometimes as they sit side by side he remembers the old times and has wishes that they would come back again, but his first glance at the composed face beside him annihilates the idea, and he heaves a kind of rueful sigh and lets it pass away. Bye the bye, "Miss Marguerite, is married to a rich old man, old enough to be her grandfather. He goes to her wedding, and he drinks her health in the best of wine—begins to dream himself of a wealthy wife, and thinks it won't do to be foolish, and that he must have an eye to business when he gives himself away. The fast young man and woman of fashion meet often in their gay city life, but the boy and girl who went hand in hand to school have gone straying away together over the strawberry fields and daisied pastures long ago, and nobody thinks of saying to them you are coming back soon.

Coming back!—Who ever yet came back and found all things unchanged?—Drive the long remembered road and you will miss here a trace, here a patch of daisies and butter cups, and here and there an old gray farm house which you fondly hoped would outlast your day and generation. Enter the town which was once a happy valley to you and what do you see? Only a puny little village you used to love turned into ambitious side walks and paved with the roughest of stones; with old familiar houses and fences remodeled and newly painted till you lose all landmarks; with everything changed, and you it may be most of all! Sit down if you will in your lonely room; call up the forms of those you mostly loved who are now scattered away, and try to people the streets with more beloved faces. Can you succeed? Is it not a poor pale phantom that you strive to press to your aching heart? Was it wise in you after all, this coming back? Oh, the past is beautiful to look at, but when afar off we stretch out our hands to bring it nearer, it vanishes and leaves nothing in our grasp but thin unsubstantial air.

Strange, I sit in my lonely room to day and miss something familiar—something dear, very dear! It will never linger here again, the sunlight falling through the casement will never shine on me any more. One page of life's romance has been read; shut the book and put it away. Much that might have blessed me, much that I might have loved but cannot meet again, and much that has consecrated this little room, has passed away like a dream of beauty, and will beam and brighten here no more; it is not, cannot be "coming back soon."

☞ The criminal lawyers—that is to say, lawyers whose main business it is to defend persons accused of crime—have got up a new disease, called impulsive insanity, whereby to save their client's neck. One man calls another a liar; the latter is seized with a fit of "impulsive insanity," and kills the former. The killer is indicted and tried for murder—Defence—"impulsive insanity." Verdict, not guilty. Prisoner goes free, and goes into man-killing generally, under the shield of "impulsive insanity." Nice business

Proclamation.

By the President of the United States of America.

The year that is drawing towards its close has been filled with the blessings of fruitful fields and healthful skies. To these bounties which are so constatly enjoyed that we are prone to forget the source from which they came, others have been added which are of so extraordinary a nature that they cannot fail to penetrate and soften even the heart which is habitually insensible to the ever watchful Providence of Almighty God. In the midst of a civil war of unequalled magnitude, which has sometimes seemed to invite and provoke the aggressions of foreign States, peace has been preserved with all nations, order has been maintained, the laws have been respected and obeyed, and harmony has prevailed everywhere except in the theatre of military conflict, while that theatre has been greatly contracted by the advancing armies and navies of the Union. The needful diversion of wealth and strength from the fields of peaceful industry to the National defence, have not been arrested the plow the shuttle or the ship. The axe has enlarged the borders of our settlements, and the mines, as well of iron and coal as the precious metals, have yielded even more abundantly than heretofore. Population has steadily increased, notwithstanding the waste that has been made in the camp, the seige, and the battle-field, and the country; rejoicing in the consciousness of augmented strength and vigor, is permitted to expect a continuance of years, with a large increase of freedom. No human counsel hath devised nor hath any mortal hand worked these great things. They are the gracious gifts of the Most High God who, while dealing with us in anger for our sins, hath nevertheless remembered mercy.

It has seemed to me fit and proper that they should be solemnly, reverently and greatfully acknowled as with one heart and voice by the whole American people. I do therefore invite my fellow citizens in every part of the United States, as also those who are at sea and those who are sojourning in foreign lands to set apart and observe the last Thursday of November next as a day of Thanksgiving and Prayer to our benefactor who dwelleth in the Heavens, and I recommend to them that while offering up the ascriptions justly due to him for such singular deliverances and blessings, they do also with humble penitence, for our National perverseness and disobedience, commend to his tender care all those who have become widows, orphans or sufferers in the lamentable civil strife in which we are unavoidably engaged and fervently implore the interposition of the Almighty Hand to heal the wounds of the nation, and to restore us as soon as may be consistent with the Divine purposes, to the full enjoyment of peace, harmony, tranquility and Union.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the City of Washington on this day, the third day of October, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and sixty-three and of the independence of the United States the eighty-eighth.

Signed, A. LINCOLN.

By the President:

WM. H. SEWARD, Secretary of State.

Shelling.

A correspondent writing from Morris Island to the Christian Advocate and journal, says:

At night we can see the path of a shell through all its journey, lighted as it is by the burning fuse. When the range is two miles, the track of a shell from a mortar describes very near half the arc of a circle. On leaving the mortar it gracefully moves on, climbing up and into the heavens till it is nearly or quite a mile above the earth, and then it glides along for a moment, apparently in a horizontal line; but quickly you see that the little firery orb is on the home stretch, describing the other segment of the circle. A shell from a Parrot rifled gun in going two and a half miles deviates from a straight line not quite as much as a shell from a mortar. But in passing over this space considerable time is required. The report travels much faster than the shot. A shell from a mortar will make a distance of two miles in about thirty seconds, and from a Parrott gun in about half that time. The flash of a gun at night, and the white smoke by day, indicate the moment of a discharge, and fifteen or twenty seconds give an abundance of time to find a cover in a splinter proof, behind a trench, or something else. It is wise and soldierly to do so, but many pay no attention to these hissing, streaming, flying—in the day time, if shot from gun—invisible devils, except to crack jokes at their expense, for occasionally one pays his life for his foolhardiness.

☞ A pretty young woman, about 18 years old, has been discovered in soldier clothes in the camp of the 19th Pennsylvania cavalry. She followed her lover, who was in that regiment, and though not regularly enlisted, she passed as his younger brother, and had been in the camp for some time before she was discovered and exposed by a person who was acquainted with her. She says that she left home on account of family difficulties, and that she was in three months' service as a member of a New York regiment. She has properly apparelled and dismissed.

☞ The great sculling match for $1000 a side and the championship of American waters, between Joshua Ward, of Newburg, and James Hammil, of Pittsburg, which took place at Poughkeepsie on Monday, resulted in a complete victory for the latter. The betting on both sides was very brisk, generally in favor of Ward, who is a more powerful man than his antagonist. The distance was five miles; and the time occupied in rowing it was 37 minutes and 18 seconds. The match was attended by not less than 20,000 people. Hammill designs to enter a match against Chambers, of England, for the championship of the world.

☞ Why is a spenthrift's purse like a thunder cloud? Because it is continually light'ning.

The War Spirit.

The history of the world proves that war like an epidemic disease is contagious. One is mental the other physical. The separation of our country from Europe by the ocean has for a time retarded the spread of the war contagion to England and the continent, as remote distance retards the progress of physical epidemics; but of late every foreign steamer brings us unmistakable evidence that a fearful belligerent spirit, in fact the war contagion, has reached the old world and threatens to involve all Europe, and even the still older nations beyond, in a great and general war.

France under her shrewd and ambitious Emperor is aiming to dictate to the world. England is jealous of France and Russia: Austria is jealous of everybody; Prussia is apprehensive and vacillating, and all Germany is restless and ready for any contest that will humble France.

The disposition manifested by France, England and Austria to intermeddle in the affairs of Russia on the plea of humanity to Poland and the pacification of Europe, is understood in Russia to mean a design on the part of those Powers to check her rising greatness and to humble her before the world. Russia will submit to no foreign dictation; already she has a million of men in the field and is rapidly arming and concentrating the remaining vast forces of her empire. The first blow struck by any of the Great Powers will produce a general war in Europe. The war contagion is unquestionably spreading; if the war prevails it will rage with a fury infinitely increased by the pent-up passions and bitter feelings engendered by the memories of the past.

The Draft.

We have on several occasions recently repeated that the draft would take place in Michigan in a few days. The official order upon the subject has finally been issued, from which it appears that the draft will positively take place on the 26th day of October. We subjoin Col. Hill's notification to Gov. Blair:

Detroit, Oct. 3d, 1863.

To His Excellency Gov. A. Blair:

SIR—I have the honor to inform you that the Twenty sixth day of this month has been fixed upon as the day for the commencement of the draft in the State of Michigan. Volunteers reported as mustered into the service before the twenty-fourth (24th) of October will be credited on the quotas of the Congressional or Enrollment sub-districts in which they were raised.

Very Respectfully, Your Ob't. Sv't.
B. H. HILL,
Lieut. Col. 5th Artillery, and
A. A. P. M. Gen., Mich.

It will be seen from the above notification that volunteering can continue for about three weeks or up to the 24th inst. and that every man raised in this interim in Congressional districts or sub-districts, that is in counties, towns and wards, will be credited to the quotas of the respective localities, under the draft. We apprehend, also, that the several hundred men which have been recruited in this county during the past few weeks will be credited upon the quota. It may not be improper to state, that it was the early intention of the Government to put the draft into effect at once, but through the representations of Senator Chandler, who visited Washington for the purpose, sustained by our home military authorities, Michigan has been afforded an opportunity to fill her quota by volunteering. We doubt not the Government will obtain more men under the present arrangement than it would if the draft had been immediately enforced.

The Supervisors of every county should meet at once and provide bounties, to induce men to enlist.

It is due to the people of each County and to the State that this should be done. Wayne County has set a liberal example. Let every other County do the same.—The quota of the State can be filled within the next twenty days. The draft can thus be entirely averted. Be prompt.—Act at once. Everybody is interested. Energetic action is necessary. Let not an hour be lost. Every man to his duty. Those that can't enlist, should each get a recruit.—Ad. and Tribune.

Three of the rebel prisoners on Johnson's Island attempted to escape last Thursday night. They managed to get out of the quarters, and partially cut a large hole through the outside wall, when the light of a large lamp near which they were at work, fortunately discovered them to a sentinel who gave the alarm. The long roll was beaten and in ten minutes thereafter the whole force of the Island was under arms, and the prisoners were quickly captured and secured.

Correspondence.

SPARTA, N. Y., Sept. 26, '63.

Has ever any of your readers been in Sparta? I do not mean the birth-place of the three hundred young men who with their heroic leader, Leonidas, met the Persian host under Xerxes at Thermopylæ, and sacrificed their lives in defence of their country, but simply mean a district of country by the same name embracing two parallel ranges of hills, one on each side of what is termed the Canaseraga Flats, and now containing about three thousand inhabitants. This country to which I refer and which was first settled by emigrants principally from Pennsylvania and New Jersey about the year 1794 is composed of two towns, called East and West Sparta, and although its rugged and unpropitious character rendered the labors of its early pioneers slow in developing its agricultural resources, yet these same men lived to share the reward of their toils and see their labors crowned with abundant success. The country became prosperous and happy. Their descendants were surrounded by all the elements of wealth and in the enjoyment of luxuries to which their fathers were utter strangers; but in the midst of this career of prosperity they too were destined to meet with difficulties and embarrassments in their journey of life, but of a character different from that which their fathers had to encounter in subduing the primitive forest. Yes, these Spartans like their namesakes of old, were at length called upon to defend their country against those who seek its destruction. Father Abraham in his late call asked them to send him Forty of their choicest young men to help defend the honor of their country's flag, but with the provision however, that if they had no taste for fighting they might pay him three hundred dollars a piece in green backs, and he would let them stay at home. Well, the Forty young men were selected and pronounced all right, and with this came the crisis. They pretty generally concluded that they did not like the business for which they had "elected." What was to be done? They had not got the greenbacks but their fathers and friends had.—This therefore brought us the very serious and important question—shall we part with the green-backs, or will we send our sons to be shot at by the rebels? But after much thoughtful deliberation it was finally decided, and thirty-eight of them were extricated from their very unpleasant dilemma by the commutation fee being handed over, while the remaining two declared that they would go and fight for their Union. So thus ended for the present the first trials and sufferings of our modern Spartans in behalf of their country.

But it must not however be inferred from the facts above alluded to, that these people lack in patriotism. Not at all.—On the contrary their patriotism is above suspicion; it would bear the strictest test of those capable of judging. They declare that this war cannot, nor must not cease until Slavery is "cleaned out"—Constitution or no Constitution the thing must be done. They say it is a national sin and all such sins they abhor and detest, and consequently must now be washed out. At least such are the utterances of some of those with whom I have had an opportunity to converse; one person, a young lady, who had a brother drafted and the money through her importunity paid for his release, said to me that she would be willing to live under a military despotism if she only could have revenge on the southern slaveholders. But any farther proof on this point would be superfluous, for what I have said must prove beyond the possibility of a doubt, the loyalty and patriotism of this people.

There is however here another portion of the inhabitants who talk something about preserving a national constitution and a Union of the States in accordance therewith. But these the loyal people call Copperheads, and it is not at all among the probabilities that these pestilential fellows will much longer be permitted to pollute this footstool, and therefore it is unnecessary, of them, farther to speak.

SNOW STORM IN SEPTEMBER.—The people of Michigan City, Ind., were visited on the night of the 19th inst. with a violent snow storm, which covered the ground to the average depth of an inch. The roof of the night express train on the M. C. R. R. was also covered to the depth of an inch in passing through the storm. It is thought that its effects will be disastrous in the extreme. The same "cold snap" visited this section, but in the character of a severe frost.

MICHIGAN FRUIT.—There is being held an exhibition of the American Institute at the Academy of Music in New York. The horticultural exhibition is spoken of as remarkably good. The numerous varieties of pears and apples is said to be astonishing. Among these Southern Michigan sends one hundred and forty-seven varieties of apples.

☞ Vicksburg dates of the 25th says the Texas expedition has exploded.

The County Fair.

We paid a visit to the County Fair Grounds on Thursday the last day of the Fair, but could not stay to see the display of horses, for at half past nine the rain began to fall and we left for home.—There was a large mass of people upon the grounds, and had the day been pleasant the crowd evidently would have been immense. We copy the following from the Expositor:

"The show of Horses was as it always is, superior. The stock of blooded horses was good, while the number of really beautiful matched and single horses of the class for all work, was splendid. It could not probably be exceeded by any County in the State, and equaled by few.

The show of Cattle far exceeded that of any previous year, and was really superb. We are glad to notice this fact, as there has been somewhat of a deficiency in this department heretofore. The number was three times as large as ever before, and the choiceness of the stock showed that greater care is being bestowed upon the selection and breeding of this class of farm stock.

The show of Sheep was ahead of last year—when it was good—showing a steady progress on the part of our farmers in improving this important branch of their stock. The best blood is being continually imported into the County, and a steady improvement of flocks is going on.

Little attention seems to be paid to Poultry and Swine. A very few choice samples were exhibited, but not nearly as many as there ought to have been.

Fruit was in large abundance. Apples were never plentier and finer. The same is true of Peas, Quinces and Grapes.

There was a fine show of Vegetables from a few prodneers.

In Butter, Cheese and Honey, the exhibition was excellent, showing that increased attention is being paid to those important branches of domestic industry. There is no reason why Lenawee should not rival Duchess and the Western Reserve in Butter and Cheese.

Domestic Manufactures were fairly represented by samples of the various handiwork of our farmers' wives and daughters.

The department of Ornamental Needle and Fancy Work was filled with many choice and beautiful articles, evincing great skill ingenuity and taste.

Our various stores and manufactories were well represented by samples of their merchandise, and of their work. The furniture, carriages, and implements of various kinds were of the finest material and make, and showed the great perfection to which our home talent and industry has brought the various details of the different trades that are prosecuted here. But we need to double on our Home Manufactures.

Taken altogether the Fair surpassed that of any previous year. It rained all day yesterday the last day, which materially reduced the receipts, but these will even now probably nearly or quite equal those of last year, showing the most decided success. The attendance on the second day was unprecedentedly large and with good weather yesterday would have been enormous and carried the receipts beyond those of any previous year in the Society's history.

We have nothing exciting in the way of war news this week. The battle in Georgia was not so disastrous as the reports seemed to indicate at the time of going to press last week. Gen Rosecrans is safely fortified at Chattanooga, from which position he cannot be driven, and when the right time comes will dispatch the rebel armies now contesting his advancement.

Rosecrans attributes his repulse to the disobeying of orders by Gen. McCook who is now under arrest. Reinforcements are being sent forward with all possible dispatch, which will soon enable him to assume the offensive against the entire army of rebeldom. Our loss is reported to be near ten thousand in killed, wounded and missing. That of the enemy is thought to be still heavier than ours.

The Army of the Potomac is reported to be actually "in motion;" probably probably preparing for another "masterly advance on Washington."

Mrs. Elizabeth Robinson, wife of Joshua Robinson, a prominent citizen of Alleghany, Penn., was killed in a most distressing manner on the 29th ult. As she stepped on the platform of a railroad car, she lost her balance and fell; she was caught between the bumpers and injured considerably, after which she fell upon the track, and the wheels of one of the trucks were backed over her, breaking both legs, and almost disemboweling her.

A wretch in Kentucky who signed himself "W. C. Donnelly, Vicar General," has been in the habit of writing to the friends of Union soldiers, representing them as sick and needing pecuniary aid. In one case $200 was sent him, in another $60 and so on. He was recently detected, and proved to have once been a spy for the rebel Morgan, and that he had also swindled the rebels. He will be summarily dealt with.

ALBANY, Oct. 6.—Hon. E. Corning today sent in his resignation as Member of Congress, on account of ill health and business.

State News.

Patents issued to Michigan inventors for the week ending Sept. 29th: To Porter L. Sword, of Adrian, assignor to George S. Tiffany of Palmyra, for tile rack and cut-off; to George R. Smith, of Dowagiac, for improvement in building guides for sewing machines. Antedated September 12th, 1863.

The mails have arrived at Ontonagon very irregularly for the past few weeks. The Miner states that no mails came from August 20th to the 29th, when there were three; again there were two on the third and one on the 5th of September.—Then four days passed without a mail, when one arrived on the 8th and three on the 9th of September. From the 9th to the 15th none, one on the 15th, one the 18th, and one on the 20th, after which there was none until the 25th. A tri-weekly mail the year round is earnestly called for by the people.

A public meeting was held at Hudson on the 28th ult., to adopt measures for raising a company of State militia; but it adjourned without accomplishing much. Lieuts. James Biddle and R. A. Beach, Jr., have been commissioned to raise a company of Infantry for State service.

The Jackson County Agricultural Fair was highly successful and remunerative; the receipts for the two first days were $1000; the entries, particularly of cattle and horses, were more numerous than formerly.

Johnson & Burt, of Hudson, shipped on Friday a drove of the finest beeves that have lately been started for the Eastern markets. Thirty-two head were purchased of Thos. Burt, of Ransom, for the snug sum of $2,200.

The Michigan Central Railroad Company are constructing at Albion two substantial culverts, one at each end of the Depot buildings, for carrying off the water that accumulates on the north side of the track. Platform scales are also being put up near the stock-yard.

The spoke, hub and bending factory, at Hudson, is so crowed with orders that it is obliged to run 15 hours a day, and occasionally all night, in order to fill them. A new portable saw-mill for sawing felloe stuff, has just been put in operation.

Mr. Jerome, President of the Port Huron and Owosso Railroad, writes to Hon. James Small, of Lapeer, that the company will immediately proceed to build the road if the property holders along the line of the route will contribute the right-of-way. We judge from this that the road will be speedily be constructed.

Miss Della Childs, of Hudson, was thrown from a carriage on Tuesday morning last, while on her way to the village to attend the Pic-Nic, near the corners east of the corporation; she was considerably bruised and had the rim of one of her ears nearly severed.

Jacob DeAaun, a workman at Albee's Tannery; Grand Haven, was accidentally killed on Tuesday last, by being caught in the machinery and whirled over a revolving shaft. Although one arm and a leg were broken, and his head crushed, he lived three hours after the accident.

The store of Mrs. D. F. Peck, of Ionia, was entered by burglars, on Friday night last, and $200 in cash extracted from the drawer; no goods were taken.

Diptheria is very prevalent in the upper part of Ottawa county, and a number of persons have died—five in the the single family of David VanDouz, at Eastmanville.

The Jackson salt well has reached a depth of 1366 feet, and the indications continue about the same—The Messrs. Vrooman, of Port Huron, are turning out at their factory 30 to 40 barrels a day.

There is talk of organizing, at Mount Clemens, a company for the manufacture of glass.

The St. Joseph Pioneer will appear again this week, with D. A. Winslow as its editor. It may live awhile longer, but the credit system is what cripples the country press everywhere, and it is surprising that they do not abandon it.

Dennis O'Donnell, a carpenter employed at the Carrolton Salt Works, was drowned on Sunday afternoon, 27th ult. while attempting to cross the river in a skiff, with some others, from Carrolton to the East Saginaw side. By some means the skiff was tipped over, and the unfortunate man endeavored to swim ashore, but failed.

A little daughter, 4 years old, of Philip Haslam, of Green township, Macosta county, was burned so badly by her clothes taking fire, a few days ago, as to cause death. She approached too near an open fire where food for stock was being boiled.

A sand-bank at Providence, R. I. 30 feet high, caved in on the 25th ult., instantly killing a child of four years, and burying up to the neck a teamster who was at the time engaged in getting out a load of the material. Some girls who were near by kept the sand away from his head, and he was finally taken out unhurt.

War News.

Private advices from Chattanooga represent the army in fine spirits, and its position impregnable.

A special to the Commercial from Knoxville, Oct. 5th, says: "Our forces below have penetrated to Howassee River, the enemy retiring. The rebels have also fallen back above, Col. Carter being beyond Greenville to night."

The Herald's special, Nashville, 5th, says: "An unusual degree of excitement prevails here in consequence of the rebel Gen. Forrest, with a force of about 4,000 mounted men, having made a raid on our line of railroad communication between this place and Bridgeport or Chattanooga. Just at this particular time no trains are leaving for the direction of the front; yet this circumstance need give no particular cause for alarm. The enemy can do but little to injure our communications. Forrest may succeed in interrupting it for a few hours, but we have not only a force to drive him back, but to defeat an immensely heavier force. There is no need to fear Gen. Rosecrans' success in holding his position at Chattanooga.—He is too strong at that place for the enemy to attack him with even a show of success.

To-day skirmishing has been going on in the neighborhood of Murfreesboro.—The enemy made an attempt to destroy a bridge of considerable importance to us in a railroad point of view. In the skirmish a very few were wounded.

Some persons are inclined to think an engagement is going on at Chattanooga, but I don't coincide with them. Unless the enemy is very desperate, he will not attack Chattanooga. If he does, there is every likelihood he will be defeated. If he attempts a flank movement on that place, he will meet a force that has been long and well tried in the field, and Gen. Rosecrans would be able to hold out several days against all movements and attacks, even of a very superior force.—The present raid is not an unexpected one; we were looking for it. Cavalry movements do not surprise us, and it is only when heavy bodies of Infantry move on our lines of communication or flank that we prepare for serious engagements.

The Louisville Journal has a special from Knoxville, which is considered entirely reliable, that Gen Burnside holds the country south from Knoxville to Calhoun, on the Hiawassee river, and the Western and atlantic Railroads, and only twenty-five miles distant from Kingston, the junction of the Western Atlantic and Rome Railroads; and east of Knoxville as far as Greenville, on the East Tennessee and Virginia Railroad. He is also in possession of the passes into North Carolina. Burnside's right wing is in communication with Rosecrans, and his position all that could be desired. His army is in the best health and spirits.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 3.—The Commercial has advices from Chattanooga to Saturday last. It is estimated at headquarters that our losses in the battle of Chickamauga were: killed 1,800; wounded, 9,500; prisoners, 2,500; total, 13,000.

It was the opinion that if our right wing had held its own, the result of the battle would have been a decisive Union victory. The success of Gen. Thomas on the left was much greater than represented any published account of the battle.—General Thomas routed Longstreet's corps and was in a condition to pursue the enemy but for the disorganization of the right wing. No surprise is felt in the army at the failure of the enemy to resume the attack.

NEW YORK, Oct 6.—A special to the Herald, dated "Nashville, Oct. 5th," says: "The enemy to-day destroyed the large bridge south of Murfreesboro. They burned one portion and cut the other.—All quiet at Murfreesboro to-night."

LOUISVILLE, Oct. 6.—The Nashville dispatch to-day says the rebels burned the Railroad bridge at Stuart's Creek, and one over Stone river. After the captbre of McMinnville, on Saturday by the rebels under Wheeler, they burned one locomotive, and ten cars and took a number of railroad men prisoners. Subsequently Col. McCook with a brigade of federal cavalry attacked them there scattering them in every direction. The rebels left behind all the prisoners they had taken and several hundred horses.

McCook killed and wounded 125, and took ninety prisoners. Sunday morning, the Confederates appeared before Murfreesboro, driving the Federals into their entrenchments and threatening the town. After remaining all day and part of the night, they destroyed the railroad bridge crossing a fork of Stone River, about three miles distant, when it is supposed they retired.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 3.—The Democrat's Leavenworth special says: "Previous reports regarding the change in the Department of Missouri, are confirmed.—Kansas is now a separate Department. Gens. Hunter and Curtis were offered the command, and both refused. Brig. Gen. McNeil has been tendered the place, and will probably accept. Gen. Ewing is removed. It is reported that he will supercede Blunt, who is under arrest and ordered to St. Louis.

The railroad from Vicksburg to Jackson is to be rebuilt. No movement from Vicksburg will be made very soon. Gen Logan has taken command of the city.

Wheeler's Cavalry is estimated at four thousand with four pieces of artillery.

Purchasers of Watches, Jewelry, Gold and Silver ware Plated Ware, Spoons, Forks, and all other articles usually kept at a first-class jewelry establishment, seldom fail to call at M. S. Smith's, No. 55 Woodward Avenue, Detroit. Mr. Smith is well known to the people of the State to be an honorable, high-minded dealer. His splendid store—which is really a palace, ornamented from floor to ceiling with glittering wares, manufactured from the precious metals—is a centre of attraction, and there are few persons that visit it who are not tempted to exchange their perishable "greenbacks" for those more substantial and valuable gold and silver fabrics which are so desirable as family keepsakes. A leading feature in Mr. Smith's trade is his agency for selling the celebrated American Watches, the only establishment in Detroit, we understand, where these very superior time-keepers are exclusively sold. They are furnished in gold and silver cases, and of various styles and sizes, suited to the wants of gentlemen or ladies. These valuable watches are ascertained, upon trial, to be the most accurate and durable timepieces ever offered for sale in this country, and they are fast supplanting those of foreign manufacture. There are few business men in Detroit who have manifested greater enterprise and forecast, or who have, by a long course of honorable dealing, secured a greater measure of public confidence, than Mr. Smith, and we can cheerfully recommend him to the patronage of all those having occasion to purchase goods in his line of business.

Roback's Stomach Bitters.

It has long been the aim of the physicians to find a combination of medicines having the requisite stimulating and tonic properties to relieve and cure the common complaints of Billiousness, Liver disorders, Languor, Headache, Lowness of Spirits, Indigestion, Jaundice, Fever and Ague, &c., which are the diseases incident to this climate. The remedy has been discovered by Dr. Roback, and in the above complaints, and there is but one voice from the people, and that is in favor of these truly wonderful Stomach Bitters. We advise all who are afflicted and need an agreeable tonic for the troubles above indicated, to commence at once using the Bitters. See advertisement. 8w4.

MILLINERY.

NEW FIRM and NEW GOODS. Mrs. M. Weaver takes this method of informing the citizens of Tecumseh and vicinity, that she is this day in receipt of a full assortment of New Goods direct from New York, at the shop formerly occupied by Mrs Wagoner on the corner of Railroad and Chicago streets, where she will be happy to wait on all who may favor her with a call.

My stock consists in part of Bonnets, Hats Silk Ribons, Caps, Head dresses, Feathers, Flowers and in fact all articles belonging to a full stock of Winter Millinery

Bleaching and Pressing done to order and in a satisfactory manner.

Union Livery Stable.

"Union now, and Union ever,"
Shall be every freemon's cry;
Union formed to stand forever,
Union, the watchword, and reply.

The "UNION LIVERY," all do say,
Is just the place to go to,
To get a rig that's nice and gay,
With bells, and whip, and buffalo;

Horses gay, and safe, and fleet;
Buggies new, and nice, and strong:
Cutters fine, and all complete—
Just get in and go along.

It is the ladies' chief delight
To take a drive in our carriages;
Put on your lasses boys, and try it,
They'll pay toll on all the bridges.

Come one, and all, by night or day,
We'll make the prices suit you,
For single rig, or four horse sleigh,
And drivers, too, to please you.

Our stables, too, are new and good;
Just drive your horses in and bait,
With hay, or straw, or oats or corn—
There's room enough, you need not wait.

The poetry machine has bu'sted. Good bye. Come and try us at the Union Livery and Feed Stable, between Haydens' and Tindall's Warehouses on railroad street.

UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER.

"Such a child can readily wring out a bushel of clothes in a few minutes. It is truly a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRONG SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large per centage on the cost. We think the machine much more than pays for itself every year in the saving of garments. There are several kinds in the market, differing in some construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with rings, that the garments may slip through the rollers, and not be torn, which the Universal does; and yet the cloth is so far the rubber frock, that it will not tear the cloth. We have used it and it was GOOD AS NEW after nearly four years constant use."

Every Wringer with Cog Wheels is Warranted in every particular.

NO WRINGER CAN BE DURABLE WITHOUT COG-WHEELS.

LINES.

ELLEN H. FLAGG.

A waste of land, a sodden plain,
A lurid sunset sky;
With clouds that fled and faded fast
In ghostly phantasy;
A field upturned by trampling feet,
A field up-piled with slain,
With horse and rider blent in death
Upon the battle plain.

The dying and the dead lie low;
For them no more shall rise
The evening moon, nor midnight stars,
Nor daylight's soft surprise.
They will not wake to tenderest call,
Nor see again each home,
Where waiting hearts shall throb and break,
When this day's tidings come.

* * * * * * *

Two soldiers, lying as they fell
Upon the reddening clay—
In daytime foes, at night, in peace
Breathing their lives away
Brave hearts had stirred each manly breast,
Fate only made them foes;
And lying, dying, side by side,
A softened feeling rose.

"Our time is short," one faint voice said;
"To-day we've done our best
On different sides. What matters now?
To-morrow we're at rest.
Life lies behind. I might not care
For only my own sake;
But far away are other hearts,
That this day's work will break.

"Among New Hampshire's snowy hills
There pray for me to-night,
A woman and a little girl,
With hair like golden light."
And at the thought broke forth, at last,
The cry of anguish wild,
That would not longer be repressed—
"O God, my wife, my child!"

"And," said the other dying man,
"Across the Georgia plain,
There watch and wait for me loved ones
I'll never see again,
A little girl, with dark, bright eyes,
Each day waits at the door;
The father's step, the father's kiss
Will never meet her more."

"To-day we sought each other's lives,
Death levels all that now;
For soon before God's mercy seat
Together we shall bow.
Forgive each other while we may;
Life's but a weary game,
And right or wrong the morning sun
Will find us, dead, the same."

The dying lips the pardon breathe;
The dying hands entwine;
The last ray dies, and over all
The stars from heaven shine;
And the little girl, with golden hair,
And one with dark eyes bright,
On Hampshire's hills and Georgia's plain,
Were fatherless that night.

Fruit instead of Medicine.

There is no doubt but that the use of good fruit is highly conducive to health, and indeed, almost indispensible to it. Much of the sickness in the western country is occasioned by the want of it. It is the scarcity of good fruit that creates such a demand for physic in our western country. The various fevers and bilious disorders prevalent in the summer season, are more owing to the want of good fruit than any other cause. And not until fruit is generally cultivated and used as an article of diet, shall we hear of those disorders which are sapping the life fountains of thousands of our farmers annually. And if the fruit were administered instead of the physician's prescriptions, we have no doubt it would be far better for the patient.

Nature in this as well as in all other respects has bountifully supplied us with varieties, which, if properly cared for, will enable us to enjoy a succession throughout the year. But fruit is not only a necessary of life, it is one of its greatest luxuries.—What is more enticing to the palate than luscious fruit? And as an article of diet, nothing equals it. It is easily raised, costs but little, promotes health, and is loved by every one. Most people content themselves by cultivating two or three varieties. This should not be so. Fruit is needed more throughout the summer season than almost any other part of the year. And the varieties which ripen at this time are less cultivated. The Farmer cannot take a step which will add more to his own joy, and those of his own family, than by having such a succession as will furnish him with fruit the entire year.

☞ The word "canteen" has had a curious history. It is perhaps the only word in our language, which, originally English, passed into a foreign tongue, and was afterward taken back in a modified form. As originally spoken by the Saxon, it was simply tin can, but the Gaul, as is his wont, placing the noun before the adjective and pronouncing the letter i as e, brought it out as can ten, pronounced canteen. Adopting a thousand other French military terms, the dull Englishman took back his own original word in a new shape, without any inquiries on the subject, and hence we now say canteen instead of tin can.

PROBLEM.—Three brothers were heirs to their father's oxen, seventeen in number.—According to the Mohammedan law of inheritance the eldest brother was entitled to one half, the second to one-third, and the youngest to one ninth of the whole number. As the animals could not be divided without destroying them, the subject was referred to the decision of the Faithful. Ali, the caliph, added an ox to the number and then made the division. This gave each brother more than his share—the eldest nine, next six, and the younger two—and yet left the Prince the ox he had added.

ORANGE JUDD of the "American Agriculturalist," says of the

UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER.

"A child can readily wring out a tubfull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large percentage on its cost. We think the machine much more than PAYS FOR ITSELF EVERY YEAR in the saving of garments. There are several kinds nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly FOUR YEARS CONSTANT USE."

Every Wringer with Cog Wheels is Warranted in every particular.

NO WRINGER CAN BE DURABLE WITHOUT COG-WHEELS.

A good CANVASSER wanted in every town.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY,

51 Vesey Street New York;

Since its organization, has created a new era in the history of

Wholesaling Tea in this Co.

They have introduced their selections of Teas and are selling them not over

TWO CENTS (02 Cents) per pound above COST,

Never deviating from the ONE Price asked.

Another peculiarity of the Company is that their Tea Taster not only devotes his time to the selection of their TEAS as to quality, value, and particular styles for particular localities of country, but he helps the TEA buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this, but points out to him the best bargains.

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all others.

If he is no judge of TEA, or the Market, of his time is valuable, he has all the benefits of a well organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.

This enables all tea buyers—no matter if they are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York merchants.

Parties can order Teas and will be served by us as well as though they came themselves being sure to get original packages, true weights and tares and the tea warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Company's Teas, which will be sent to all who order it; comprising

Hyson, Young Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, Twankay and Skin.

Oolong, Souchong, Orange & Hyson Pekoe,

JAPAN TEA OF EVERY DISCRIPTION, colored and uncolored.

This list has each kind of Tea divided into FOUR classes, namely: Cargo, high Cargo, Fine, Finest, that every one may understand from description and the prices annexed that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea Trade.

We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over two cents (02 Cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who have heretofore been paying Enormous Profits.

WILCOX & GIBBS,

SEWING MACHINE.

Price, with Hemmer and Feller, $40.

For Wilcox & Gibbs' Sewing Machine is the best as to work, and cheapest as to price, for

Family Sewing,
Braiding,
Hemming,
Feelling,
Tucking,
Cording,

It forms a flat, even and elastic seam, which is warranted not to rip in wear even if the seam is cut at intervals and also under all circumstances to unravel when ripped.

A patented device of great utility to learners proves to be the possibility of the needle being run in the wrong direction, or the alance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature, which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially no other will bear any comparison with it." Philadelphia Evening Journal.

"An unchanged wonder."—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines.—Pennsylvanian.

"Machine in the opinion of the committee more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs' as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report.

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt that two threads are not as was supposed necessary to a good machine.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21 1860.

"After much wear and many washings the stitching is found to retain all the roundness evenness and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others."—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have proof in our own family."—Boston Traveler.

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette.

"We esteem it the best machine for family use. The stitch is unexceptionable." Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the

BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion and excites the absorbents into healthy action, by which the WATER or CALCEROUS depositions, and all unnatural enlargements are reduced as well as pain and inflammation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, or CHILDREN.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEAKNESS

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot Hands,	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin,	Pallid Countenance,

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, more follow

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those direful diseases

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION,

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy death by Consumption bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Female,

OLD OR YOUNG, SINGLE, MARRIED, OR CONTEMPLATING MARRIAGE.

In many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Obstructions or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the

I could furnish any quantity of testimonials of its efficiency from from my own patients, but the practice of parading bought and fictitious ones before the public is too prevalent I do not deem it advisable. My object is to place my medicine before the public, not alone to make money, but to do good. It is proverbially true of the American Ladies, that not ten perfectly healthy ones may be found in any one vicinity.

Be Wise in Time,

Let not disease destroy your constitution. Try a bottle of my PERIODICAL DROPS, and you will be satisfied that I am an imposter. Tell your suffering friends what restored the bloom of health to your cheeks, and thereby confer a favor more valuable than gold. For painful or scanty menstruation it is just the thing. I have now in my mind an instance of a lady who had been suffering from painful menstruation two or three years confining her to her room each time; she had applied to several eminent physicians without relief, when one bottle of my DROPS entirely cured her.

Equinoctial.

BY MRS. A. D. T. WHITNEY.

The sun of life has crossed the line;
The summer shine of lengthened light
Faded and failed—till where I stand
'Tis equal day and equal night.

One after one, as dwindling hours,
Youth's glowing hopes have dropped away
And soon may barely leave the gleam
That coldly scorns a winter day.

I am not young, I am not old;
The flush of morn, the sunset calm,
Paling and deepening, each to each,
Meet midway in solemn charm.

One side I see the summer fields
Not yet disrobed of all their green;
While westerly, along the hills,
Flame the first tints of frosty sheen.

Ah, middle point, where cloud and storm
Make battle day of this my life!
Where, even-matched, the night and day
Wage round me their September strife!

I bow me to the threatening gale;
I know, when that is overpast,
Among the peaceful harvest days,
An Indian summer comes at last!

God's Soldier.

"If I were only a strong man!"

A sick girl sat propped up with cushions near an open window, in the early September days while Summer yet lingered among the green leaves and flowers with which she had beautified the land. Her face was almost ghostly in its whiteness. Far back in their sockets lay her eyes, which neither pain nor wasting sickness had been able to dim.—Her shadowy hands with their long transparent fingers, lay, one across her bosom the other resting, like a piece of exquisitely cut marble on a purple cushion.

Not very far away from the gates of death. The road had already gone down from the sunlit plains and was crowding in among the shadowy cypresses. Not far away from the gates of death. She knew it and was not afraid.

"If I were only a strong man!" The tremulous fife shrill but exhilarant; the throbbing drum changing the time in which her heart was beating; the reverberant tread of armed men—these were yet in her ears though the pageant was gone. Weak sick dying as she was, her soul was quickened by a new inspiration.

"But I can do nothing." She sighed a little while afterwards letting the white lids with their thick fringes, fall over her glittering orbs.

"Nothing, Alice?"

The shut lids flew open and the bright eyes were in the questioner's face.

"What can I do? I am not a man."

"No, you are a weak, sick girl."

"So weak that these poor hands cannot even knit."

"Just so weak, Alice." The voice was burdened with tenderness.

"There are sick soldiers in our hospitals, But I cannot even visit them, nor do so small a thing as hold a cup of cold water to feverish lips."

"No, you cannot even do this."

"I am helpless. I can do nothing!—And yet I would give my life if that would avail anything, for our country.—To me people do not seem to be half in earnest, do not seem to comprehend the peril in which we are involved. Men talk of business and gain, women of dress and pleasure, as if no enemy were at the gates mad for our destruction. I feel sometimes as if I must cry out from the windows and warn the people of a danger they do not appear to dread."

"If you could infuse your spirit into one who has the strength to stand up in the face of our enemies."

The sick girl raised her head from among the cushions in a half surprised way.

"My spirit into another?" she said.

"Yes."

"Into whom?"

The answer did not come until her question was repeated. Then the name of "Howard" was spoken.

"Howard!" It was evident that a pang had gone through her heart. Her lids fell quickly and her face buried itself among the cushions.

"When our country is in danger, God lays upon us the duty of offering for its defence, even our most precious things."

The sick girl lifted her head again.

If the pale face could be paler, it was paler now.

"Howard is brave and patriotic," she said.

"I believe it, Alice."

The eyes were shut again. A hard struggle was in progress.

"If I were not so weak, Aunt Phœbe. If the time were not so near at hand.' Her lips quivered, and tears fell over her cheeks.

"Three years, or for the war! I should never see him again in this world! Oh, Aunt Phœbe, I am not strong enough for this!"

"Only in the degree that God gives us strength are we strong for any trial," was gently answered. "You asked, 'What can I do?' and the question is answered. Pour into another heart your strong enthusiasm. Vitalize another soul with your intense patriotism. I have watched you closely Alice, when Howard has been here. You are not, apparently, the same girl then that you are when he is absent. You do not talk as strongly about the war; and if he shows anything like military ardor, you are silent. Not a single stimulus as far as observed by me, have you offered to his love of country. Is this right? Are you doing your highest duty, in thus seeking to hold him back from the ranks of patriots and defenders? I think Howard brave; I know him to be sound in principle. He belongs to that class of men who make the best soldiers. And why is he not in the army? The answer is with you.—Speak the fitting word and he will move at once to the call of duty. Into his manlier strength your warm life shall flow. On the battle-field your brave words will be in his thought, and make him invincible. What can you do, Alice? You can give a man to the army of freedom, a man filled with your own spirit, counting not his life dear, so that his country is saved."

"Leave me to myself, Aunt Phœbe, said the sick girl. "God will no doubt give me strength, but I feel very weak now."

Aunt Phœbe laid her lips tenderly on Alice's forehead, and then went out.

For a long time shadowing lashes lay close upon the white cheeks. The pale thin mouth was shut. It was a sad mouth now. Was there strength enough?—Could the sick girl bear that parting with her lover? a parting in which there was so little hope of meeting again? And deeper still than this went the pang. She thought of wounding and death. Could she give that precious one these? Send him away by a word to encounter, in his own dear person, the terrible things of which she had read as befalling in battle? Her weak heart shuddered. She grew faint and sick before the images imagination wrought into almost life-like existance. But this state passed. Other thoughts flowed into her mind, and changed the charater of its creations. She did not see the dark things of fear, but the great success that lay beyond the strife of the battle fields. And now was revived the old ardor of patriotism. Up from the valley of doubt and fear she walked with firm steps, and eyes fixed on the mountain tops beyond. She had been ready to give all for her country—even her own life, if that poor offering could have availed anything—all but this! Now she was equal to the last great duty.

"I am strong in Thy strength," she said, lifting her eyes meekly upward.—"Take all of earthly support I will lean upon Thy everlasting arm.

The shadowy lashes no longer lay close down over her white cheeks. The pale thin mouth, so tightly a little while before, was parted, and the sad expression gone. The clear eyes looked out upon the sunny sky and pleasant landscape.—Her heart beat in renewed strength

"Oh, Howard!" What a flash of joy went over her countenance. The door had opened and a young man entered.—He was not past twenty-three; yet he had a firmly-set mouth, an eye of strength and the step of one whose thoughts were already maturing into distinct life purposes.

"Dear Alice!" he said, and kissed her. Then taking her little hand, thin and colorless almost as a snow flake, he held it very tightly, sitting kown as she lay among the cushions—gazing into her face and drinking in of its sweetness.

"If you were not so weak, Alice"—There was a meaning in his voice beyond the mere expression of regret. Alice felt this and as she tightened her hand in his, answered:

"If I were not so weak—what then, Howard?"

His mouth grew serious. He looked at her a little while, and then his eyes dropped to the floor.

"I would go from you for a little while."

He saw her start. But instead of grief or pain a soft smile lay upon her lips.

"Where?"

He stood up drawing his form erect.

"I am a man—strong, and of full stature."

She did not answer, but her eyes were in his face.

"Do you understand me, Alice?" His voice was just a little unsteady. He sat down again, taking the hand he had relinquished a moment before.

"I think so." She spoke very evenly.

"When our country calls upon us, Alice God calls."

"I believe it," she answered.

"It has called upon me—has been calling for months. The summons is in my ears day and night, and without sin, I can no longer remain disobedient. But how can I go and you so weak and frail? Oh, Alice, it is not that love has diminished, but the call of duty grows more and more trumpet-like every hour."

"You speak truly, Howard," was the firmly given answer. "When our country calls upon us, God calls. I have heard the voice, and recognizing it as the voice of God, have looked up asking, what can I do? I, so weak, so helpless—just ready to be blown away by a breath—not able to minister even to my own needs. Oh, I have trembled in every with excess of desire to respond."

"Let me take of your spirit, darling!" said the young man, bending down to her until his breath was upon her cheeks.—"Let me lift from your weak shoulders the burden of active duty, and lay it upon my own. Strengthen me with your love! Say to me, Go fourth, and offer the service of two hearts. I am ready to bear your badge of honor to the battle field as a true and loyal knight.

No fear came upon her heart. God was giving her strength for the hour. Her face grew warm and the shrunken flesh, enfilled by stronger pulsations, seemed to round with the fullness of health.

"Go forth," she answered, "and may God give you courage and endurance!"

The sick girl laid her head upon the bosom of her lover, and in the enthusiasm of the hour was happy.

But did not her steps falter as she moved along this new path of duty. No. Her love of country was genuine, and the ardor that flowed from this love was no evanescent heat. For herself, she knew that her steps were daily descending to the river of death, and that in a very short time she would be amidst the encompassing waves. Over the river; faith saw the land of imortals; and the shinning ones on the bank ready to receive her soul. She had conquered the human weakness that would hold her beloved to her side, and in saintly strength given him to his country in the hour of need.

How brave he looked in his uniform! how strong—how manly! Pride twined itself with love. Never a word of weakness—never a look of pain—never a hindering tear. But always an enterprising strength. She hardly seemed to him a frail, dying woman, but a beautiful spirit, pointing the way through danger to duty.

The time of parting came. Alice had not dared to trust herself to think of this hour. Would she have strength for the trial? Strength of spirit? Yes. But the heart would beat faster and stronger with human emotions; and the frail body might not bear the strain.

"God's love and God's strength go with you Howard!" She tried to be calm and brake. Be a true shoulder! I shall be near you—always near you, Howard! He kissed her over and over again. Drew her wildly to his heart. Gave her a long look of impassioned love. Then, without utterance, tore himself from the room.

A messenger reached him an hour afterwards, as he was marching to the place of embarkation, his regiment having been ordered to the capital. The nature of this summons was such that he obtained leave to remain behind, and join his regiment on the next day.

The ordeal of parting had been two severe for Alice. The strength that came to her was unnatural, an excitement that consumed. When the scene passed, she became so weak and tremulous, that she could no longer sit among the cushions in her great arm-chair, but had to be lifted to the bed, where she lay with shut eyes, and breath so low that Aunt Phœbe, as she stood over her, was sometimes in doubt whether the chest moved or not; half an hour she thus lay. Then her lips moved, and as Aunt Phœbe bent down her ear she caught the whispered name of Howard. It was then that she dispatched the messengar, who was in time to reach the young souldier before his departure.

"Alice!" The voice went down to the region of consciousness. Slowly the lids uprised themselves, and there was light and joy in the eyes that looked into he lovers's face.

"Oh, Howard!"

"You know me, Alice?"

She smiled sweetly, but feebly; and her eyelids began to droop as if they were heavy with sleep.

"Alice!" he called, tenderly.

She looked at him again.

"Do you know me, Alice?"

"Yes."

"Who am I?"

Her eyes, now fixed, and becoming glassy, were looking steadily into his eyes.

"God's soldier!"

As the words left her lips, a brief smile played over them. Then the eyelids fell, and a veil was drawn over the ashen face. It was the veil of death!

"God's soldier!" said the young man, as three days afterwards he turned in tears from a new made grave. Without fear, without reproach! Amen!

Prompt to the call of duty; patient under suffering; all enduring; tender to the sick as a woman; quick to help the weak; and as brave as a lion in battle—so did this soldier of God, into whose life had flowed the enthuiasm of another life move among his fellows. Into their spirits his spirit was infused. They felt the motions of his undaunted courage, and found, in his true words fitly spoken, an inspiration to noble deeds. Give such men to our armies, and having justice on our side victory is sure to pearch upon our banners.

God's soldiers! Men inspired by no thirst of blood—no hatred of their fellow. man—no mere love of danger and mad adventure, but self-devoted for their country; and brave from duty; ready to lay down their lives to defend great principals of human rights, when assailed.—These are they who in the present great contest, are most needed. Send them forth, true wives, mothers, sisters and maidens! You know them. Lay no restraining hands upon their garments—put no hinderances in their way God's soldiers must now to the field, for all the powers of hell are moving to destroy the outpost of civil freedom.—Home Magazine.

Columbus.

By the Genoese and Spaniards he was regarded as a man resolved on a 'wild dedication of himself to unpathed waters, undreamed of shores;' and the court of Portugal endeavored to rob him of the glory of his enterprise by secretly dispatching a vessel in the course which he had pointed out. He used to affirm that he stood in need of God's particular assistance in that voyage of discovery; like Moses when he led forth the children of Israel, who forebore to lay violent hands upon him, because of the miracles which God wrought by his means. "So," said the admiral, "did it happen to me on that voyage." "And so easily," says a commentor, "are the workings of the evil one overcome by the power of God!"—"His person," says Herrera, "had an air of grandeur. His hair, from many hardships, had long been gray. In him you saw unconquerable courage and high thoughts; patient of wrongs, calm in adversity, ever trusting in God; and had he lived in ancient times, statutes and temples would have been erected to him without number, and his name would have been placed among the stairs."

☞ Old Ira Thornton was a dreadfully mean man, and had difficulty, some times in drawing his breath, because he begrudged the air necessary for that operation. One day the old fellow was at work upon the high beams of his barn, when he lost his balance and fell heavily upon the floor, twenty feet below. He was taken up for dead, with a fractured skull and carried into the house. All efforts to bring him to consciousness were unavailing, and the doctor was called.—Finally, the doctor having trepanned him, turned and asked Mrs. Thornton for a silver dollar to put in where a piece of the skull was wanting. At this remark, Ira, who had been breathing heavily, turned in bed and groaned out:

"Wouldn't a cent do as well?"

'I say, landlord, that's a dirty towel for a man to wipe on!" Landlord, with a look of amazement, replied:

'Well, you're mighty particular. Sixty or seventy of my boarders have wiped on that towel this morning, and you are the first one to find fault.'

☞ If you must form harsh judgements form them of yourselves, not others; and, in general, begin by attending to your own deficiencies first.

The Farmers' Holidays.

BY HORACE GREELEY.

Patriotism has its anniversary; Religion has more than one; Art, War, Genius, Literature, Reform, have each their heroes and their joyful or solemn demonstrations. The art antecedent and fundamental to all others—the Art of Husbandry or Cultivation—has likewise its peculiar festivals. When the summer harvest is ended and the summer strife with weeds triumphantly concluded or hopelessly given up; when the season of intense heat is over, and the leaves of the forest begin perceptibly to rustle in the cool western breeze; when the dark-green of the rank growing Indian corn fades day by day imperceptibly into a faint but deepening yellow, and here and there a maple or dogwood displays fantastically a spray of crimson amid its else green and tender foliage; when all things rural and deciduous presage the coming on of Autumn, then look out for huge posters in country taverns and imposing programmes in weekly journals announcing the attractions and solid merits of the approaching County Fair.

And a blessing that Fair is—or should be, may be—to the whole rural population of this or any other country—nay, to the entire community. Life—that is, the life of the industrious, the producers—is apt to be too prosaic, too plodding, too sordid, too drudging. That 'Man should not live by bread alone' is a truth which has many more sides than have yet been contemplated. Man should not live for bread only, nor for that which buys bread. To live merely to delve, to grub, to garner, to hoard, is neither manly nor godly. Industry is noble, is imperatively required: he is not honest, much less Christian, who shuns work and lives indolently, uselessly, on the products of others' sinews. But 'the live is more than meat,' and each should live with this truth fully in view. If an intellectual being is to labor cheerfully, vigorously, resolutely, he must have some end in view beyond the mere physical product of his toil. To incite him to work with buoyant alacrity and steadfast perseverence, he should have the prospect before him of a calm, comfortable old age—a period of exemption from the wear and strain of daily care and exertion, a season of calm retrospection and placid enjoyment, whereof a foretaste is afforded by the Agricultural Fair.

I visit the county or township exhibition of the happiest results of the summer's and of many seasons' husbandry—the rude, impromptu stalls filled with choice horses or horned cattle; the pens well stocked with sheep or swine; the coops of geese, ducks, fancy hens, pigeons, etc., the pots of golden butter, rows of noble cheeses, the lavish display of giant squashes, luscious peas, fair and ruddy apples, purple grapes, etc., etc., with a genuine delight. Yet the best feature of the exhibition is that supplied by the spectators. The solid, thrifty, contented farmer, justly proud of his year's achievement and conscious of the blessedness of his lot; the sober, quiet, gentle housewife, happy in her family and her daily round of duties and loving cares, yet heartily enjoying her day's relief from the ever-recurring round of household labors, and realizing the luxury of God's golden sunshine; irrepressible hilarity and frolic of the elder boys; the stiller glee and heartfelt gladness of the maidens; the eager curiosity and tireless locomotion of the younger children—other holidays may be more piquant, more stimulating than the farmers,' yet I recall no other which is so uniformly productive of innocent and healthful enjoyment.

Yes, the Farmers' Festival is a good one; but it might and should be still better. It ought to be inexorably purged of the 'side-shows'—often disgusting and demoralizing—which fasten upon it like parasites and will not easily be shaken off. We visit the Fair to feast on spectacles of proportion, beauty, symmetry, success: let those who have a taste for the abnormal, the misshapen, the hideous, the seeming defects or miscarriages of Nature, find or make the proper occasions for gratifying this diseased appetite. If you will give a quarter to see a six-legged boy or a bearded woman, a child with a head like a washtub, or a man whose thimble-full of brains surmounted a hogshead of tallow, do it! but keep your pets away from the fair ground! They have no business there; and the managers who sell them space inside the impervious fence or do not guard against their taking it outside are unfaithful to their responsibility. Before locating a fair, they should obtain control pro tem of all the ground within a radius of at least a mile, and to arrange that 'no side-shows' shall be allowed, and no sale of refreshments save by their special license. The saving of time, health, and morals thence resulting would be incalculably great.

By far too little care is given to making the Fair a school—a Farmers' Institute akin to the Teachers'. Here, for example, is a great pumpkin or melon, a cabbage in size like a brass kettle, or a bunch of grapes whereon to feast a family. Thousands note it, eye it, possibly wonder at it; then pass on and practically forget it. But every remarkable product should be labelled with some brief account of the specialities of soil, position, fertilizing, culture, etc., under which it was perfected; and if seeds or cuttings are attainable, that fact should also be stated. Vague marvel is the least profitable of all sensations; the one whole some lesson of the Fair is 'Go thou, and do likewise.'

Our farmers are quite too generally deficient in their contribution to their Fair. They attend only as spectators and critics, when they should be exhibitors also, and often grumble at the meagerness of the display without reflecting that they are directly responsible for it. "What a sorry show of fruit this year! I could have beaten it myself." Why didn't you then? It is your own delinquency that you are rebuking; not that of the managers who procured all they could, or the exhibitors who sent the best they had.—Had you grumblers but done your duty there would have been nothing to grumble at.

In truth, a contemptible spirit is evinced in this respect by many who cannot be fully aware of their own meanness. They will not send such creditable products as they have, because they know or fear that some one else will send better. But the true end of exhibitions is not prizes, but comparison, instruction, improvement. We need the good and the better side by side with and illustrating the best. Whoever has grown a hundred bushels of dry shelled corn to the acre, has done nobly, even though another has grown a hundred and five. That is an envious, paltry soul that will not let its light shine because there is or may be a brighter.

I think our premium list generally deficient in not appealing specially to the young. I wish premiums were offered to the youth under eighteen who should exhibit the best acre of corn or roots wholly of his own growing; the girl of like years who should exhibit the best cheese or crock of butter or dozen loaves of bread of her own exclusive making. Our cleverest young folks are not usually attracted to rural pursuits, even when they were those of their parents and grandparents; and this is not only personally a mistake: it is a public misfortune. There is no other pursuit which gives such assurance of comfort, thrift, competence, as the Farmer's provided intelligence and capacity are combined with energy and industry in the pursuer. Failure through infirmity or chronic disease is everywhere possible; but if we regard life as a lottery, the genuine prizes that fall to the farmer's lot are far more numerous and substantial even though less dazzling, than those accorded to any other class or vocation. Let us hope that our Fairs will be so conducted as to render this truth more and more obvious, increasing year by year the proportion of those who choose the way of solid usefulness and lifelong comfort and content.

☞ A Mrs. Leggett, living in Philadelphia, has in her yard a remarkable butter pear tree. Every year for the last twenty-five years the tree has supplied the family with delicious fruit in great abundance, and in all probability will be in bearing for a half century to come. Each year for nineteen years in succession Mrs. Leggett has sent a basket of the fruit to the annual exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, always taking the premium over all others. Celebrated fruit growers have endeavored by scientific culture to produce better fruit, but the Legget pair tree, with no other nurture than the rains of heaven afford, still excels them all. Its fruit sells readily to dealers for ten cents each.

☞ Carrying politeness to excess is said to be raising your hat to a young lady in the street, and allowing a couple of dirty collars and a pair of socks to fall out on the sidewalk.

Proclamation.

By the President of the United States of America.

The year that is drawing towards its close has been filled with the blessings of fruitful fields and healthful skies. To these bounties which are so constally enjoyed that we are prone to forget the source from which they came, others have been added which are of so extraordinary a nature that they cannot fail to penetrate and soften even the heart which is habitually insensible to the ever watchful Providence of Almighty God. In the midst of a civil war of unequalled magnitude, which has sometimes seemed to invite and provoke the aggressions of foreign States, peace has been preserved with all nations, order has been maintained, the laws have been respected and obeyed, and harmony has prevailed everywhere except in the theatre of military conflict, while that theatre has been greatly contracted by the advancing armies and navies of the Union. The needful diversion of wealth and strength from the fields of peaceful industry to the National defense, have not been arrested the plow the shuttle or the ship. The axe has enlarged the borders of our settlements, and the mines, as well of iron and coal as the precious metals, have yielded even more abundantly than heretofore. Population has steadily increased, notwithstanding the waste that has been made in the camp, the seige, and the battle-field, and the country, rejoicing in the consciousness of augmented strength and vigor, is permitted to expect a continuance of years, with a large increase of freedom. No human counsel hath devised nor hath any mortal hand worked these great things. They are the gracious gifts of the Most High God who, while dealing with us in anger for our sins, hath nevertheless remembered mercy.

It has seemed to me fit and proper that they should be solemnly, reverently and greatfully acknowled as with one heart and voice by the whole American people. I do therefore invite my fellow citizens in every part of the United States, as also those who are at sea and those who are sojourning in foreign lands to set apart and observe the last Thursday of November next as a day of Thanksgiving and Prayer to our benefactor who dwelleth in the Heavens, and I recommend to them that while offering up the ascriptions justly due to him for such singular deliverances and blessings, they do also with humble penitence, for our National perverseness and disobedience, commend to his tender care all those who have become widows, orphans or sufferers in the lamentable civil strife in which we are unavoidably engaged and fervently implore the interposition of the Almighty Hand to heal the wounds of the nation, and to restore us as soon as may be consistent with the Divine purposes, to the full enjoyment of peace, harmony, tranquility and Union.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the City of Washington on this day, the third day of October, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and sixty-three and of the independence of the United States the eighty-eighth.

Signed, A. LINCOLN.

"A SHELL IN DE STOVE."—A New York correspondent writing from Morris Island, relates the following anecdote of an 'intelligent contraband:

Quite an uproar was created here yesterday. Gen. Terry has a sable cook, who wanted some lead for his fishing tackle, and undertook to melt some from the outside of a ten-pound Parrott shell, which he discovered lying about the camp. Placing the projectile in a stove, and seating himself where he could catch the molten metal in a shovel as it fell, he soon had the satisfaction of seeing one of the most startling views ever brought to his vision. The shell exploded, and, besides blowing the stove and the cook-house to atoms, inflicted serious wounds upon the darkey. My servant, a contraband from Beaufort, gave vent to the universal sentiment, while he was surveying the wreck which the explosion occasioned, and from which we so narrowly escaped, in the following remark: 'De dam ole fool, come clar dow yere f'm Bos-'n an' put a shell in de stove!'

THE REBEL OBSTRUCTIONS.—It is now ascertained that the Rebels have two, and perhaps three lines of obstructions barring our progress into Charleston harbor. The first line, stretching from Fort Sumter to Fort Moultrie, consists of a heavy chain, supported by buoys, so as to float about six feet under water. This, it is believed, can be easily overcome or removed. The second line crossing the channel about the middle grounds is formed of spiles driven into the bottom with heavy cables interlaced from spile to spile near the water line. This is more formidable but means will be devised to test its strength. In front of these obstructions our iron clads will meet a very severe, concentrated fire from Forts Johnson and Ripley, and a series of one and two gun batteries which line the shore in front of Mount Pleasant and on the James Island side. Formidable as these difficulties are, there is no doubt entertained that they will be finally overcome by the sagacity and the determination of the Army and Navy.

☞ A specimen of salt manufactured in the salt basin about 50 miles west of Nebraska City, has been tested, and the St. Joseph (Mo.) News says it is equal to Turk Island salt. Some men of capital have taken hold of the matter, and suitable buildings and machinery are now being erected to enter into its manufacture largely, so much so as to be able to supply that entire section.

☞ An order to protect the freedmen from swindlers has been issued by Gen. Saxton. He affixes to all cotton raised in the Department of the South a lien in favor of the laborers upon the cotton crop, to the full extent of the wages due them. This lien will follow the cotton, even into the hands of bona fide purchasers, so long as it remains in the department; and no one can ship cotton out of the Department without leave from headquarters.

"No Sympathy for Our Soldiers!"

Judging from letters occasionally received from members of the rank and file of our armies, a feeling has been engendered of late in the minds of some of our soldiers in the South and Southwest, and other military departments, that there is a want of sympathy for them at the North. We have no evidence that this feeling is general among our soldiers, and we do not know from what source any of them have derived this idea; but we do know that nothing can be more false than the imputation that our people at home; or any considerable part of them; are indifferent to the privations, the sufferings and the noble deeds of those who are risking their health and their lives in defence of the Constitution, the Union and the Laws.

Our soldiers should remember that most of those who remain at home have duties to perform, not it is true as immediately hazardous as the business of the soldier, but duties in one sense as essential to the life of the nation as his. There must be men enough outside of our armies to supply the agricultural, manufacturing, mechanical and commercial neces. sities of the country, or our soldiers will soon find that "greenbacks" will not purchase a yard of cloth or a pound of bread. "Greenbacks" simply represent the credit of the nation, and that credit depends upon the constant daily supply produced and regularly furnished by the great branches of industry we have named. To furnish this supply demands the incessant labor and toil of more men than will be required; we trust, to subdue the rebellion. But the constant drain upon the working population especially in the agricultural regions of the west to fill our armies, compel those at home to work unseasonable hours and thus encounter unusual exposure to secure the products of their industry; and this additional labor and exposure necessarily thrown upon a decreased working population will as certainly impair the health and physical energies of our people if long continued, as exposure in the camp or on the field.

While our soldiers are fighting for the Union abroad, they may rest assured that the mass of our people are working for the Union at home, newspaper articles and malignant private insinuations to the contrary notwithstanding. If our soldiers are naked and starving they cannot fight; and they are not naked and starving because the laboring men at home are hard at work to supply the necessary food and clothing. More than this, they work to support the indigent wives and children of our soldiers while absent, and to send stores of choice things to the sick and wounded in the military hospitals; and finally they work to pay the heavy taxes necessarily imposed to sustain the credit of our State and National Governments.

No sympathy for our soldiers! What a base falsehood. Why almost every family at home has some dear friends or relatives in the ranks of our Federal armies, and individual sympathy for those constitutes a mass of national sympathy which is wide-spread and pervades almost every household at the north.

We fear attempts have been made to prejudice our soldiers against some of their best friends at home for purposes entirely beyond the patriotic and manly obligations resting upon every true-hearted citizen. If so, we can assure them that in Michigan with scarcely an exception but one sentiment prevails, and that sentiment is a deep and abiding sympathy for our gallant soldiers. We feel for them in adversity and we rejoice with them in prosperity, for they at least are fighting to preserve the Constitution, the Union and the Laws, and we need no prophetic inspiration, no hand-writing on the wall, to warn us that when these are lost we shall have nothing left worth fighting for; nothing as a nation worth living for.

☞ It becomes a question what disposition the commanders of the rebel pirate ships make of all their plunder.—Not long since the crew of the Florida arrived in Liverpool in a state of great destitution. They had not been paid any wages for eighteen months. They had orders on Messrs. Fraser & Co., rebel agents at Liverpool, but this house repudiated the claim. Taken altogether this is a singular development. We cannot say that our sympathies in any way flow out toward the defrauded crew.

ELECTIONS.—Brough is probably elected Governor of Ohio, by a large majority. Gov. Curtin is elected in Pennsylvania.

From the Army.

In the Field, Georgia,
Sept. 18, 1863.

DEAR FATHER:—I joined the main army day before yesterday. I am now in Thomas's corps. We have the center.—Our relative numbers we would not tell if we knew. One thing we expect, yes, two things. A great battle and a whipping for Bragg if he does not run. If he does we will chase him. We have heard some heavy firing to-day. Many of the enemy are deserting and going home. I met 450 mostly Tennesseans, bound homeward. They say they have found their rights and are willing to go home and behave themselves if Uncle Sam will let them. Of course I saw many fine things in crossing the Cumberland mountains. I crossed the point of Lookout mountain in fair view of the Rebel Stronghold, Chattanooga. We are now south of Chattanooga some 15 miles. C. is a very strong place, and can easily be defended against a very superior force.—Our men are now striking tents preparing to go somewhere. C. H. S.

* * * * * *

Sept. 25, 1863.

As I said we were preparing to go somewhere, and sure enough we did. I wrote the above on Friday night; that night we marched with scarcely a moment's halt, and came up with the enemy about 8 o'clock in the morning. Our regiment was sent in first, and I was detailed to go into the field with the regiment and take care of and bring off the wounded. I followed close behind the regiment, and was under fire nearly all day, but came off without a scratch.

Shells burst and bullets flew all around me but did not touch me. Our Regiment suffered severely. Our loss is 170 killed, wounded and missing, out of about 400. Our boys stood up bravely and never gave an inch till their 60 rounds were all exhausted, then they fell back in good order, and refilled their cartridge boxes, when they pitched in again. Our division of three brigades fought two whole corps, I am told, for 6 hours and held their ground.

I saw warm work at one time. The 4th Mich. Battery was taken by the enemy and our brigade retook it after a hot contest. The rebel prisoners say our division are perfect devils. Of course they speak from experience. The second day of the fight I was detailed to assist in the hospitals. We had just gone fairly to work when the shells came burst over our heads with a vengeance, and forced us to retire. We fell back three miles to Rossville, and after a little found that our whole army was falling back on Chattanooga. We were ordered to do the same. The whole army is now entrenched around C. I have been out on the field two days since coming here, but am now again detailed in the general field Hospital.

Our boys are still shelling the rebs, and awaiting an attack. There may still be a bigger battle down here. They say the fight of Saturday and Sunday was the greatest of the war. I am sure it was warm enough where I was. I expected I might get popped but did not.—Everything is bustle and confusion. It makes me think of the time we had last fall after the battle of Perryville. Our number of wounded is very large, and we surgeons have our hands full I assure you. I have charge of two large tents, about 60 men wounded in every possible way. But I must close.

Yours, C. H. S.

The News.

The position of affairs in Rosecrans' army is but little changed. The rebels have removed their artillery from Lookout Mountain, with the evident intention of concentrating it on Mission Ridge. On the 5th instant they threw 150 shells at our forces, with no result, however, beyond wounding three men and killing one horse. We have several lines of intrenchments, and extensive earthworks are still progressing. The plan of the enemy appears to be not to make an attack in front, but to compel us to evacuate Chattanooga by holding us in our present position, annoying us with artillery, and breaking our communications by cavalry raids. Our entire army is to be consolidated into 6 divisions, to form the 4th and 14th corps, with Generals Thomas and Granger as commands. With the assistance of reinforcements already arrived, movements will soon be made which it is hoped will drive the enemy from our front. Our entire casualties in the late battles will not be less than 15,000.

The Rebels under Bragg appear to have had a fight among themselves last Monday, in which 500 or 600 of them were killed. Accounts differ as to the cause of the difficulty; but there is little doubt that such an engagement occurred, as the line of battle and the flash of guns were distinctly seen.

Discredited reports prevail in Louisville that a large rebel cavalry force is in the vicinity of Tompkinsville.

☞ The Russian Naval officers accept with pleasure the kind invitation of the Bostonians to visit their city, and will consider it about a fortnight unless ordered elsewhere.

An Appeal.

Received of Mr. Van Ormer who attended the door at the last Concert, $7,15, and it was duly handed over to the Ladies who meet every Tuesday at the house of Mr. Murray for the purpose of making up garments for the Soldiers, and I will assure the people that all the money there is handed in will be used to the best possible advantage; and I wish it was ten times as much.

I hope those who are staying here and enjoying the comforts, yea luxuries of home and the society of their families, will think of the brave men who have left the dear ones and gone forth, many of them never to return again; those that have gone will endure many hardships, and greater privations than any of you who stay at home can ever know. Give of your substance more liberally than you have yet done and I can assure you that it will not go into the bank and be kept from the needy soldier for six months, but used judiciously and a report made out accordingly.

To those who are ever ready when called upon to give, I would say, continue on in the good work, for it is more blessed to give than to receive, and your donations will help to strengthen many a feeble and mutilated soldier boy, who though far from all that is dear to him, yet has a heart to bless the donor.

To those who have no heart to give but make the excuse that the Doctors and Nurses get all and the soldiers nothing that is sent, I would say; send of your abundance for both. If you think I am too hard, go try it for a month in a hospital where you will find in the same room cases of typhoid fevers, erysipelas, and men with wounds so bad as to scent the air of the room they lie in; I imagine that in a few days you would desire some of the delicacies to tempt your appetite which you are now afraid the nurse will get and most surely deserve, and I think you would write to your friends to send to you first and then to the sick soldiers. At any rate I think it would make you more sympathizing with both soldiers and nurses, and possibly more generous.

This excuse for not sending things to the soldiers you will find is usually confined to those who have no friends, husbands or sons in the ranks, nor patriotism enough to take them there, but money enough to keep them all snug and safe at home; yet at the same time talk patriotism and generosity. How well I remember the speeches made a little over two years ago by some of the republicans, (I was one then,) strong Union men if an office can be gained by it, urging men to come forward and enlist—saying have no fears for your families, they shall be taken care of—yes, I will divide the last crust with them, they shall not suffer nor want. Will any one family come forward and tell us how much they have received from those men? Yet we claim to be both honest and patriotic and honor the brave boys who have gone to protect us and our flag.

They do not help the families, neither do I hear of their giving a cent to aid those very men when they get sick who they urged to enlist. Is this fair?

C. M. BISSELL.

TECUMSEH, Oct. 14.

Union Prisoners.

A number of Union prisoners lately paroled by the authorities at Richmond have reached Boston, our Government having granted them a brief opportunity to visit their friends at home with a view of recruiting their health, much impaired by the privations and sufferings experienced while in the hands of the rebel authorities. From their statement it appears that those in command at Richmond are not in a condition to provide properly for the Union prisoners now in their hands. Their means are scanty, and day by day the supply lessens, as the owners of produce will not exchange it for the miserable currency in circulation there, except at a rate which is fast making paupers of three-fourths of the population, who look forward with a shudder to the approach of winter, now close at hand. Of course our soldiers held as prisoners in such a place must suffer terribly. According to one informant, not much over a mouthful of meat per day for each man was distributed, with a scant supply of other food of such a description that the beggars of the North would reject it with scorn. These poor soldiers had their blankets takets taken away from them by the Confederate officers. They were then ordered to camp upon the open field, without a particle of covering at night, exposed to the chilling dews of this season of the year. Many of them walked the ground to and fro all night to keep a little warmth in their bodies, but a number had succumbed, five or six dying daily, whilst others had diseases fastened upon them from which they will never recover.—Boston Traveller.

☞ The total shipments of iron ore from Marquette for this season, up to Oct. 1st was 165,000 tons—and this is but a mere drop of the aggregate wealth of the Lake Superior region.

War Items.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The Boston Herald has a letter from the fleet off Charleston, Oct. 3d, which says: 'Last evening Gen. Gillmore sent one of his Greek fire shells into Charleston, which set fire to some buildings. The fire burned for over two hours. There will be warm work here before this reaches you, if nothing interferes in the meantime.' The following from the correspondent of the Baltimore American, written from Charleston harbor on the 5th inst., is of interest: There are indications now that the present inactivity will not be of many days continuance. Gilmore has forced his works formed with remarkable rapidity, considering their magnitude and the natural and artificial obstructions in his way. The troops have worked hard, nearly every regiment on the island taking its turn every other day in the trenches for fatigue duty. All this has, however, been cheerfully borne, the soldiers having unlimited confidence in Gen. Gillmore.

The navy is also preparing for the renewal of the attack. Within the last twenty-four hours there have been important arrivals here of means for the removal of the obstructions, which we hope to see successfully applied. The Monitors now here are the Lehigh, Nahant, Weehauken, Montauk and Catskill.

The 19th Indiana, 2d, 6th and 7th Wisconsin, and 24th Michigan regiments, composing the 1st Brigade, 1st Division, 1st Corps of the Army of the Potomac, known as the Iron Brigade, are to go home within twenty days, to recruit up to their maximum numbers, furlongs to be given at the discretion of the Government, to expedite matters. Other regiments will by turn be allowed similar privileges. The idea of filling ranks by this process, is credited to Gov. Morton, of Indiana.

BOSTON, Oct. 12.—A letter received from Beaufort, says: 'The pirate Sumter was not destroyed in Charleston harbor, but is now armed and awaiting a chance to run the blockade. There are eight United States steamers blockading that port.'

There have been 5,062 desertions from the whole army during the last two months. This is a decrease.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 12.—It appears from a telegram received to-day, dated 'Chattanooga, Oct. 11th,' that Gen. Rosecrans' communications are complete, his forces in position, the raiders dispersed, and the enemy in front inactive. Our troops are represented to be in good physical condition and fine spirits.

NEW YORK, Oct. 12.—The Washington correspondent of the Commercial states, under date of Sunday, the 11th, 'that the city was somewhat startled at the authentic news from the Rapidan that the rebel army had abandoned its late position on the south bank of that stream, and that our cavalry had encountered one of its retreating columns. This intelligence was rendered exciting by the wide-spread rumor, founded merely on inference doubtless, that the retrogade movement of Lee simply meant there sumption of the offensive by a flank movement around through the inside of the Rappahannock, thus placing the rebel forces between Meade and Washington, after the manner in which Stonewall Jackson flanked Pope on the same ground. If these really be the rebel plans, they have been fairly thwarted. Gen. Meade is not the man to be caught in so old a trap.—Those who came from the army lately seem to agree in the impression that the retreat is to draw the rebel army closer to the railroad at Gordonsville, where the rebels have an extensive depot of supplies where a force will be left and the remainder of the army sent to the defenses of Richmond. All military men concur in believing that the rebels do not intend any campaign in Virginia this autumn.'

The Tribune's Knoxville special says that Burnside advanced toward Juenville Thursday and Friday. He overtook the rebel force under Jackson and Williams on Saturday at Blue Springs. The rebels occupy the strong position, and number at least 6,000. Our cavalry held the advance until 3 P. M., when the first division charged the rebels. The fighting was sharp and destructive to our men. The rebels had only one battery, which was driven from the field at sundown, but darkness rendered pursuit impossible. The rebels are now retreating on the Greenville road. We lost 60 killed and wounded. Everything looks encouraging.

Gen. Hooker has gone West with rare self forgetfulness, agreeing to undertake any work at what the Government may set him, just at the time when he begins in the East to receive his due credit for outgeneralling Lee in Pennsylvania.—Lee's official report, on all hands, is regarded as clearly establishing Hooker's claim to nearly all the credit of Gettysburg, and as fully admitting and confirming the splendid manner in which Hooker handled his army and checked Lee at every point.

In addition to muskets in the hands of our armies, the Government has 700,000 stored in arsenals, of which 500,000 are effective weapons.

State Items.

The Hillsdale County Fair had a damper in the shape of a rain storm during the whole of the second day, but the third day witnessed a large crowd of people and some interesting trials of horse flesh. The Jackson County Fair was very creditable, the receipts being $1300, or more than double those of last year. The address by F. W. Shearman is to be published in the County papers.

The splendid race-horse "Magna Charta," which was announced as having died at our State Fair, and then as being prepared to trot at the Illinois State Fair on the 29th ult., was at his stable at Coldwater, "sound as a nut," this week, and prepared to go in for the citizens' purse of $50, at the Branch County Fair, on Friday.

The apple trade is quite brisk at Monroe, nearly 1000 barrels having been packed for Cincinnati market, by S. Harvey.—The ruling prices are 75 cents to $1 per barrel.

A constant flow of oil has been reached at the Jackson salt well, at the depth of 1430 feet, and considerable excitement exists in consequence of this discovery.—The work is progressing finely.

The Jackson Patriot has been sold by T. F. Boughton, its editor and publisher for six years past, to Eben Chaplin and John W. Higgs, from New York city.—The latter promise to stick to the landmarks of the Democratic party, and we may therefore expect that they will sustain the Administration in crushing the rebellion and punishing traitors; for that is genuine Democratic policy of the Jackson stamp.

Engineers are looking over the route of the proposed Railroad from Battle Creek to Hastings.—The Waldron House, at Hillsdale, has now been open two weeks and is receiving fair patronage under the management of Mr. Robinson.—The Messrs. Van Riper, of Lagrange, Jackson county, are producing at their woolen mills some excellent cassimers, satinets, jeans, flannels, blankets, stocking yarn, &c. Many business men at Jackson are donning suits manufactured from the Van Ripers' cloth, regarding it as superior to Eastern goods.

The citizens of Jonesville have settled their School-house question by voting to raise $10,000 for a central building, and $2,000 for two "ward" or primary houses; all to be of brick.—The citizens of Bedford, Calhoun county, have secured a beautiful site for a school house just south of the village, and raised $600 to build it.

The Catholic Church pic nic at Port Huron, on the 30th ult., in which many Detroit people participated, was attended by some $3,000 or more, and the net profits foot up about $500.

At the Jackson County Agricultural Fair, one verdant young man from the country flourished $250 before the crowd. Some sharper got his eye on the money, and before night the greenhorn was plucked of it, and has never got a trace of the cash or the pickpocket.

The average incomes of 18,000,000 of the British people are less than one-third what it costs them to maintain a convicted felon, and the felon is better fed, clothed and housed than 10,000,000 of the honest laboring population.

Five "providential" deaths have recently occurred at Hopkinton N. H., in families where terrible threatenings were made if the conscriptions should be enforced. One was killed by the falling of a tree, one by drowning, one by sudden disease, and others by more ordinary complaints. Three were liable to conscription. They have suddenly been called where there is no exemption.

The mother of a little fellow who was about taking a ride to the Hanford horse cars, asked him as he scrambled in, "Why aren't you going to kiss your mother before you go?" The little rogue was in such a hurry that he couldn't stop, and hastily called out, "Conductor, won't you kiss mother for me?"

The state of society in Paris at this moment is said to be bad beyond description. Pleasure, folly, extravagance, recklessness and dissipation are unrestrained. A journal called 'Hamelin,' is largely circulated, and yet the grossness of its contents will not bear explanation in English.

The Circuit Court of Peoria recently granted two divorces. In one instance the petitioner had a marriage license in his pocket before the decree was granted, and immediately upon obtaining it was married again, sleeping the same night in the arms of another bride. It was one of those cases where a man was not "off with the old love before he was on with the new."

Business cards of five lines, or less, inserted at $3.50 per year.

☞ Work neatly executed at this office. Charges reasonable.

Laws of Newspapers.

1. Courts have settled the following points:
2. Subscribers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue subscription.
3. If subscribers order the discontinuance of their papers, the publishers may continue to send them until that is due be paid.
4. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their papers from the office which they are directed, they are held responsible till they have settled their bill and ordered their papers discontinued.
5. If subscribers move to other places, without informing the publisher, and the paper is sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.
6. Refusing to take a paper from the office, or removing and leaving it unpaid for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.
7. A postmaster neglecting to inform the publisher when a paper is not taken from the office makes himself liable for the subscription price.

Everybody Read This,

If there are any of our subscribers, or readers, who wish to purchase a Sewing Machine, by paying one half cash and the other half in trade of some kind that we can use in business, we can accommodate them with either of two of Finkle & Lyon's—one $55 the other $50. One of Weed's Moddle Machines, from $50 to $85. One Empire Shuttle Machine, from $50 to $85. One of Wilcox & Gibbs, $40. The above machines are all warranted.

SPEAKERS WILL BE IN ATTENDANCE.

COME ONE, COME ALL.

☞ We are now doing all kinds of plain and fancy job work in as fine style and at as low prices as the same can be had at any office in the west. Bring your work to the Herald Office if you want it done up in the latest style.

National Thanksgiving.

President Lincoln has issued a proclamation which will be found in another column, setting apart Thursday, the 26th of November, as a day of National thanksgiving, praise and prayer to God.

☞ It is with pleasure we note from week to week the numerous improvements taking place in our midst. Among our enterprising citizens who blow their horn in the Herald will be found Curtis & McCowen. They are bound to sell Hardware, Cutlery, Nails, Glass, &c., cheap, or get a "substitute" that will; true as you live, for Mr. Parsons says so. Those wishing goods in their line, are requested to call upon them before purchasing elsewhere. See their advertisement.

☞ Why will ye go ill clad or naked while George Heesen keeps such a large stock of Clothing, which he will sell you at a very low price. He stock comprises Coats, Pants, and Vests of the latest styles. He also keeps cloths of all description for men and boys wear, Hats and Caps, Collars, Shirts, Gloves Hosiery, Traveling Bags, &c. See his advertisement and then give him a call.

☞ C. S. Patterson has just received a large and splendid assortment of Wall Paper. He has also just received a stock of G. P. Reed & Co.'s Domestic Dyes, which will color cloth to any desired color and they are warranted fast.

DIED

In this village, September 30th, of Typhoid fever, Willie H. Snell, aged 13 years.

In this village, on the 4th inst., of Quick Consumption, John C. Lester, aged 30 years. The deceased was formerly on employee of the M. S. & N. I. R. R. at Sturgis, where he faithfully performed the duties assigned him, with a perseverance and skill of a thorough business man, for a number of years. He left the field of labors at Sturgis and came to live among us in the year 1856. Since which time he has been engaged in the Produce House formerly of U. C. Satterthwaite and Wm. Hayden, where he has been respected for the same good qualities as heretofore. He leaves a wife and one child to mourn his loss.

War Meeting.

At last Tuesday evening a number of our citizens met in E. B. Wood's Law Office, to make necessary arrangements to raise money to pay bounty to volunteers and thus avoid the draft. The meeting was called to order, Wm. Hayden was chosen chairman and E. B. Wood Secretary. A motion was made and carried to appoint A. T. Ketcham, C. S. Patterson and P. W. Adams were appointed committee to solicit subscriptions. A. Anderson, Wm. Hayden and E. B. Wood were chosen committee to receive subscriptions. Each committee to report at the adjourned meeting to be held at Union Hall, Friday Evening, Oct. 16, 1863.

11th Cavalry.

Everybody and his brother knows Jim. E. Merritt of Clinton. Well, Jim is raising a company for the 11th Cavalry, and now is the time to enlist, and our word for it, those that do will never have cause to complain about their captain. The Lieutenants, J. Gilsly, 1st, and M. Conklin 2nd, are good fellows and without doubt will make good and brave officers.

Good Goods.

A. Hood & Co. are now receiving piles of New Goods, which they are selling at breakdown prices. They have a very large stock of Ready Made Clothing, Boots & Shoes, Hats & Caps, and in fact most everything. Quick Sales and Small Profits is their motto and they do sell cheap. Give them a call.

Watches and Jewelry.

Purchasers of Watches, Jewelry, Gold and Silver ware Plated Ware, Spoons, Forks, and all other articles usually kept at a first-class jewelry establishment, seldom fail to call at M. S. Smith's, No. 55 Woodward avenue, Detroit. Mr. Smith is well known to the people of the State to be an honorable, high-minded dealer. His splendid store—which is really a palace, ornamented from floor to ceiling with glittering wares, manufactured from the precious metals—is a centre of attraction, and there are few persons that visit it who are not tempted to exchange their perishable "greenbacks" for those more substantial and valuable gold and silver fabrics which are so desirable as family keepsakes. A leading feature in Mr. Smith's trade is his agency for selling the celebrated American Watches, the only establishment in Detroit, we understand, where these very superior time-keepers are exclusively sold. They are furnished in gold and silver cases, and of various styles and sizes, suited to the wants of gentlemen or ladies. These valuable watches are ascertained, upon trial, to be the most accurate and durable timepieces ever offered for sale in this country, and they are fast supplanting those of foreign manufacture. There are few business men in Detuit who have manifested greater enterprise and foresight, or who have, by a long course of honorable dealing, secured a greater measure of public confidence, than Mr. Smith, and we can cheerfully recommend him to the patronage of all those having occasion to purchase goods in his line of business.

☞ The following is a statement of the number of men to be raised by draft in this County:

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS

Rohack's Stomach Bitters.

It has long been the aim of the physicians to find a combination of medicines having the requisite stimulating and tonic properties to relieve and cure the common complaints of Billiousness, Liver disorders, Languor, Headache, Lowness of Spirits, Indigestion, Jaundice, Fever and Ague, &c., which are the diseases incident to this climate. The remedy has been discovered by Dr. Rohack, and in the above complaints, and there is but one voice from the people, and that is in favor of these truly wonderful Stomach Bitters. We advise all who are afflicted and need an agreeable tonic for the troubles above indicated, to commence at once using the Bitters. See advertisement.

Song of a Spartan Mother.

Away with all singing! away with all tears!
My boy shall behold, not my grief, but my pride;
Can I taint his young manhood with womanish fears,
When the flag of his country is scorned and defy'd?
I will arm him, and bless him, and send him away,
Tho' my heart breaks with grief when he goes from my sight;
I will bid him not falter, nor blanch in the fray,
But fight to the death for the Truth and the Right.

I must teach my brave lad what it is to be true,
To the red and the white and the stars in the blue.

'Tis to love the mild rule of the land of his birth,
To succor the weak in the thrall of the strong;
To honor all manhood, to cherish all worth,
To further the right, and to baffle the wrong.
As the nations throng onward towards Liberty's light,
From the gloom of misrule—'tis to march in the van,
With God as a leader, and Justice and Right
Perfecting his purpose—ennobling the man.
'Tis a sign and a symbol—It is well to be true
To a cause which is leagued with the red, white and blue.

'Tis a Text and a Faith, on the land and on the sea,
A Gospel in peace—Inspiration in war;
A nation's Evangel—a Creed to the free;
The Scripture of Liberty, Order and Law.
Shall apostates revile what our sires adored,
And the steels of our vengeance lie reddening in rust?
Shall apostles of bondage, of handcuffs and swords,
Trail the pride of the faithful, dishonored in dust?
No, never, while mothers teach sons to be true
To that banner of banners, the red, white and blue.

He's my all! he's my treasure! but take him, dear Lord,
And add him, a jewel, to Liberty's crown;
One hero the more to your patriot band;
The widow's last mite to the nation's renown;
For I'll arm him, and bless him, and bid him go forth
To take his proud stand in the front of the wars,
And add his own blade to the swords of the North
Unsheathed for triumph of Truth and the laws;
For his brave heart has learned what it means to be true
To the stripes and the stars in the union of blue.

— A man carrying a cradle, was asked by a pretty miss, rather archly, if that was not one of the fruits of matrimony? "Oh, no, my little charmer," said he, "this is only the fruit basket."

— A London Medical Journal states the case of a man who lived a whole year after his back-bone was broken. We mention this as a consolation and encouragement to the Southern Confederacy.

— "Why don't you give us a little Greek and Latin occasionally? asked a country deacon of a new minister.—"Why, do you understand those languages?" "No, but we pay for the best, and we ought to have it."

— Before the draft took place it was said by disloyal newspapers that all the Democrats had gone to the war. Since the draft took place it is said by disloyal newspapers that none but the Democrats were drafted!

— "O, mother! do send for the doctor!" said a little boy of three years.—"What for, my dear?" "Why there's a gentleman in the parlor who says he'll die if Jane don't have him—and Jane says she won't!"

— Mrs. Partington says the doctor tells her she has two buckles on her lungs, and she really believes it to be true, for she feels the prongs every breath she draws.

— It is a vain thing for you to stick your finger in the water, and pulling it out, look for a hole; It is equally vain to suppose that, however large a space you occupy, the world will miss you when you die.

— 'Alas! I am no more,' as the girl said when she got married

ORANGE JUDD, of the "American Agriculturalist," says of the

UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER

"A child can readily wring out a tubfull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large per centage on its cost. We think the machine much more than PAYS FOR ITSELF EVERY YEAR in the saving of garments. There are several kinds, nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs, otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly FOUR YEARS CONSTANT USE."

Every Wringer with Cog Wheels is Warranted in every particular.

NO WRINGER CAN BE DURABLE WITHOUT COG-WHEELS.

A good CANVASSER wanted in every town.

☞ On receipt of the price from the places where no one is selling, we will send the Wringer free of expense.

THE GREAT

AMERICAN TEA COMPANY,

51 Vesey Street New York;

Since its organization, has created a new era in the history of

Wholesaling Tea in this Co.

They have introduced their selections of Teas and are selling them not over

TWO CENTS (24 Cents) per pound above COST,

Never deviating from the ONE Price asked.

Another peculirity of the Company is that their Tea Taster not only devotes his time to the selection of their TEAS as to quality, value, and particular styles for particular localities of country, but he helps the TEA buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this, but points out to him the best bargains.

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all others.

If he is no judge of TEA, or the Market, of his time is valuable, he has all the benefits of a well organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.

This enables all tea buyers—no matter if they are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York merchants.

Parties can order Teas and will be served by us as well as though they came themselves, being sure to get original packages, true weights and tares: and the tea warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Company' Teas, which will be sent to all who order it comprising

Hyson, Young Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, Twankay and Skin.

Oolong, Souchong, Orange & Hyson Pekoe,

JAPAN TEA OF EVERY DISCRIPTION, colored and uncolored.

This list hae each kind of Tea divided into FOUR classes, namely: Cargo, high Cargo, Fine, Finest, that every one may understand from description and the prices annexed that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea Trade.

We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over two cents (02 Cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who have heretofore been paying Enormous Profits.

WILCOX & GIBBS,

SEWING MACHINE.

Price, with Hemmer and Feller, $40.

THE WILCOX & GIBBS' Sewing Machine is the best ...chine, without regard to price, for

Family Sewing,

Braiding,
Hemming,
Felling,
Tucking,
Cording,

It forms a flat even, and elastic seem, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances "to survive the wash-tub."

A patented device of great utility to learners, prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it.—Phila. Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder.—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines.—Pennsylvanian.

"This Machine, in the opinion of the committee, more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs', as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report.

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed, necessary to a good machine.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21 1860.

"After much wear and many washings the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer. London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others"—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experience in our own family."—Boston Traveller.

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well-merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette

"We esteem it the best machine for family use The stitch is unexceptionable."—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED"
COMPOUND

Fluid Extract Buchu

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the
BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATER OR CALCEROUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflammation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, OR CHILDREN.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEAKNESS

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot Hands,	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin,	Pallid Countenance,

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITZ, EPILEPTIC FITS,

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases."

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION,

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

Requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU inveriably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Female,

The Brave at Home.

The maid who binds her warrior's sash,
With smile that well her pain dissembles,
The while beneath her drooping lash
One starry tear drop hangs and trembles,
Though Heaven alone records the tear,
And Fame shall never know her story,
Her heart has shed a drop as dear
As e'er bedewed the field of glory.

The wife who girds her husband's sword,
'Mid little ones who weep or wonder,
And bravely speaks the cheering word,
What though her heart be rent asunder;
Doomed nightly in her dreams to hear
The bolts of death around him rattle,
Hath shed as sacred blood as e'er
Was poured upon the field of battle.

The mother who conceals her grief,
While to her breast her son she presses,
Then breathes a few brave words and brief,
Kissing the patriot brow she blesses;
With no one but her secret God
To know the pain that weighs upon her,
She sheds holy blood as e'er the sod
Received on Freedom's field of honor.

My First Temptation.

At an early age I lost my father, and as he left us with but little of this world's goods, it soon became necessary that I should find some employment. I was then thirteen years of age and not very strong, but yet with a will to do anything that could be found for me to do.—At length my mother made arrangements with a carpenter by the name of Morris, and I was taken into the shop as an apprentice. With him I remained two years, but at the end of that time I became so worn down by the hard work imposed upon me, that my mother resolved that I should remain there no longer. My sister Lucy who was two years older than myself had long detected my failing strength, and it was mainly through her efforts that I was removed from the place, for I should never have complained.

I was now fifteen—tall, slim and pale, and I knew that I could not stand any sort of work which taxed my physical strength to any great extent. But fortune favored me. A Mr. Joseph Evered who kept a dry good store near by, was in want of a salesman, and through my sister's influence I obtained the place.—Mr. Evered had a daughter Lucy just about my own age who was very intimate with Lucy, and it was by her intercessions with her father that Lucy gained her point.

I was duly installed into my place and I was soon happy and contented, for my employer was kind, and an intimacy soon sprung up between myself and Julia which afforded me a purer bliss than I had ever before anticipated. Thus matters passed on for a year, and at the end of that time my health was restored, and I had so far gained upon the confidence of Mr. Evered that he now trusted me with some of his most particular business. Only one thing troubled me. I was not receiving such wages as I fancied my services entitled me to. In fact I was in debt. I had purchased a suit of clothes of a tailor in the neighborhood and was owing for them. The tailor wanted his money and I had promised him he should have it at a certain time; but that time came and passed, and I could not pay him. He threatened and I promised anew. Oh, many times I wished that I had never bought these clothes. I could have got along without them, and I resolved that never again would I buy anything which I could not pay for on the spot. But that did not help this case.

One evening I was alone in the store. It was Saturday evening, and that day had been a busy one. We had sold a great quantity of goods and the money drawer was well filled. Slowly a demon arose before me and began to advise me. He pointed to the money-drawer and whispered: "There are the means for paying your debt!" I knew that Mr. Evered had no knowledge of the amount of money there, for he knew not how much I had sold. I could take even fifty dollars and he might never miss it, for I had sold a great quantity of stuff which he had no account of. I had promised the tailor that he should have the money that very night, and I had planned to get Mr. Evered to advance me the necessary sum. I had not been spending money foolishly, but from my poor pittance I supported my mother, and that ate it all up.

For a long while I sat and looked upon that drawer, and all the while the tempter was persuading me. I knew that young clerks often did such things, and that sometimes necessity compelled them to do it, at least so I then thought. How could I meet my creditor again without the money? I could not and at length I resolved that I would not. I arose and went to the drawer. I opened it and saw the bank notes which had been fairly jammed in there. I counted out twenty dollars. My hand trembled and my heart beat quickly. I thrust the notes into my pocket and hastened back to my seat, and not long afterwards my employer entered.

"Well, Charles," he said, "I guess we'll shut up now."

I arose, and went out and put up the shutters, and when I came back I found Mr. Evered engaged in counting the money. As I approached him he eyed me with a sharp, searching look and I trembled like an aspen.

"What ails you? he asked.

"Nothing sir," I answered, trying to compose myself.

"But there must be something the matter," he resumed, "for you look as pale as a ghost."

"I am tired," I said.

"Well, well, you have worked hard today, and you may go. I'll attend to the rest

"With a desperate endeavor to compose myself I thanked him for his kindness, and then seized my hat and left the store. The fresh air revived me somewhat and I hurried on to the tailor's. I paid my bill and for a moment my heart was lighter; but it was only for a moment. When I reached the street again the thought of what I had done came upon me with an overwhelming force, and I was miserable. When I reached home I professed to be sick, and retired at once. But my mother sick and weak herself, came up to my bed and wanted to fix me some medicine. She gave me a simple preparation, drew up the clothes snug about me, and having kissed me, she said:

"Be careful Charles, for 'twould be painful indeed to have you sick. God keep and bless you. Good night.

Oh, how these words rung in my ears. What would my mother say—how would she feel—if she knew that her son was a thief? It was a long time before I could give the word shape and form, but it came at last. I could not keep it back. Thief! thief! rang in my soul till an agony was upon me so intense that all other conceptions of pain were as nothing.—The night passed away in sleepless, phantom making restlessness; and when the morning came I arose and walked out before my mother or sister was up. I did not return until breakfast was ready, and then I had so far overcome all outward signs of my distress that little remark was made upon it. But the worm was gnawing at my heart.

That forenoon I went with my sister to meeting, and as I entered the church I met the gaze of Mr. Evered. He watched me sharply, and I saw the marks of pain upon his face. After the service was over I saw him in conversation with the tailor. I noticed how earnestly they spoke, and once I saw the tailor point his finger towards me. I felt sure then that all was discovered!

"For mercy sake, Charles, what is the matter? cried Lucy, as she caught my arm.

"He's faint! he's faint! I heard a low tremulous voice say, and on turning saw Julia Evered. She was frightened, and that moment came the conviction that she loved me. But another thought came with it; and then I knew ere long she would despise me!

Sick and faint I hurried away, and to all the anxious inquiries of Lucy I only answered that I was not well. Oh, how miserable I felt, for I knew that my employer had detected the theft. His gaze at me in the church was proof enough; but his conversation with the tailor made it doubly sure That afternoon I dared not go to church, and my mother worried over me. If she would only let me alone I might have been less miserable; but she clung close to me and I had to lie to her—the first falsehood I ever spoke to that noble woman.

Another night of restless agony and then I came to that severest part of all. I must meet my employer! It was late when I descended to the kitchen; I found my mother as pale and deathly as death itself. For the moment I forgot my now pain and hastened to her side. She gazed up into my face with such a look as I hope I may never see again.

"Don't ask me any questions, Charles," she said, "but go at once to the store.—Mr. Evered wants you immediately."

I could not ask a question and I could not speak Without breakfast—without waiting to see Lucy—I started from the house. People whom I met gazed at me sharply, and once I heard the word thief pronounced. Oh, Evered had told the story of my crime! No, no, it was the tailor who had told it, for my employer never would have done it. Yet it was known. I stopped and suddenly the thought of flight occurred to me. Why had I not thought of it before? Why should I stay longer where shame, and shame only, could be mine? I turned to flee, and just then my sister came rushing after me with her hair floating wildly in the morning air, and her face pale as death.

"Oh, Charles," she uttered, "come with me at once! Come, come, our mother is dying!"

My sister seized my hand and by main force dragged me away. I reached my home I knew not how, for my reason had almost gone. Into the little bed room Lucy dragged me, and there lay my mother stark and cold. "Oh, Charles, you have killed her!" sobbed my sister as she threw herself upon the bed, "she could not stand your disgrace?"

One moment I gazed upon that cold, pale form and then a wild unearthly cry broke from my lips. I plunged madly forward upon the bed.

"Charles! Charles!" I started up I felt a heavy hand upon my shoulder, and again my name was called.

"What is the matter? Come, rouse up. For mercy sake, what ails you!"

It was Mr. Evered who spoke. I was still upon the stool behind the counter, but my head had fallen forward upon a pile of goods that lay heaped up before me. Instinctively I cast my eyes on the money drawer, and slowly the truth worked its way into my mind. A cold clammy sweat was on my brow, a pain in my limbs, and I trembled like an aspen.

"What ails you Charles?" Mr. Evered kindly asked.

"My soul—such a dream!" I involuntarily gasped.

"Well, well, if it's nothing more than that, I am glad. But come, I want to have a few words of conversation with you before you go."

I was fully aroused now. I looked at the money drawer though several times ere I could fully realize that I was safe. The tempter had come, but an angel had met and beaten him away. The doors and shutters were closed, and then my employer came and sat down by my side.

"Well, Charles," he commenced, "Julia has been telling me this afternoon that you wholly support your mother."

"Yes sir," I trembingly answered.—"My sister thus far has only been able to support herself, and the rest all comes on me."

"But how do you get along? Surely your salary here is not sufficient."

"It has been sufficient, sir, to find us in food and fuel. For—for clothing—I have

"Run in debt, eh?"

"Yes sir; but I will never do it again. I will go ragged, if need be, but I will not run in debt."

"Right—right, my boy! But we will fix that all right now. I have been thinking for some time of increasing your pay, and I will do so now—not only so, but I must put it back to where I first thought of it, and that was three months ago. Let's see."

He turned to the desk as he spoke, and made a few figures on a piece of paper

"Three dollars a week for thirteen weeks would be thirty-nine dollars," he said. Will that square you up?"

"Oh yes sir, and more, more too!"

"Then you shall have that, and hereafter you shall have that amount over, each quarter."

He said something more, about making me his head clerk at some time, but I did not fully understand him I received the money, paid the tailor, and when I had reached my home, I had become calm and happy. I told my mother and Lucy of my good fortune, and they wept for joy.

Yet I could not help shuddering fearfully whenever I thought of that terrible vision which came upon me while the temptation was with me. But—let me say it again—'twas an angel's vision.

Years have passed since that time.—Mr. Evered is an old man—my children are his grandchildren; and the store that was once his is now half mine. He has retired, and the other half of the extensive business belongs to Lucy's husband. My mother still lives, and thank God, can yet bless her son that he has never called one drop of sorrow to her life cup.

☞ Ill-made fortunes, like ill-made candles, are apt to smother their own splendor in their own grease.

It's What You Spend.

"It's what thee'll spend, my son," said a sage old Quaker, "not what thee'll make, that will decide whether thee's to be rich or not." The advice was trite, for it was Franklin's in another shape:—"Take care of the pence, and the pounds will take care of themselves." But it cannot be too often repeated. Men are continually indulging in small expenses, saying that it's only a trifle, yet forgetting that the aggregate is serious, that even the sea shore is made up of petty grains of sand Ten cents a day even is thirty-six dollars and a half a year, and that is the interest of a capital of six hundred dollars. The man who saves ten cents a day only, is so much richer than he who does not, as if he owned a life estate in a house worth six hundred dollars; and if invested quarterly, does not take half that time.

But ten cents a day is child's play, some will exclaim. Well, then, John Jacob Astor used to say, that when a man who wishes to get rich has saved ten thousand dollars, he has won half the battle. Not that Astor thought that sum much, but he knew that in making such a sum a man acquired habits of prudent economy which would keep him advancing in wealth.

How many, however, spend ten thousand dollars in a few years, in extra expenses, and then on looking back, cannot tell "where the money went to." To save is to get rich. To squander even in small sums, is the first step toward the poor house.

ACTION.—The surest way alike to confirm and to strengthen any holy principle is to carry it into practice. The very element and breath of life is action. Every gift and endowment whatsoever, whether of body or soul, whether natural or spiritual, improves by exercise; while by guilty neglect it is enervated and impaired. Talents are increased by trading; and "to him that hath shall be given, and of him that hath not shall be taken even that which he seemeth to have." The sword undrawn rusts in the scabbard; the limb unused shrinks away; the fire smoulders into ashes; standing waters stagnate and breed corruption and malignant miasma; the languid blood of the sluggard, which no healthy impulse quickens, becomes thick and gross, creeps drowsily through his veins, and carries no strong pulsation of life to the limbs and to the brain. So the idle Christian is a feeble, drooping, pining Christian.

HOW IT HAPPENS.—One fruitful source of discontent and one bar of enjoyment in this world, is the practice of enjoyment in this world, is the practice of comparing one's life with the life of another; utterly ignoring the fact that every person has an inner as well as an outer life; or, in the old-fashioned words of the Bible "that every heart knoweth its own bitterness"—How often is the remark made by superficial observers, "How happy such and such persons must be! if I were only they?" when, ten to one, these very persons, oblivious of their wealth and position, are weary and heart sore with the din and battle of life.

☞ One of our compositors seemed for several days ailing, which led to some anxiety concerning him. He appeared dull and heavy, as if some trouble pressed his mind. "What is the matter?" we enquired, when attention was called to his case. He turned and fixing upon me his stony eye, asked: "Can you tell me why Eve was like a respectable firm in Broadway?" We humored him by saying we didn't know. "Because" said he, "she was Adam's express company!" The effort relieved him, and he turned with a more cheerful countenance to his stick and rule.

SOLVED AT LAST.—What is the reason that men never kiss each other, while the ladies waste a world of kisses on feminine faces," said the Captain to Gussie the other day, up at Normal.—Gussie cogitated a minute, and then answered: "Because the men have something better to kiss, and the women havn't." The Captain "saw it," immediately.

A Sectarian Prayer.

A young lady employed in teaching a district school, somewhere in Ohio, wished to open the school with prayer, and for the purpose asked the consent of the trustees. It was given readily, on one condition, that the prayer should not be "sectarian." The condition was accepted. After some weeks the school-mistress was summoned to attend the trustees. Complaint had been made that the daily prayer, contrary to the conditions, was "sectarian." The young lady had no knowledge of the charge. She was "clad in conscious innocence." She asked for the specifications. A grave trustee arose and stated that he was sorry to be obliged to testify that he himself had heard a "sectarian" prayer while "visiting the school."

"Well, what was it?"

"It was an Episcopal prayer. I have read it in the Episcopal prayer-book."

"Impossible," was the reply. "Repeat it; what was it?"

"Well, I can't say it all, but it was that prayer that begins, 'Our father which art in heaven!'"

The trustees concluded that the young lady was innocent, but the learned accuser never heard the last of the affair.

How a Yankee Escaped.

The Richmond Examiner of a late date, gives the following account of the way a Union soldier made his escape after being captured:

"On the night of the 6th instant, a Yankee prisoner named Myron Little, Company E, 6th Pennsylvania regiment, escaped from Belle Isle by swimming the river. On the 16th he was overhauled by some Confederate pickets at Bother's Dam, at the nine-mile lock on the canal, and was turned over to Obediah Gordon, a member of Robbins' (late Wren's) cavalry, to bring to Richmond. Obediah got along well enough with his prisoner until he arrived within a mile of Richmond. The Yankee had pretended to be a little lame, and was allowed to pick up a cudgel to help him along. It was night, and watching his opportunity, he turned the tables on Obediah compelled him to vacate his horse and arms, the bold Yankee mounting the one, and buckling on the other, bid the trembling Obediah 'Good night,' and put out."

Lost in a Cave.

While General Joe Reynolds' division was encamped near Nick O'Jack Cave—about ten miles from Bridgeport, on the Tennessee river—two of the boys of the 72d Indiana regiment who entered the cave on a "reconnoitering expedition," lost their way in the mazes of the cavern and were unable to get out. They remained in the cavern two days and two nights, and were finally rescued from a horrible death by means of a brass band playing through the long ventilated chambers.—The lost men hearing the music, were enabled with some difficulty to find their way to their companions. During their wanderings they had stumbled upon the bodies of two men, who were afterwards searched for and brought forth from what had proved to them a living tomb. They proved to be two rebel soldiers in uniform, one wearing that of a Lieutenant, the other a private's dress. They appeared to have been dead some time, yet their bodies were in a most complete state of preservation.

AMERICAN BUGGY IN LONDON.—Some Chicagoans are taking American rides in London, and a private letter to Chicago thus speaks of the curiosity their turn out excites:

"I met the American Secretary of Legation and Doctor Dyer, of Chicago recently, riding out in a light American top buggy, which the Secretary has lately imported from your side of the water.—It is a subject of as much curiosity as if it was a chariot of fire. Men and women stop and look at it with amazement, as nothing of the kind has been seen in these parts, for the British ride in heavy, two-wheeled vehicles, about as cumbersome as our express wagons. The boys stop and look at the strange aparition, and break out about as follows:—'My hyes, 'Arry, 'ere's a four wheeler for ye! Look it 'es wheels. Did you ever see such thing as this?'"

"LITTLE BOYS should be seen and not heard, "as young Precocity coolly remarked to his teacher when he couldn't say his lesson.

☞ Some young men, traveling on horseback among the White Mountains, became exceedingly thirsty and stopped for milk at a house by the roadside. They emptied every basin that was offered, and still wanted more. The woman of the house at length brought out an enormous bowl of milk, and set it down on the table saying.—"One would think, gentlemen you had never been weaned."

☞ The blessing man most desires to have fall in his lap is a woman.

☞ "My party, sir, will not lie in idleness," said a politician. "Very true, sir," retorted his opponent, "your party is never chargeable either with lying or idleness or with idleness in lying."

Proclamation.

By the President of the United States of America.

The year that is drawing towards its close has been filled with the blessings of fruitful fields and healthful skies. To these bounties which are so constally enjoyed that we are prone to forget the source from which they came, others have been added which are of so extraordinary a nature that they cannot fail to penetrate and soften even the heart which is habitually insensible to the ever watchful Providence of Almighty God. In the midst of a civil war of unequalled magnitude, which has sometimes seemed to invite and provoke the aggressions of foreign States, peace has been preserved with all nations, order has been maintained, the laws have been respected and obeyed, and harmony has prevailed everywhere except in the theatre of military conflict, while that theatre has been greatly contracted by the advancing armies and navies of the Union. The needful diversion of wealth and strength from the fields of peaceful industry to the National defense, have not been arrested the plow the shuttle or the ship. The axe has enlarged the borders of our settlements, and the mines, as well of iron and coal as the precious metals, have yielded even more abundantly than heretofore. Population has steadily increased, notwithstanding the waste that has been made in the camp, the seige, and the battle-field, and the country, rejoicing in the consciousness of augmented strength and vigor, is permitted to expect a continuance of years, with a large increase of freedom. No human counsel hath devised nor hath any mortal hand worked these great things. They are the gracious gifts of the Most High God who, while dealing with us in anger for our sins, hath nevertheless remembered mercy.

It has seemed to me fit and proper that they should be solemnly, reverently and greatfully acknowled as with one heart and voice by the whole American people. I do therefore invite my fellow citizens in every part of the United States, as also those who are at sea and those who are sojourning in foreign lands to set apart and observe the last Thursday of November next as a day of Thanksgiving and Prayer to our benefactor who dwelleth in the Heavens, and I recommend to them that while offering up the ascriptions justly due to him for such singular deliverances and blessings, they do also with umble penitence, for our National perverseness and disobedience, commend to his tender care all those who have become widows, orphans or sufferers in the lamentable civil strife in which we are unavoidably engaged and fervently implore the interposition of the Almighty Hand to heal the wounds of the nation, and to restore us as soon as may be consistent with the Divine purposes, to the full enjoyment of peace, harmony, tranquility and Union.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the City of Washington on this day, the third day of October, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and sixty-three and of the independence of the United States the eighty-eighth.

Signed, A. LINCOLN.

By the President:

WM. H. SEWARD, Secretary of State.

Proclamation.

The following proclamation has been issued by President Lincoln:

Whereas, The term of service of part of the volunteer forces of the United States will expire during the current year;

And Whereas, In addition to the men raised by the present draft, it is deemed expedient to call out 300,000 volunteers to serve for three years or the war, not however exceeding three years:

Now therefore, I Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States and Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy thereof, and of the militia of the several States when called into active service, do issue this proclamation, calling upon the Governors of the different States to have enlisted in the U. S. service for the various companies and regiments in the field, from their respective States their quotas of 300,000 men.

I further proclaim that all the volunteers that are called out and duly enlisted shall receive advance pay, premiums and bounties, as heretofore communicated to the Governors of States by the War Department and through the Provost Marshal General's office by special letters.

I further proclaim that all volunteers received under the call as well as all others not heretofore credited, shall be duly credited and deducted from the quotas established for the next draft.

I further proclaim that, if any State shall fail to raise the quotas assigned to it by the War Department under this call, then a draft for the deficiency in said quota shall be made in said State, or in the districts of said State, for their due proportion of said quota, and the said draft shall commence on the 5th day of January, 1863.

I further proclaim that nothing in this proclamation shall interfere with existing orders and with those which may be issued for the present draft in the States where it is now in progress, or where it has not been commenced. The quota of the States and districts will be assigned by the War Department through the Quartermaster General's office due regard being had for the men heretofore furnished, whether by volunteering or drafting, and the recruiting will be conducted in accordance with such instructions as have been or may be issued by that department.

In issuing this proclamation I address myself not only to the Governors of the several States but also to the good and loyal people thereof, invoking them to lend their cheerful, willing and effective aid to the measures thus adopted with a view to reinforcing our victorious armies now in the field, and bring our military operations to a prosperous end, thus closing forever the fountains of a seditious and civil war. In witness whereof &c.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

NEW YORK, Oct. 24.—A Washington letter to the post, says dispatches received here give reason to believe that the quiet at Charleston is soon to be broken. Col. J. R. Hawley, 78th Connecticut, is in town to-day, fresh from Morris Island, where he has been acting as Brigadier General in place of Gen. Stevenson, who has been home on furlough. Young Cahlgren and Col. Hawley give favorable reports of the condition of affairs in the fleet and army off Charleston. Much interest is felt in the fleet about the rebel torpedos, and the strictest watch is kept, particularly at night, of the movements of anything that floats on the water. Our own boats are sometimes fired into by mistake, so careful are the iron-clads to keep off floating torpedos.

The steamer Massachusetts has arrived from Union, Fla. She left Charleston on Sunday evening, and says the seige was progressing favorbly. Gillmore's batteries were nearly ready to open on the city.

WASHINGTON, Oct., 25.—The enemies infantry crossed the Rappahannock this morning upon two pontoon bridges, near the Orange and Alexandria Rail Road bridge, driving back Gen Gregg's cavalry division, which lost heavily. They also had a short engagement with two brigades of our infantry, one belonging to the 2d, and the other to the 3d corps.

The enemy now occupy a line, the left of which rest near Beverly Ford, crossing the railroad near Boulton Station, and extended towards Stafford Court House.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn, Oct. 25.—The engagement of to-day was a gallant and hotly contested hand-to-hand affair of over four hours. The rebel force was estimated at 5,000. They lost in killed, wounded and prisoners, over 300.

Woolford recaptured his wagon train and some of his men, but lost his Grasshopper Battery.

Our losses in killed, wounded and missing, reach nearly 300.

Gen. Sanders advanced yesterday.—The rbbels made a stand four miles below Philadelphia, but fell back upon our approach. A running fight was kept up until after dark. No rebels were found east of Sweet Waters. Sanders lost but two killed.

Col Crawford, of the 1st Tennessee Artillery, has just returned from an expedition to distribute arms through Virginia and North Carolina, and recruit. He was successful in both. The people are rising everywhere.

Among the prisoners sent in by him is the infamous bushwhacker from Upper Cliuch, Moneyhue, whose murders and barbarities are horrible.

Maynard and Brownlow spoke, from 11 A. E. until 5 P. M., to an immense concourse of people gathered from 20 miles around. The ultra radicals were received with enthuiasm.

FORTRESS MONROE, Oct. 26.—A lady the wife of an officer in the Southern army, who recently arrived in Norfolk, says she came from Mobile, Alabama, and reports that city was threatened by the Federal troops, who were near enough, when she left; to watch the movements of the rebel garrison, and the inhabitants were beginning to think that the city would fall into our hands, as there were few available troops there, and they were resorting to deceptive measures to keep up the appearance of a larger force than they really had. Even the women dressed up in men's clothes, and paraded in the outskirts of the city as soldiers.

The reported insurrection of black in Hancock county seems to have been more serious than was at first supposed. Quite a large number of negroes are implicated. Their organization was complete and officers chosen, from that of Major General down to Corporals. The chief of the conspiracy is an artful ank intelligent fellow, who was well qualified to be leader of such a dangerous enterprise. He was Major General of the forces, and orocceded to Atlanta on business connected with the plot. The plan was laid to join Gen. Rosecrans when he arrived and capture Atlanta. To this they were put up by by some designing rascals from Lincolndom, who are now infesting the whole country. A number of the ringleaders have been arrested and iodged in Hancock jail, and with them the Major General, who was brought in irons from Atlanta. So says the Macon (Ga.) Confederacy.

The new Mexican Minister, Senor Romer, representing the Juarez government to-day officially advised the State Department of his arrival in Washington.

Correspondence.

OCTOBER 27, 1863.

"Republican" will find on re-reading the Appeal, that those that have given with such liberality are not censured in the least, but many of us do know that the charges made are so. In the speeches referred to, we heard men assert that the last dollar should be divided with the families if the men would volunteer, but we take that to mean, knowing the men, that all the rest of the dollars must remain at home undivided, and if they get to the last one it shall be divided as promised. "Some people have a quiet way of giving, not letting the right hand know what the left hand doeth;" now I think they must give on the homœpathy principle, or both hands would have to know.

Seven-tenths of the people feel that an injustice was done the brave boys that left us at that time. If "Republican" thinks that the republicans of Tecumseh are purer and better than those in other places, he has something yet to learn.—Though one myself I see much to condemn in certain individuals, for this War seems to develope the man more rapidly than anything else could; and we know that selfishness has shown itself in more cases than "Republican" knows about, even where fair promises were made to men and families; and when the men left the promises were forgotten. Cases can be given if necessary.

But now is the time to give more liberally than we have yet done; the soldiers are writing home from all quarters for stockings and flannels; and as the cold weather comes on they ought to be clothed in a style which will prevent rheumatism, neuralgia, and other diseases brought on by exposure to the night air and cold storms that they cannot escape from but must stand and bear, be it ever so severe. REPUBLICAN.

DRAFTED MEN IN BATTLE.—A correspondent of the Washington Chroniele, in giving an account of the fight at Bristow's Station, says:

"I am here compelled to say a word of truth for the conscripts. Gen. Webb, who had a large number in his division, speaks of them in wonder and admiration. They stood in their places and fought.—No more can be said of the bravest modern warrior. They did more. They cursed—but it was because they could not load and fire as rapidly as our veterans."

IMPORTANT ARREST OF RAILROAD CONDUCTORS.—Quite a sensation was created in this city yesterday, by the arrest of several conductors on the Lebanon Valley, and the Reading and Philadelphia Railroads, charged with having at several periods, when running their trains, embezzled large sums of money.—Other arrests were made at different points on the road, including baggage masters and conductors, who are all implicated in the same charge. It appears that the company have had in their employ a number of detectives who have been traveling on the different trains incognito, noting the number of passengers who were in the cars, the distance they traveled, &c., and from the returns made by these detective officers, when they were comnared with the returns made by the conductors themselves, the evidence of embezzlement is derived, and the arrests in question have been made.—Harrisburg Telegraph, Oct. 13.

HEAD QUARTERS. 7th M. V. I.
Fairfax Station, Oct. 17th 1863

EDITOR HERALD:—Sir. Quartermaster Sergeant, S. Brockway Anderson, and Commissary Sergeant, A. K. Zacharias of this regiment were taken prisoners by a party of guerrillas on the 15th inst., while falling back from the Rapidan with the baggage train of the 2d army corps. Mr. Anderson was a resident of your place, his family having removed a short time since to California. The boys were mounted on good horses, but were largely outnumbered by the attacking party, and being without arms, rendered escape impossible. We sympathize with them in their misfortune, and hope they may soon be released to join their companions in arms. Very Respectfully,

Lt. W. W. WADE,
Q. M, 7th M. V. I.

THE NATIONAL DEBT.—Our national debt amounts at present, to $1,222,750,000. This sum is far below that which some of our less hopeful citizens had anticipated as the result of a two years' struggle for national unity and the perpetuity of our free institutions. And it is among the most gratifying illustrations both of the wisdom of Mr. Chase's financial plans and of the amazing recuperative power of this country that, notwithstanding the vast increase of our national burdens, internal trade and external commerce are flourishing, so that public prosperity and private opulence are increasing among us, and the aggregate amount of the national wealth is greater now than before the war commenced.

☞ Bow to Destiney, he may some day return the compliment.

State News.

An effort is being made to establish a National Bank in Bay City. Thirty-five thousand dollars of the stock is already taken; fifty thousand dollars being necessary to its establishment.

A compromise has been effected between the journeymen cordwainers of Jackson and their employers, and the strike has subsided. Everything is now working smoothly.

A Mutual Fire Insurance Company, embracing the counties of Eaton and Barry, is being organized with a first rate prospect of success.

The taxes in Livingston county, as assessed by the Board of Supervisors, amount to $25,925 74. Of this amount $10,000 is to be raised to create a fund for the relief of soldiers' wives and to pay the amount heretofore borrowed for that object.

The Female Seminary at Monroe is now in a very flourishing condition, the number of young ladies in attendance being larger than ever. New rooms have been added to accommodate those taking music lessons, and a very beautiful harp, worth five hundred dollars has been purchased.

Last week a prisoner named Wilson confined in the jail in Marshall, was set to work in the yard belonging to the jail Refusing to work, he was put into irons from which he managed to free himself, and then ran away. The sheriff pursued and overtook him, accompanied by his wife a little east of the city. Returning they stopped at a house to get a drink, when the woman seized the opportunity and struck the officer a severe blow on the head with a dipper. This was followed by another blow on the head from a stone in the hands of the man, and a severe scuffle ensued, resulting in the twain being marched back to jail, where they are in close confinement. Several deep gashes and severe bruises were inflicted upon the head of the sheriff, and when he reached home he was covered with blood. For several days he was confined to the house but is now so as to be about.

Two more full companies were mustered into the Tenth Cavalry at Grand Rapids, on the 23d inst., one raised by Captain Stevenson, of Bay City, and the other by Capt. Regon, of Pontiac. The regiment now musters 1040 men and will be full as soon as all recruits enlisted are brought in.

Three hundred buildings have been erected in [illegible] City during the season just pas[illegible] New streets have been opened and graded, and many other improvements of a solid character inaugurated. Notwithstanding the all other drawbacks there has been a steady influx of inhabitants. The demand for dwellings in Ypsilanti is very great. Every house is occupied, and some by two, and even families.

A gross outrage was perpetrated on a soldier's widow named Mrs. Neal, in Walker, Kent county, a few days since. While absent at a neighbor's, her house was entered by a gang of disorderly persons, who piled a back room full of potatoes, apples, pork and flour; covered the tables in another room with articles of wearing apparel, cakes, pies, &c., and, after performing various other antics, made off.

A scallaway named Demont was examined on a charge of seduction at Ypsilanti a few days since, and held to appear at the Circuit Court. He compromised the matter, however, by volunteering and giving an order for one hundred dollars of his bounty and pay.

Miscellaneous Items.

The receipts of money paid by drafted men for commutation now amounts to $9,000,000, which it is expeated will be increased by $2,000,000 more. The whole of this sum is to be appropriated to recruiting under the new proclamation of the President.

Seventeen of the Shakers of New Lebanon, N. Y., have been drafted, DeWitt Clinton Brainard, the head of the Monnt Lebanon family, being one of the number. They will be examined on the 23d inst., and should they all be accepted they must either pay $5,100 or be advertised as deserters.

The patterns have been made and the preparations commenced at the Fort Pitt Foundry, Pittsburgh, for the casting of a gun which will have a bore of 20 inches. Its length will be 20 feet, and its greatest diameter at the breech five feet four inches. It will weigh fifty-seven tons.

A corps of 16 Paymasters arrived at New Orleans on the 10th inst., and at night, from a gunboat, the money for the payment of Grant's army was safely landed. The example of the Ruth has made the Government more careful with the transportation of its funds.

The State of Massachusetts has just concluded a contract for the manufacture of 70 artillery carriages, consisting of the light 12 pounder, or Napoleon gun, and the 10 pounder Parrot with all their implements, equipments and spare parts.—This is an indication that Massachusets intends to be ready for any emergency.

"A child can readily wring out a tub full of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! There are several kinds, nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly four years pleasant use."

☞ At a meeting of the Old School Presbytery of this State, Rev. J. W. Baynes of Hudson, was appointed Clerical Commissioner to the O. S. General Assembly.

☞ Will our farmer subscribers who are in arrears please bear in mind that we will receive, at their market value, good wood, potatoes, butter, cheese eggs, lard, cabbage, &c.

☞ Our merchants, one and all have just filled up their stores with new goods, and on their behalf we invite the good people to "pitch in" and see who can do the most trading.

☞ The demand for tenements continues to exist. Why don't some of our capitalists erect cottages suitable for small families? It would be a paying investment, without doubt.

Godey's Lady's Book.

The November number is out. It is a superb number of this superb magazine An enumeration of its contents will suffice: It contains one steel plate engraving, a double fashion plate engraved on steel and colored, one hundred pages of reading matter, eighty-nine engravings, sixteen full page engravings, fourteen fancy dresses, any quantity of patterns for full dresses for women and children, and lots of fancy articles upon which the ladies can exercise their ingenuity in manufacturing We would remind our readers that now is the time to begin to form clubs for the volume commencing in January. G. T. Ketcham keeps Godey.

☞ Ladies, have you seen Frank Leslie's Lady's Magazine for November?—If not, our advice is for you to buy a copy immediately. It is the best number ever issued. It contains more fashion plates than all the other magazines conbined, in proof of this we would call your attention to that mammoth poster in Ketcham's Book Store.

ROBACK'S STOMACH BITTERS

Having been called upon to examine the formula or receipe for the above Bitters which has been given to me by the inventor, I take pleasure in stating to the public, that they are well known to the medical profession as possessing properties purely tonic, and the combination is well calculated, and especially adapted to that class of diseases arising from a disordered condition of the hepatic functions, or general derangement of the liver, so common in the malarious districts of the West and South. They contain a larger proportion of tonic ingredients than any other Bitters that have been submitted to me for chemical examination. I bespeak for them a wide spread popularity and cordially commend them to the public use.

Very respectfully,

C. W. ORDWAY, Analytical Chemist.

AYER'S

CATHARTIC PILLS.

complaining? Are you out of order? Want your system cleansed and purified? Suffering with constipation? These symptoms are often the premonitors of serious illness. Some 66 of the most common and dangerous disorders incident to humanity are caused by the accumulation of impurities in the blood, and should be warded off at the outset by the use of the right remedy only. Take Ayer's Pills, and cleanse out the diseased humors—purify the blood and let the living waters run free in the veins. They regulate the functions of the body into healthy action. They stimulate the sluggish organs into a healthy performance of their functions, and thus cure disease. A cold settles somewhere in the body, and produces stagnation in the circulation which injures its natural functions. These, if not relieved, react upon the system, and the secretions, instead of ducking general disorganizing influence. While in this condition, exposed to the dangerous diseases, take Ayer's Pills, and we have the assurance that the natural action of the system and with it the health and feeling of health again. Who is free from this trivial and common complaint, leading to many of the deep-seated and dangerous diseases? The same purgative effect expels them. Costiveness, stomach disorders, bilious attacks, headaches, pains in the limbs, derangements of the digestive organs, and a host of other ills, will yield to this mild cathartic. Being a purgative, they are equally and equally of them cured, and restored to health and vigor. Those who know the virtues of these Pills, will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Statements from leading physicians in every of the principal cities, and from other well known persons.

From a Prominent Merchant of St. Louis, Mo.

Dr. AYER: Your Pills are the perfection of pill. Their great merit is medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had rendered her miserable for years. Her mother has been greatly afflicted with blotches and pimples on her face, which in her hair. After our child was cured, she wished your Pills, and they have cured her. ANN SOUGRIDGE.

As a Family Physic.

From Dr. E. W. Cartwright, New Orleans.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their extraordinary qualities surpass any cathartic we possess. Being so mild, but very certain and effectual in operating in the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Edward Boyd, Baltimore.

DEAR SIR, AYER: I cannot answer your which complaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say that I never treat with a purgative medicine. I place great dependence on an effectual cathartic in new fever cases of this disease, and believing as I do that your Pills are the best we have, I of course value them highly.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 1, 1855.

DR. J. C. AYER. Sir: I have been troubled with the worst headache any lady can have to endure, since your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach which they cleanse at once.

Yours with great respect, PH. W. PHILLIPS, Cor. of Monongahela Street.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find they exert a decided curative influence in Liver complaints. They have in my hands proved more effectual for the cure of these complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I sincerely rejoice that we have at length a purgative which we can rely on, and I have the confidence of the profession in its efficacy.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, D. C., 7th Feb., 1857.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general practice ever since you made them, and cordially say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom met a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them. Fraternally yours, ALEXANDER HARRIS, M. D., Physician of the Metropolitan Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Relaxed Bowels.

From Dr. J. G. Green, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best medicines I have ever found. Their alterative effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhœa. Their superior operating makes them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to prescribe in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 21, 1857.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN A. MCNACHAN, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Fits, etc.

From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Medical Agent.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. In the case of our family they have proved as efficacious as I have, they should for me in preserving me from the benefits of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the progenitor of others that are worse. I have never failed to cure costiveness to originate in the liver, that your Pills will not regulate the organ and cure the disease.

From Mr. E. Short, Druggist and Member, Boston.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills to be the proper thing, are excellent purgatives in the disorders of the liver when wholly or partially suppressed, and are very effectual to clear the stomach and bowels. They are so much the best physic we have, I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawks, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Boston.

PULASKI HOUSE, Savannah, Ga., Feb. 1, 1855.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful if I did not let you know how much I am benefited by your admirable pills. A cold which fell on me some time since, settling on my liver, which quite prostrated me for a month. Notwithstanding I had the best medical advice, the disease grew worse and worse until I had recourse to your excellent agent in Baltimore, Dr. Taylor, who at once gave me your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure, and I now attribute my recovery to the use of them. I put up with your Pills instead of Drugs.

SENATE CHAMBER, Albany, N. Y., Jan. 5, 1857.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease—by your Pills. VINCENT SLOCUM.

☞ Most of the Pills in the market are so large that they are dangerous in a public pill, from the injury sometimes that frequently follows. Ayer's Pills are small, and contain no mercury or injurious medicine.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.

UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER

"A child can readily wring out a fothull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large percentage on its cost. We think the machine much more than PAYS FOR ITSELF EVERY YEAR in the saving of garments. There are several kinds, nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly FOUR YEARS CONSTANT USE."

Every Wringer with Cog Wheels is Warranted in every particular.

NO WRINGER CAN BE DURABLE WITHOUT COG-WHEELS.

THE GREAT

AMERICAN TEA COMPANY,

51 Vesey Street New York;

Since its organization, has created a new era in the history of

Wholesaling Tea in this Co.

They have introduced their selections of Teas and are selling them not over

TWO CENTS (2c Cents) per pound above COST,

Never deviating from the ONE Price asked.

Another peculiarity of the Company is that their Tea Taster not only devotes his time to the selection of their TEAS as to quality, value, and particular styles for particular localities of country, but he helps the TEA buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this, but points out to him the best bargains.

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all others.

If he is no judge of TEA, on the Market, of his time is valuable, he has all the benefits of a well organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.

This enables all tea buyers—no matter if they are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York merchants.

Parties can order Teas and will be served by us as well as though they came themselves being sure to get original packages, true weights and tares and the tea warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Company Teas, which will be sent to all who order comprising

Hyson, Young Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, Twankay and Skin.

Oolong, Souchong, Orange & Hyson Pekoe,

JAPAN TEA OF EVERY DESCRIPTION, colored and uncolored.

This list has each kind of Tea divided into FOUR classes, namely: Cargo, high Cargo, Fine, Finest, that every one may understand from description and the prices annexed that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea Trade.

We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over two cents (02 Cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who have heretofore been paying Enormous Profits.

DR. ROBACK'S

and

BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

After the Battle.

The angel stars are weeping,
Above the battle plain,
And death is slowly floating
On the deeply crimson rain.

A soldier's soul is passing
Up to the living God,
And his spirit feet are treading
The courts by man untrod.

It is a scar-decked body
That he has left below,
The cruel wounds all open
Where the blood has ceased to flow.

I wonder if that soldier
From the realms of endless light,
Can see a heart-worn mother
In her Northern home to-night?

I know that in the battle,
In all the fierce alarm,
For her and for his country
He raised his strong right arm.

I know that in the anguish
Preceeding Death's eclipse,
The sacred name of mother
Was still upon his lips.

And will he not protect her,
Now freed from earth's control,
And love her more than ever?
Oh, answer me, my soul!

The Boy Patriot.

In the year 1776 Philadelphia was in the hands of Howe and his inhuman soldiery, while the field of Brandywine gave the American people an evidence of British humanity. The inhabitants of Pennsylvania and Delaware were at the mercy of their foes. Bands of Hessian dragoons scouted the vicinity of Philadelphia for miles around, and committed acts which would disgrace a Vandal.

On the evening of a delightful autumn day, a group of boys ranging in age from twelve to seventeen years, were gathered together on the steps of a tenantless storehouse in the little village of Newark, Del. The town seemed lonely, and with the exception of the youthful band referred to, not a human being met the eye. All the men capable of bearing arms had left their homes to join the army of Washington on the Schuylkill. A youth of sixteen mounted on a barrel, was giving an account of the disastrous battle of Brandywine. James Wilson the orator was a bold boy, enthusiastic in his love for the American cause, and possessed of no little intelligence. His bright blue eyes and flaxen hair gave him an effeminate appearance, but beneath that plain, homespun jacket, throbbed a heart that never shrank before any obstacle. His father was commander of the Delaware troops, and his mother was dead. The boy concluded his narrative, and was deeply lamenting that he could not join the army.

"I am not old enough," said he, "but had I a musket I would not stand idle here, with my hands useless by my side."

"Are there no guns of any description in the village?" asked a listening youth.

"None. I have spent nearly a week trying to find one, but my efforts have been of no avail. I strongly suspect that the tory Livingston has several in his house, but as he permits no one to trespass on his land, I am unable to say positively."

"Why not take a party and search his dwelling?" asked Frank Howard. "He has no one to assist him except his cowardly son George, and I can thrash him as easily as that," and the boy snapped his fingers to imply the readiness with which he could trounce old Livingston's son.

James Wilson's eyes sparkled with joy. "If there are any three boys in this company who will help me, I will search old Livingston's this night. All who are willing to go, just step forward three paces."

Every boy in the crowd stepped forward without a moment's hesitation.—James' eyes flashed like stars. "Now, by the dead of Bunker Hill, I will search old Livingston's residence, though death stands in my path."

With a firm tread and with the utmost silence, the young heroes took up their march for old Livingston's. Livingston had long been suspected of harboring British spies, and some of his former laborers had reported that he kept up a regular correspondence with the British commander. At all events, he was generally regarded by the Whigs as a dangerous man. His house was situated a short distance from White Clay Creek, on the side of a steep hill, surrounded on all sides by tall trees. It was just such a place as one might suppose suitable for the plotting of treason.

At the time James Wilson and his little band left the deserted storehouse in the village of Newark, dusk had given place to the darker shades of night. Still it was not dark; the new moon was shining brightly through the clouds, and every object was perfectly distinguishable. The boys walked firmly forward, maintaining solemn silence. At length they gained the bend of the creek, and slowly following the winding path soon came to a little low bridge which crossed a shallow rivulet leading into White Clay, and James ordered them to halt.

"Let Frank Howard and myself reconnoitre the premises first, to see whether any danger may be apprehended. All the rest stand here till we return. Make no noise, and keep a constant watch."

James and Frank silently departed, and were soon lost in the thick woods through which the path run. Scarce had they gone from their companions, ere the quick ear of Wilson detected a noise.—'Hist," said he to Frank, as he pulled up behind a gigantic beech tree. Presently George Livingston came in sight. James Wilson darted from his covert and tightly grasped the boy by the neck. The cowardly youth trembled like a reed.

"Speak one word," whispered his captor, 'and I'll toss you into the creek.'

The Tory's son struck dumb with fright, found himself in the midst of the whole group of boy heroes, with the vice-like grasp of James and Frank on either arm.

'Now,' said James, 'answer me promptly and truly, or I'll make your position uncomfortable. Do you hear? Who are in your father's house at this moment?'

'I—I—can not tell,' stammered the half dead boy.

'You shall tell, or—'

'Spare me, and I'll tell everything.—When I left the house there was no one there but our family and Major Bradstone.'

'Who is he?' asked James.

'I don't know—I don't indeed.'

'Tell!' threatened Frank

'He is the Captain of the Yorkshire dragoons.'

The blue eyes of James glistened with joy, and he soon gained from the Tory's son a revelation which stamped his father a traitor of the most appalling character. He discovered that old Livingston not only kept up a correspondence with the British commander, but that he had so plotted in his traitorous design that the little village of Newark was to be burned to ashes, and its women and children left exposed to the pitiless foe. The old Tory was to receive as his compensation the land whereon the village stood, and an annual pension from the British government.

But stranger than all, the plot was to be consummated on the very night the Tory's son had been captured, while he was going on an errand to a neighbor about two miles distant. The little band of heroes learned, too, that the British had secured their horses in Livingston's stable, and intended to descend the creek in a large boat. There were twenty of them besides their captain.

Major Bradstone, the leader of the band, was in temper and heart a thorough demon, and scrupled not in his cruelty to destroy the slumbering infant or the sick wife. Not a few in that youthful band trembled for a widowed mother, or a defenceless sister. Some were for departing immediately, but James Wilson still retaining his grasp on the Tory's son, ordered all to be silent. The prisoner was bound hand and foot, a thick handkerchief bound over his mouth, to prevent him from calling for assistance, and a stout cord fastened to his breast and wound about a tree. All hope of escape forsook George Livingston. Wilson motioned his little band to follow him, and in a few moments they stood on the summit of a high precipice which overhung White Clay Creek.

'Now, boys,' said Wilson, 'the narrative which we have just heard is true, and as we have no muskets or ammunition, we must make the best of the occasion. The British band will pass this spot in their boat, and as we have an hour to work, let us busy ourselves in rolling some of those large rocks to the edge of the precipice, and when the red coats pass below, let us sink them to the bottom.'

Each boy immediately set to work, and in an incredible short space of time, nine huge rocks, each half a ton in weight, were balanced on the edge of the giant precipice. The creek at this point was not more than twenty feet wide, and was directly overhung by the mass of rock on which our heroes stood. If the British descended the creek, they would certainly pass this spot; and if they passed it, then death was their certain fate. In about an hour the quick ear of Wilson detected the measured beat of muffled oars.

'They are coming,' he whispered; 'let no one drop his rock till I give the word, and then all at once.'

Peeping cautiously over the cliffs, James Wilson saw the tory boat slowly but surely approaching. An officer stood on the bows, guiding the oarsmen by his orders, and the epaulets on his shoulders told that he was the identical fiend, Major Bradstone.

'Don't drop till I give the order,' again whispered Wilson.

When the boat was about twelve feet from the rock, the boy leader fell securely behind his stout defence, and shouted:—'Who goes there?'

In a moment the oarsmen ceased rowing, and gazed with astonishment about them. The impetus which the boat had acquired caused it to drift slowly beneath the rock, and just as it was fairly below, came forth the loud doomed words,

'Cut loose in the name of Liberty!'

Each boy pushed his rock at that instant, and as if with one impulse the gigantic stone fell. A loud shriek from the dark waters told how well the plan had succeeded, and as the exultant boys again looked over the rocks nothing was seen but a few pieces of wood. The boat was burst to pieces, and the occupants found a grave at the bottom of White Clay.—A cry of victory burst from the joyous lips of the youthful patriots, and it was echoed along in solemn grandeur.

'Now for our prisoner!' cried Frank Howard, bounding ahead; but what was the astonishment of the boys to find that in his efforts to get free, George Livingston had been caught by the fatal cord, and choked to death! There was no time for repining; the traitor and his son had met their deserved doom, and there was no one to mourn their loss.

'Such be the end of America's foes forever!" said James Wilson.

Old Livingston's house was searched, and to the surprise of every one, not merely guns, but three brass field pieces, several barrels of powder, and an abundance of balls, were found concealed in the Tory's cellar. The military stores found here were given over to the American troops, and found a joyous welcome at their headquarters. Had not the British party been so signally defeated along the banks of the White Clay, the town of Newark, and the whole northern part of the State of Delaware would have been overrun by predatory bands of British soldiers.

James Wilson and Frank Howard both joined the army of Greene, and served with distinction in the southern campaign. Frank fell in the memorable battle of Eutaw Springs, bewailed by all who knew him. James lost a leg at the siege of Yorktown, and retired to his native village, but mortification ensued, and he expired with the ever-to-be-remembered words on his lips—"Cut loose in the name of Liberty!"

The village of Newark still stands, and has become a town of some celebrity.—The scene of the defeat of the British by the boy patriots is still pointed out, and is a sacred spot in the annals of Newark.

The Human Figure.

The proportions of the human figure are strictly mathematical. The whole figure is six times the length of the foot. Whether the form be slender or plump, this rule holds good. Any deviation from it is a departure from the highest beauty of proportion. The Greeks made all their statues according to this rule.—The face, from the highest point on the forehead where the hair begins, to the chin, is one-tenth of the whole stature. The hand from the wrist to the middle fingar, is the same. The chest is one-fourth; and from the nipple to the top of the head is the same. From the top of the chest to the highest point of the forehead is one-seventh. If the length of the face from the roots of the hair to the chin, be divided into three equal parts, the first division determines the place where the eyebrows meet, and the second the place where the nostrils. The naval is the central part of the human body, and if a man should lie on his back with his arms extended, the periphery of the circle might be described around him with the naval for its centre would touch the extremities of his hands and feet. The height from the feet to the top of the head is the same as the distance from the extremity of the finger when the arms are extended.

An Eventful Career.

About a twelvemonth since, when disaster everywhere overtook the Union arms, and our gallant sons were falling fast under the marvellous sword of Rebellion, a young lady scarce nineteen, just from an academy in a sister State, conceived the idea that she was destined by Providence to lead our armies to victory and our nation through successful war.—It was at first thought by her parents—a highly respectable family in Willough-by street—that her mind was weakened simply by reading continual accounts of reverses to our arms, and they treated her as they would a sick child. This only had the effect of making her more demonstrative, and her enthusiastic declaration and apparent sincerity gave the family great anxiety. Dr. B., was consulted the minister was spoken to, friends advised, family meetings held, interviews with the young lady and her former companions in the academy were frequent—but nothing could shake the feeling which possessed her.

It was finally resolved upon to take her to Michigan. An old maiden aunt accompanied the fair enthusiast, and for weeks Ann Arbor became their home.—But travel had no effect upon the girl.—The stern commands of her aunt alone prevented her from making her way to Washington to solicit an interview with the President, for the purpose of getting command of the United states Army.

Finally it was found necessary to restrain her from seeing any but her own family, and her private parlor became her prison. To a high-spirited girl this would be unendurable at any time, but to a young lady filled with such an hallucination, it was worse than death. She resolved to elude her friends, and succeeded—leaving them clandestinely—and although the most distinguished detectives of the East and West were employed to find her whereabouts, it was unavailing. None could ever conjecture her hiding place. This was last April. She was mourned as lost—the habiliments of mourning were donned by her grief stricken parents, and a suicide's grave was assumed to be hers. But it was not so.—The infatuated girl, finding no sympathy among her friends, resolved to enter the army disguised as a drummer boy, dreaming, poor girl, that her destiny would be worked out by such a mode. She joined the drum corps of a Michigan regiment at Detroit, her sex known only to herself, and succeeded in getting, with her regiment, to the Army of the Cumberland.

How the poor girl survived the hardships of the Kentucky campaign, where strong men fell in numbers, must remain a mystery. The regiment to which she was attached had a place in the division of the gallant Van Cleve, and during the bloody battle of last Sunday the fair girl fell, pierced in the left side with a Minie ball, and when borne to the Surgeon's tent her sex was discovered. She was told by the surgeon that her wound was mortal, and advised to give her name, that her family might be informed of her fate.—This she finally, though reluctantly, consented to do, and the Colonel of the regiment, although suffering himself from a painful wound, became interested in her behalf, and prevailed upon her to let him send a dispatch to her father. This she dictated in the following manner:

Mr. ——, No. — Willoughby street, Brooklyn: Forgive your dying daughter. I have but a few moments to live. My native soil drinks my blood. I expected to deliver my country, but the fates would not have it so. I am content to die. Pray, pa, forgive me. Tell ma to kiss my daguerreotype.

P. S. Give my gold watch to little Eph. [The youngest brother of the dying girl.]

We are permitted by the afflicted family to give the dispatch as it came over the wires, suppressing only the family name.

Here, then, is a short incident of the war which might read like a romance.—But to the unhappy family who are now bowed down by grief, romance loses its attraction—and the actual, sad, eventful history of poor Emily will be a family record for generations yet to come.

☞ Many men's praying and swearing are pretty much the same; when they pray they think of no good, and when they swear they think of no harm.

How Biddy Flavored Coffee.

The wife of one of our friends being in delicate health, it was resolved that a girl should be procured to do the housework, that the lady might have an opportunity to recover health and spirits. After visiting the intelligence officer for two or three mornings, a fine, buxom lass, of about twenty years of age, but six months from "the owld sod," was selected, and instructed as to the duties that would be expected of her.

"Now then," says the lady, "pour the ground coffee into the pot, then pour in the hot water, and, after a few minutes' boiling, put in one-half of an egg, so," and the lady elucidated such demonstration by illustration. "You understand, don't you?" says the lady.

"Indeed I do, mun," was the response "Bile the coffee, grind in the water, and dhrop in the half of an egg. Isn't that it mun?"

"All right," replied the lady. "Now, then, to-morrow morning we'll see how well you remember."

To-morrow morning came, and the coffee was as good as could be expected. The third morning came, and, to the astonishment of our friend and wife, the coffee was undrinkable and nauseating, even the ordor of it was sickening. Bridget was called, and questioned as follows:

"Bridget, did you first put the ground coffee in the pot?"

"Indade I did mun."

"Did you then put in the hot water?"

"Sure I did."

"How long did you let it boil?"

"Five minutes, mum."

"What did you do then?"

"I put in the egg, mum."

"Just as I showed you the other morning?"

"Well to tell the truth, mum," says Bridget, giving her garment a twitch with her brawny hand, "to tell the truth, I would have put in half the egg, as ye twould me, but the egg was a bad one, and I thought ye would'nt mind kaping the other half of it, so I dhropped in the crather as it was!"

Aromatic coffee, that. We should call it infantile chicken soup.

Yankee Giant in the Army.

The Shoe and Leather Reporter has the following: Many of our readers are probably not aware that among the U. S. troops at Fort Hamilton, New York harbor, is a giant, a Norwegian, whose height when barefooted is six feet ten inches. He is a well proportioned man, and since his enlistment has been offered $100 per week by Barnum to exhibit himself at his Museum. But Uncle Sam has made a showman out of him by giving him the honor of color sergeant in an artillery regint, which some are disposed to think a dubious honor, as without any special insignia he would form a good object for the enemy's sharpshooters.—His shoes are a curiosity. A pair has been furnished the government by Benedict, Hall & Co., on the contract at $2,15 but the cost was $3,85. The size is No. 20, if it is allowed to run the numbert so high. The measures is as follows: Heel 16 inches, ankle 12 inches, toes 11 inches. The last two figures, it will be noticed, are small in proportion to the length.—The wearer of the shoes, being a good naturep man, will, it may be presumed, receive considerable notice and some invitations. On a recent visit to New York he imbibed a little too freely, not a frequent fault with him, and not returning in time, officers were sent to arrest him, but he good humoredly bruished them aside as easily as ordinary men would escape the hold of children, and the officers were compelled to await his own time in returning.

BUCKWHEAT CAKES.—Stir buckwheat flour into lukewarm water; it will take nearly a quart of flour to a pint of water; add a small cup of yeast. Stir it to rise over night, it wished for breakfast. Leave room in the vessel containing it, or it will overrun. If it should be sour in the morning, add soda until it is sweet.—These cakes should not stand, after baking so as to sweat, as that destroys the crispness, which should be a part of their excellences. They should be served when taken from the griddle. Use part of the batter to raise the next, when you have them daily.

☞ A Deacon, who became rich in a grocery not a hundred miles from Chicago used to boast how much he had done for the cause of temperance, by mixing at least a gallon of pure water with every gallon he sold.

HOW TO MAKE MONEY.—Let the business of everybody alone and attend to your own; do not buy what you do not want; use every hour to advantage, and study even to make your leisure hours useful; think twice before you throw away a shilling—remember you will have another to make for it; find recreation in looking after your business, and so your business will not be neglected in looking after recreation; buy low, sell fair, and take care of the profits; look over your books regularly, and if you find an error, trace it out; should a stroke of misfortune come upon you in trade, retrench, work harder, "but never fly the track;" confront difficulties with unflinching perseverance, and they will disappear at once; though should you even fail in the struggle, you will be honored; shrink from the task and you will be despised. By following these rules, however, you need say fail! Pay debts promptly and so exact your dues; keep your word.

DON'T USE A CHECK-REIN.—The New England Farmer, speaking on this subject, ays that any person whose attention has been called to the subject, and who still presists in the use of the tight check rein, ought to have his own head placed in a simular position to that which he has cruelly subjected the horse. If we were the Grand Sultan, every man, who torments his horse with a check rein should hold his arms at right angles, with his body, for an hour at a time, once in 24 hours, as long as he continued the use of the check rein. The practice of drawing in the heads of team horses by means of this pernicious strap, is especially cruel.—The horse, endeavoring to expend his strength, needs the free, and natural use of his head and neck. The cramping position now enforced is alike severe and injurious to horses, in any business, and should be ceased off till nature is at free play.

HE DIED FOR THE FLAG.—In the great battle of Gettysburg, the color sergeant of the 16th Vermont fell mortally wounded. At once a dozen men rushed up to seize the colors and bear them forward. The poor wounded sergeant grasped the staff with both hand; his eyes were already dimmed with death; he could not see who it was that tried to wrest the charge from him. "Are you friends or enemys," he cried out. "We are friends," was the reply, "give us the colors."—"Then friends," said he, "I am mortally wounded; let me hold up the flag till I die"—and so saying he fell back—dead. Surely, a nobler soldier than this poor fellow never lived.

FAN GENTLY THE DYING SPARKS.—In attempting to convert a sinner from the error of his way, one should be careful as though he were attempting to receive a rapidly expiring fire. Not trundle in a scuttle-ful of dogmas all at once, so that the faint spark which gives indications of spiritual life is overwhelmed by the mass that it can with difficulty force its way through it, or perhaps is smothered entirely, but drop a truth here, a maxim there, always striving to keep the sparks alive. Fan it—do not blow it out.

☞ A French Journal, published in London, says the Irish are engaged under a vast conspiracy to throw off the English domination. The same authority says: "The conspirators, who call themselves Fenians and Sons of St. Patrick, are said to be eighty thousand in number, all armed, and only awaiting an opportunity to shake off, the Saxon yoke, and proclaim the independence of Ireland.

Proclamation.

By the President of the United States of America.

The year that is drawing towards its close has been filled with the blessings of fruitful fields and healthful skies. To these bounties which are so constantly enjoyed that we are prone to forget the source from which they came, others have been added which are of so extraordinary a nature that they cannot fail to penetrate and soften even the heart which is habitually insensible to the ever watchful Providence of Almighty God. In the midst of a civil war of unequalled magnitude, which has sometimes seemed to invite and provoke the aggressions of foreign States, peace has been preserved with all nations, order has been maintained, the laws have been respected and obeyed, and harmony has prevailed everywhere except in the theatre of military conflict, while that theatre has been greatly contracted by the advancing armies and navies of the Union. The needful diversion of wealth and strength from the fields of peaceful industry to the National defense, have not been arrested the plow the shuttle or the ship. The axe has enlarged the borders of our settlements, and the mines, as well of iron and coal as the precious metals, have yielded even more abundantly than heretofore. Population has steadily increased, notwithstanding the waste that has been made in the camp, the seige, and the battle-field, and the country, rejoicing in the consciousness of augmented strength and vigor, is permitted to expect a continuance of years, with a large increase of freedom. No human counsel hath devised nor hath any mortal hand worked these great things. They are the gracious gifts of the Most High God who, while dealing with us in anger for our sins, hath nevertheless remembered mercy.

It has seemed to me fit and proper that they should be solemnly, reverently and greatfully acknowled as with one heart and voice by the whole American people. I do therefore invite my fellow citizens in every part of the United States, as also those who are at sea and those who are sojourning in foreign lands to set apart and observe the last Thursday of November next as a day of Thanksgiving and Prayer to our benefactor who dwelleth in the Heavens, and I recommend to them that while offering up the ascriptions justly due to him for such singular deliverances and blessings, they do also with umble penitence, for our National perverseness and disobedience, commend to his tender care all those who have become widows, orphans or sufferers in the lamentable civil strife in which we are unavoidably engaged and fervently implore the interposition of the Almighty Hand to heal the wounds of the nation, and to restore us as soon as may be consistent with the Divine purposes, to the full enjoyment of peace, harmony, tranquility and Union.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed. Done at the City of Washington on this day, the third day of October, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and sixty-three and of the independence of the United States the eighty-eighth.

Signed, A. LINCOLN.

By the President:

WM. H. SEWARD, Secretary of State.

Proclamation.

The following proclamation has been issued by President Lincoln:

Whereas, The term of service of part of the volunteer forces of the United States will expire during the current year;

And Whereas, In addition to the men raised by the present draft, it is deemed expedient to call out 300,000 volunteers to serve for three years or the war, not however exceeding three years:

Now therefore, I Abraham Lincoln, President of the United States and Commander-in-Chief of the Army and Navy thereof, and of the militia of the several States when called into active service, do issue this proclamation, calling upon the Governors of the different States to have enliated in the U. S. service for the various companies and regiments in the field, from their respective States their quotas of 300,000 men.

I further proclaim that all the volunteers that are called out and duly enlisted shall receive advance pay, premiums and bounties, as heretofore communicated to the Governors of States by the War Department and through the Provost Marshal General's office by special letters.

I further proclaim that all volunteers received under the call as well as all others not heretofore credited, shall be duly credited and deducted from the quotas established for the next draft.

I further proclaim that, if any State shall fail to raise the quotas assigned to it by the War Department under this call, then a draft for the deficiency in said quota shall be made in said State, or in the districts of said State, for their due proportion of said quota, and the said draft shall commence on the 5th day of January, 1863.

I further proclaim that nothing in this proclamation shall interfere with existing orders and with those which may be issued for the present draft in the States where it is now in progress, or where it has not been commenced. The quota of the States and districts will be assigned by the War Department through the Quartermaster General's office due regard being had for the men heretofore furnished, whether by volunteering or drafting, and the recruiting will be conducted in accordance with such instructions as have been or may be issued by that department.

In issuing this proclamation I address myself not only to the Governors of the several States but also to the good and loyal people thereof, invoking them to lend their cheerful, willing and effective aid to the measures thus adopted with a view to reinforcing our victorious armies now in the field, and bring our military operations to a prosperous end, thus closing forever the fountains of a seditious and civil war. In witness whereof &c.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN.

Mexico.

Louis Napoleon holds nominal possession of Mexico and we cannot close our eyes to the fact that our future destiny as the great nation of the American continent is involved in the fate of Mexico. If a monarchy is established over that country undera protecterate of the crowned heads of Europe, the assurance of a stable government, will at once attract an immense emigration from the crowded population of Europe to Mexico, for with a stable government, no country on earth would present greater inducements to the adventerous emigrant.

The agricultural advantages of the territory within the limits of the United States are very great, but great as they are, they are excelled in some important respects by those of Mexico. Although shorn of nearly one half of her territory by the loss of Texas, California and New Mexico, Mexico proper still has an area of near 900,000 square miles, and within this area is a soil and climate adapted to the growth of almost every important product of the world.

In addition to the vegetable articles grown, or capable of being grown in the United states, among the products of Mexico are the Mahogony, the Brazil wood, the Campeachy or Logwood, the Olive, yielding oil equal to the best imported from France and Italy, the Banana, the Cocoa-tree.—it was from Mexico that Europe first learned the use of Chocolate—the Vanilla and a variety of other important articles of commerce, as the Cochineal so valuable for its dye, which is almost peculiar to Mexico.

In addition to these, the fact that the deversified soil and climate of this favored region is admirably adapted to the growth of Cotton, Tobacco, Rice, Coffee and the Sugar cane, Wheat, Indian Corn and the vine, and we can well understand that all that Mexico requires is a stable government and an energetic population to rapidly develope its vast agricultural and mineral resources.

During the last forty years Mexico has been in a state of anarchy, and her population although politically free, have gone from bad to worse. Unquestionably the old Aztecs before their subjugation by Cortez were an infinitely superior people to the vicious, degenerate Indians and mongrel Spaniards, who have cursed Mexico with misrule during so many years

The present population of Mexico is estimated at about 8,000,000. "It is probable that four-sevenths of the nation are Indians, and two-sevenths of mixed origin; the remainder being of unmixed European blood and negroes."

The celebrated Burke said in the House of Commons that "an immoral people cannot be free—their passions forge their fetters." We need not look beyond Mexico for proof of the truth of this remark. The Mexicans must have purer elements of civilization than they have ever yet had, and their wild and lawless population brought into obedience to law and order by the strong hand of power, before a Republic for them will be anything but a curse.

We shall probably see despite the Monroe doctrine, how a monarchy will work in Mexico. It may prove better for the people than misgovernmeat called a Republic, which they have had; it cannot well be worse. Whether it will be better for the United States is another and a very grave question. Amid our apprehensions on this subject and indeed upon all others involving our destiny at this time, let us remember that "Man proposes but God disposes."

Money Sent to Richmond.

An order has been issued by the rebel Secretary of War to Gen Winder, who has charge of the Union prisoners at Richmond, which directs him to hand over to the prisoners any gold received by him for their use, as it is money recognized by both the Washington and Richmond Governments, and authorizes, if the prisoners wish to convert it into Confederate money to sell it for them at the market price, but adds, if the amount received be in the Federal paper, it cannot be handed over to them in kind, as it is not recognized as money by the Confederate Government, nor can its use or circulation be allowed, but it will at their option be converted, at current rates of exchange, into Confederate notes, and such notes delivered to them, or will be retained in kind for their future use.

Billy Wilson, of the famous "Zouaves," is now in Washington, asking permission to raise a brigade of a similar character.

Death of Lucien B. Bowen.

The subject of the annexed notice having very many friends among our subscribers we take pleasure in transfering the same from the columns if the Adrian Expositor.

Mr. Lucian B. Bowen, who died at his farm residence in the town of Raisin on Monday, was one of our most prominent and trusted citizens. He came to this city in 1844 from Cooperstown; N. Y., and immediately began the practice of his profession—the law—supporting himself for a short time by teaching Latin and Greek in a select school conducted by Prof. Benj. L. Hause. He was without means, young and unknown, but possessed that thorough industry and unweagied application which is sure to hew its own way through all obstacles and eventually, to achieve success. He subsequently was the law partner for several years of Mr. D. B. Dennis, now of Coldwater, and for the past seven or eight years has been associated in a similar capacity with Mr. Norman Geddes.

In every relation in life, he won for himself the admiration—we use the word understandingly—of all who knew him for blamelessness, purity, and every quality that adorns human nature and makes up the character of the truly good man. In this respect, his was a most remarkable character, and he leaves a reputation unstained by even a suspicion, as a precious legacy to his surviving friends and his children. His mind was too active and vigorous for his body. The engine was too strong for the vessel it propelled. Always of frail health, he had, before coming here, taken a sea voyage, and passed some time in the South, in the hope of mitigating the severities of disease which had already laid its premonitory hand upon him. He was always laboring against physical infirmities, and only the strength of an indomitable will has so long fought the wolf from his door.

As a lawyer, he excelled as a sagacious counselor, and in his accurate and extensive knowledge of precedents and practice in the management of a case. He was no advocate before a jury, and only addressed one infrequently.

In politics, he started out a strong and uncompromising Democrat, and it is an apt illustration of the clear integrity of his character that the witnessing of a slave auction in Virginia turned him in an instant from all his party associations, principles and prejudices. In a private diary there is entered on the very day of the transaction, an expression of surprise and horror at the sight, and the following concluding sentence: "Henceforth, I am an abolitionist!" This was in 1841.

By his laborious efforts, Mr. Bowen had accumulated a comfortable competence For the past two years he has been entirely confied to his house, unable to do any business of consequance, though able to ride out and to walk feebly about. He has borne his illness with a cheerfulness and patience beautiful to witness, from time to time speaking of his approaching end, and ordering the arrangements concerning his funeral with all that calmness that would have characterized him had he been making preparations for a journey other than that to the bourne from whence no traveler returns

There is scarcely another man in this community of whom what we have written of Mr Bowen could be truly spoken. We have in nowise exagerated. He will be followed to his grave by the affectionate regrets of all who knew him. "The memory of the just is blessed."

At a meeting of the Bar in the City of Adrian, held on the 28th ult., the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That, with deep sorrow, we mourn the loss of our respected friend and associate, Lucian B Bowen, who has been taken from us forever in the midst of a life of usefulness and worth, by the inexorable mandate of stern death.

Resolved That we shall ever hold him in remembrance as an able, accomplished and useful citizen, a kind and courteous gentleman, an honest, unselfish man of irreproachable character, whose urbanity, manliness and integrity endeared him to us, and to all with whom he was associated in public or private life.

Resolved, That, as a lawyer, he honored his profession; and with pride we point to him as an enlightened counselor, a clear, logical thinker, a pattern of method in business, and a model of fair dealing and integrity in practice, who, by his untiring zeal and close application to his profession won our respect and admiration, even while his too ardent devotion periled his life and hastened his death.

Resolved, That the afflicted family of the deceased have our condolence in this the time of their trial and bereavement; while conscious that out sympathy cannot asuage their sorrow, and commending them to Him who has promised to be the friend of the widow and the fatherless, we nevertheless rejoice that he has left them the rich inheritance of a life well and faithfully spent.

The life insurance standard of weight for a healthy man is one hundred and forty-five pounds for five and a half feet of height; and for every inch above or below this stature to add or substract five pounds.

A man named Thomas Banister, while at work skidding logs, in the vicinity of Nunica, Ottawa county, a few days since, accidentally had one of his legs broken in two places.

War News.

SATURDAY, Oct. 31st.—A correspondent of the Baltimore American, writing from Annapolis, says 131 paroled men were brought from Richmond via City Point, on Thursday, all of whom were suffering from the starvation treatment received at the hands of the rebels. A number had died on the boat, and the surgeon said that one-third of the survivors were beyond the reach of nourishment and medicine, and would die, also. The men were living skeletons, and had to be sent straightway to the hospitals.—They say their present condition has been brought on by their being kept without food or shelter. Their situation is shocking in the extreme, and disgraces any people, civilized or savage.

The Richmond papers say there is a great excitement on the subject of their currency in all parts of the Confederacy.

The official report of the action at Lookout Mountain has been received at the War Department.

The sales of 5 20s yesterday amounted to over six millions and a half, and it is thought they will reach ten millions today, and will all be disposed of by the end of next month.

MONDAY, Nov. 2d.—The bombardment of Charleston was resumed on Tuesday, the 27th, by the training of three heavy guns charged with Greek fire shells, at Morris Island, upon the city. The intention at first was to make only a slight demonstration, but this intention was changed, and soon afterwards the Federal batteries opened upon Forts Sumter, Moultrie and Johnson, and four monitors were placed in position off Sullivan's Island It is probable that a general bombardment of the city will be the result of this preliminary engagement, the first object of which was to get perfect range of the rebel works and to prevent the further construction of fortifications. The rebels were taken by surprise. No casualties had occurred, at latest advices, on the Federal side.

It is stated on the authority of the New York Herald, that President Lincoln has decided to take no official notice of the French invasion of Mexico, until our own difficulties shall have been adjusted.

News from Washington say there seems to be no prospect of a general engagement in the vicinity of Chattanooga.

Intelligence from Gen. Banks' Department received yesterday, gives quite a cheerful account of the progress of the war in that section. Opelousas is held by Federal troops; the Mississippi, or as much of it as lies in Banks' Department, is free from all danger of the guerillas, and business is quite brisk both on the main stream and the branches; blockade running will soon be unknown, as the illegal traffic is ruining all those who engage in it; business in New Orleans is good and steadily increasing; cotton is selling at 74 1-2c, with large receipts.—Several expeditions had been sent to various points, and when the New York steamer left, another composed of veteran troops, was almost ready to sail—its destination as is supposed, being Brownville, Texas. Recruiting for both white and colored regiments is actively progressing in the neighborhood of New Orleans.

TUESDAY, Nov. 3d.

We learn from the Army of the Potomac that the principal movements of late have been changes of the positions of the different corps. These changes have been the occasions of slight skirmishes, but without serious loss to either side.—Guerillas continue their operations on our wagon trains. The impression prevailed at headquarters that Lee was disposed to fight, and Meade's intention was to accommodate him at the earliest opportunity. There are those, however, who think Lee's army has been materially reduced, and any show of intention to fight is merely to conceal his weakness.

A gentleman just from Richmond says the rebels are seizing all boots and shoes in that city for the use of Lee's army, which is almost barefoot.

Major Gen. Butler has been assigned to command the 18th Army Corps Department of Virginia and North Carolina in place of Gen. Foster, who is ordered to report at Washington, to the Adjutant General. Circumstances indicate that Gen. Foster will have command of the defences of Washington.

The Herald's Army of the Potomac dispatch of Sunday says: "All is still and quiet. There has not been any firing on our front for the last three days. The army is located in an excellent position on its line of supplies. Should any contingency arise, it can with equal facility be concentrated either to advance or to repel the attack of the enemy. To-morrow the railroad between Alexandria and Warrenton will be again open."

The Herald has the following: "The usual Sunday rumors of battles and skirmishes are prevalent to-day; all of them, however, have been traced to the fact that unusual activity prevails in those bureaus of the War Department immediately connected with army movements, and certain preparations have been observed, usually made upon the eve of a great battle.

State Items.

The First National Bank of Ann Arbor has been designed as a temporry repository of public moneys occuring from Internal Revenue collections.

On the night of the 24th ult., the night train going west on the Central Railroad ran off the track opposite the gass works at Ypsilanti, owing to the displacement of a switch. Being under full headway, the locomotive, tender and baggage car ran upon the bridge, cutting and breaking the ties at a great rate. They finally brot up within a foot of the west end of the bridge, against the heavy stringers, which fortunately stopped their course. No one was injured, but the escape was extremely narrow. The train was delayed until three o'clock in the morning by the accident.

An unknown man fell from the eastward bound train on the Michigan Central on the afternoon of the 29th ult., just before reaching Geddesburg, and was killed by the cars passing over him. He had got on the train beyond Ann Arbor, ticketed to Wayne, and appeared to be partially intoxicated.

Two miraculous eggs were laid a few days since by a Bantam belonging to D. D. O'Dell, of East Saginaw. On the surface of one of them, as it was the inscription, in raised letters, "The Union and the Constitution, 1863" and on the other, "Victory to the Union Army, A. D. 1864." The Courier vouches for the truth of the story, and draws the conclusion that such a strange occurrence is a precusor to a peace which is to follow a great victory of our arms.

Andrew Gartletts, one of the soldiers encamped on the Fair Grounds in Pontiac, had his hand blown off by the discharge of his gun, while attempting to scale a fence, hunting for squirrels, on Thursday last. It has since been amputated.—A little girl named Mary Aiken had one of her eyes destroyed a few days since by a stick carelessly thrown by a playfellow.

A man named Connor was brought before Justice Backus, in Adrian, a day or two since, charged with committing adultery with the wife of a man named Hiram Bristol. The evidence was entirely conclusively, but it was ascertained that that the woman had another husband living, so that Bristol did not leagally stand in that relation to her, and could make no complaint under the statue, which provides that only the husband or wife can make complaint in such cases. Connor was therefore discharged.

The lumbermen in Sanilac and Huron counties are preparing for a heavy winter's work, securing and getting on supplies, so to be ready to drive ahead vigorously so soon as winter fairly sets in. There is now every indication of the largest lumbering operations in both counties that have been carried on in years. The only drawback seems to be a lack of hands.

Miscellaneous Items.

Augustus Bernays, a Union man, who for the last few years had lived at Orion, Ashley Co., Ark., on the 24th of April last was murdered near his own door step by a well-known rebel named Vernon. The unfortunate man was shot through the head with a revolver, having been induced to come out of his house by Vernon, under the pretense of transacting business. He was a man much respected throughout the whole State, and was about 42 years of age, and leaves a wife and three children. The murderer was seized and taken to the Ashley county jail for trial, but was permitted to escape on or about the 14th of July.

Preparations are being made for the grand Russian ball which is to take place in New York on the 5th inst. The Academy of Music is to be used as the dancing hall, and the banqueting is to take place at Irving hall.

The "broad arrow" which the English papers tell us was affixed to the rebel rams, simply indicates possession by her Majesty. It is a Government mark somewhat in the shape of an arrow head, which is stamped, cut, or otherwise fixed on all solid materials used in her Majesty's ships or dock yards, in order to prevent embezzlement of royal naval stores.

The Governor of Iowa has just issued a stirring proclamation for troops under the new call for 300,000 men.

A profound feeling of horror and resentment has been excited by the discovery that resurrectionists have disturbed the dead soldiers in the military graveyard near the Soldier's Home, at Washington. Many have been disinterred and removed. Their empty coffins lie in the adjoining woods.

The recent prairie fires in Kansas, it is said, did a great deal of damage by burning fences, crops and hay. Most of the farmers lost from $300 to $600.

An effort is making to gather the remains of those who fall in battle of Perryville, Ky., in one common burial-ground, as is to be done at Gettysburg, Penn.

The "round house" of the Great Western Railway at Hamilton, C. W. was burned on Thursday afternoon. Loss $15,000, the flames caught from bringing a lamp too near a barrel of lubricating oil. Nine Locomotives were in the building, and some of them suffered slight injuries from the fire.

☞ The funeral services of Rev. W. L. Gilman will be held in the Universalist Church, in this village, next Sunday at 1 o'clock, P. M Sermon by Rev. H L. Hayward, of New York.

☞ John Whishart starts this week for the Eastern cities, to buy a stock of Crockery He sells his wares cheaper than they can be bought elsewhere.—When he comes back, be sure and call on him.

☞ Hambujer, the celebrated Magician, Illusionists and Prestigitator, will appear at Bidwell's Hall, on Friday evening November 6th, in "The East India style of miraculous necromancy." His feats are spoken of as past all comprehension. Go and see him.

☞ O. J. Chandler, agent for the sale of Warrens' Chemical Toilet and Washing soap, will be in this place, this week, for the purpose of selling town or family rights. The soap comes highly recommended.

☞ A little girl named Margaret Maloy, aged 6 or 7 years, living in Adrian, was burned to death on Monday evening last, by her clothes taking fire from a burning rope with which some younger children were playing

☞ If you want anything in the eating line, call at the City Restaurant, and Billy will get it up for you in the best manner. They keep everything that is usually found in a first class saloon. You should see their large oysters; they have some that measure fifteen inches on the nibs—Joe says so, and you know what Joe says must be so.

☞ Gleason's Literary Companion—the best, most polite and interesting literary paper now published—is a regular visitor to our office. It is one of our most welcome exchanges, and contains more moral interesting and instructive reading matter than any other weekly published in the Union. It should be the "Companion" of every family.

☞ Saleratus, like port wine, can be made for almost any price, which is done by using cheap and deleterious substances Herrick Allen's Gold Medal Saleratus is perfectly pure and undulterated, and one paper will convince any intelligent lady that there is nothing equal to it. It will produce one eighth more bread than any other, is much better than soda to use with cream tartar. Grocers and Druggists sell it.

☞ The 18th Regiment, some time since was ordered to the front from Nashville. After getting prepared the order was countermanded. Quartermaster Winans has resigned and E. P. Champlin is his successor. Col. Doolittle is again in command of the regiment. Sergeant Snyder, Co. E Tecumseh, private Austin, Co H. Monroe and Corporal Parsons, Co. C. Adrian, it is said have been promoted to positions as Lieutenants in a colored regiment.

Mich. Southern R. R.

The earnings of the Southern Road for the third week in October were $81,876, an average of $5,648 over the same week last year. The increase of passengers is $8,000, nearly fifty per cent.—The blockade of freight upon the Toledo and Southern Roads is preventing their earning as much money as they otherwise would do. The profits from passengers are what give most value to railway shares, costing as they do, very little increase in working expenses.

A new style of sleeping car has just been introduced on the Michigan Southern Road, upon which it is difficult to suggest an improvement. By an ingenious arrangement it is rendered independent of the roughest road, and no jolt occurs to startle the most nervous sleeper, while the internal fittings are luxuriant in the extreme. By a newly discovered apparatus the carbonized air is carried off as fast as respired, and after a night's occupancy the air is sweet and pure as that never contaminated by the breath of man. To enjoy the luxury of a night's ride on the rail the traveller must take one of the new sleeping cars on the Michigan Southern Railroad.

List of Jurors,

The following is a list of Petit Jurors drawn for the November term of the Lenawee Circuit: Decatur Palmer, John Patterson, Ridgeway; John M. Merritt, Atwater Ives, Geo. W. Bowen, Geo. Curtis, James Updyke, Tecumseh; Wm. Dorr, Samuel Wilson, Franklin; Geo. Watts, Seneca; Titus Babcock, Leland W. Green, Hudson; Wm. Smally, Dover; Daniel H. Deming, Austin Root, Rome; James Blowers, Cambridge; Artemas Rice, Geo. Sission, Raisin; Zebedee Mc Omber, Medina; Wm. R. Green, Porter Beal, Rollin; Benj. S. Allen, Madison; Joseph Camburn, James K. Johnson, Adrian city.

☞ A soldier, by the name of James McDonald, formerly a private in the brave and ever to be remembered 69th N. Y. Regiment, left New York last week to visit an uncle in Grand Rapids, but on arriving at this place, found himself minus money to carry him further. His wants were soon made known, and Uncle Sim soon made himself "useful," by raising a purse of $30 for the poor fellow, which he received with many thanks. Mr. McDonald was so badly wounded at the battle of Bull's Run as to cause the amputation of his right arm at the shoulder, and his right leg below the knee, besides showing other scars of the battle-field.

☞ The Terms of the Circuit Court for the First Judicial Circuit for the years 1864 and 1865, have been fixed as follows:

Monroe County.—On the first Tuesday of March, June, September and December.

Lenawee County.—On the fourth Tuesday of March, June, September and December.

Hillsdale County.—On the second Tuesday of March, June, September and December.

☞ Our most excellent dentist, E. Hause, has just introduced in this place, a new and very valuable article to take the place of chloroform in extracting teeth it is the Nitrous Oxide Gas. Dr. H. has extracted a great many teeth for persons while under the influence of this gas, and he can assure the public that the most delicate person, old, young or infirm, can inhale it with entire freedom from harm.

Special Notices.

Having been called upon to examine the formula or receipe for the above Bitters which has been given to me by the inventor, I take pleasure in stating to the public, that they are well known to the medical profession as possessing properties purely tonic, and the combination is well calculated, and especially adapted to that class of diseases, arising from a disordered condition of the hepatic functions, or general derangement of the liver, so common in the malarious districts of the West and South. They contain a larger proportion of tonic ingredients than any other Bitters that have been submitted to me for chemical examination. I bespeak for them a wide spread popularity and cordially commend them to the public use.

Very respectfully,
C. W. ORDWAY, Analytical Chemist.

MONEY EASILY MADE,

By Either Gentlemen or Ladies.

I am in possession of a BEAUTIFUL FRENCH ART which has been introduced in this country only to a limited extent, and that in New York City. It is something which every person stands in great need of, consequently will be extensively patronized. Persons can make money with it at home or abroad. Thousands in France have made small fortunes at it, and are still doing so—I would state what it is, but persons purchasing the knowledge of it do not desire it made public. One Dollar sent to the undersigned will ensure the immediate return of a Circular giving full information in the Art, and the requisite instructions to pursue it. It is strictly genteel, and the best and only thing ever introduced which every person can make money at. NO LETTERS NOTICED, except those containing the required amount for instructions.

UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER

"A child can readily wring out a tubfull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large per centage on its cost. We think the machine much more than PAYS FOR ITSELF EVERY YEAR in the saving of garments. There are several kinds, nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs, otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly FOUR YEARS CONSTANT USE."

Every Wringer with Cog Wheels is Warranted in every particular.

NO WRINGER CAN BE DURABLE WITHOUT COG-WHEELS.

A good CANVASSER wanted in every town.

JUST RECEIVED

at C. S. Patterson's a large and well assorted stock which he offers at low prices.

OF WALL PAPER

THE GREAT

AMERICAN TEA COMPANY,

51 Vesey Street New York;

Since its organization, has created a new era in the history of

Wholesaling Tea in this Co.

They have introduced their selections of Teas and are selling them not over

TWO CENTS (02 Cents) per pound above COST.

Never deviating from the ONE Price asked.

Another peculirity of the Company is that their Tea Taster not only devotes his time to the selection of their TEAS as to quality, value, and particular styles for particular localities of country, but he helps the TEA buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this, but points out to him the best bargains.

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all others.

If he is no judge of TEA, or the Market, of his time is valuable, he has all the benefits of a well organized system of doing business; of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.

This enables [illegible] buyers—no matter if they are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York merchants.

Parties can order Teas and will be served by us as well as though they came themselves being sure to get original packages, true weights and tares: and the tea warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Company Teas, which will be sent to all who order comprising

Hyson, Young Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, Twankay and Skin.

Oolong, Souchong, Orange & Hyson Pekoe,

JAPAN TEA OF EVERY DISCRIPTION, colored and uncolored.

This list has each kind of Tea divided into FOUR classes, namely: Cargo, high Cargo, Fine, Finest, that every one may understand from description and the prices annexed that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea Trade.

We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over two cents (02 Cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who have heretofore been paying Enormous Profits.

WILCOX & GIBBS,

SEWING MACHINE.

Price, with Hemmer and Feller, $40.

THE WILCOX & GIBBS' Sewing Machine is the best machine, without regard to price, for

Family Sewing,
Braiding,
Hemming,
Felling,
Tucking,
Cording,

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seam, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances "to survive the wash-tub."

A patented device of great utility to learners prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it."—Philo Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder"—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines."—Pennsylvanian.

"The Machine, in the opinion of the committee, more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs', as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21 1860.

"After much wear and many washings the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others"—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experience in our own family"—Boston Traveller

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable"—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has in so short a time, acquired such well-merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette

"We esteem it the best machine for family use The stitch is unexceptionable."—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

DR. ROBACK'S
BLOOD PURIFIER
and
BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

GENUINE PREPERATION.
"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED"
COMPOUND

Fluid Extract Buchu

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATER OR CALCEROUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflamation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, OR CHILDREN.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEEKNESS

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot Hands,	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin,	Pallid Countenance,

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably remove, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITZ, EPILEPTIC FITS,

in one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "dire ful diseases."

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION,

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

Requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Female,

OLD OR YOUNG, SINGLE, MARRIED, OR CONTEMPLATING MARRIAGE.

In many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the Customary Evacuations Ulcerated or Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the

I could furnish any quantity of testimonials of its efficiency from from my own patients, but the practice of parading bought and ficticious ones before the public is so prevalent I do not deem it advisable. My object is to place my medicine before the public, not alone to make money, but to do good. It is proverbially true of the American Ladies, that not ten perfectly healthy ones may be found in any one vicinity.

Summer's Gone.

BY MRS. NORTON.

Hark! through the dim wood dying,
With a moan,
Faintly the winds are sighing—
Summer's gone!
There, when my bruised heart feeleth,
And the pale moon her face revealeth,
Darkly my footstep stealeth,
To weep alone.
Hour after hour I wander,
By men unseen,
And sadly my wrung thoughts ponder
On what hath been,
Summer's gone.

There, in our bowers,
Long ago,
Our path through the tangled flowers
Treading slow—
Oft hand in hand entwining—
Oft side by side reclining—
We watched in its crimson shining
The sunset glow,
Dimly that sun now beneath
For me alone—
Spring after spring returneth—
Thou art gone.
Summer's gone!

Still on my worn cheek playeth
The restless breeze;
Still on its freshness strayeth
Between the trees,
Still the blue streamlet gusheth—
Still the broad river rusheth—
Still the calm silence hushetb
The heart's disease;
But who shall bring thy meetings
But again?
What shall recall thy greetings—
Loved in vain?
Summer's gone!

Fretfulness.

Fret, fret, fret, scold, scold, from morning to night, in haste or leisure—when it rained or the sun shone; Mrs. Jones always found something to find fault about, something to fret her. She began it when she was a child, for her mother fretted before her and taught her how. She practiced her lessons well as she grew up. She carried the habit with her into the home of her married life, and scarcely kept it out of sight during the honeymoon. After she became a mother she found occasion to fret every day and almost every hour of her life, till she came to be the most accomplished fretter that we know. She was handsome, at least she might have been; for fair and handsome features will look ugly when the scowl of peevishness mars them. She was smart and efficient in the managemrnt of her domestic affairs. Her house was a model of order, and the ways of her household were looked after well; but I have seen more comfort where there was less system and order. She was intelligent, and when the demon that enthralled her slumbered for a little, another fine features were irradiated with a smile and glow of social cheerfulness, she would seem to be a most engaging woman. She was self-sacrificing. Her ease and preferences she would yield to the good of others, but the most precious sacrifices she laid on the altar of love she would baptize with the unholy waters of fretfulness and complaint, till the value of the benefaction was wholly lost, or greatly marred to the recipient. She was religious, and labored to advance the kingdom of Christ on earth. Alas! there was a kingdom of quiet peace, and holy calm, and heavenly sunshine, that never came to her own soul. She was a wife and mother. She loved her family well, she thought, she toiled for them; she strave to advance them in life, but she never loved them well enough to conquer the enemy for their sakes; nor did she ever make their home or their daily life what these should be to whom God gives and continues a wife and mother.

Her husband grew dwarfed in soul and soured and hard in social character. Her children, most to be pitied, who had the first delicate buddings of life's spring time nipped by such biting frosts—suffered in their sensibilities, and exhibited such excrescences of character, and such warpings of soul as might have been expected. The sweet fragrance, the sunniest light of home, never shed its aroma or its brightness in their daily paths. Some learned from her to fret and complain, and they transmitted the same curse to other households, and another generation. Some with finer sensibilities, shrank and withered under it; while in some souls the waters of bitterness and misanthropy wore deep, broad channels; for their was a numerous household to feel the blight. She felt and knew that her family did not love her as she would have them love her. She saw that they were glad to live out of her presence, though she was conscious that she lived and labored for them. This created in her a sense of injustice done her, which engendered a feeling akin to bitterness as she advanced in life, and over this she fretted still more intensely, till, dear reader, she fretted herself into the grave. The looker-on, as he summoned up the results of her life work—her woman's work—might have written over all her opportunities for great and blessed achievements, "Wanting," "Failures," "Lost," "Marred." And wherefore?—Because of this enemy—a feeble one at first, but nourished and cherished through many years, had grown at length her conqueror and master.

O woman! whose highest honor it is to mature and rear earth's men and women for God's service, and to breathe over the homes you rear something of the atmosphere of that Home yours should typify, exorcise, I entreat you, this foul spirit, this demon fretfulness, from your domain. Let its shadow never darken your threshold. Let its breath never blight the spirits where it is your province to ward and watch. Would you have yours—your own dear ones, large of soul—loving and beloved in their lives, and live in their memories after they are dead, as one of those sent of God and manifesting him in their lives? Then let your brow never be clouded, your tones sharpened, the loving beaming of your eye never quenched by this foul spirit, that gathers its venom and blight from unholy unrest. A truly noble man, a loving innocent child, might find a better home in a den of stinging reptiles, than with a "brawling or fretful woman in a wide house." If you are sick, and cannot give to your home service and care, give them the smile of a calm, unruffled soul, the sunshine of peace and love, and trust in God. If you are burdened with care and toil, add not to the load you must needs carry, one you need not, by fretfulness of spirit, but let cheerfulness and hope buoy you. Do difficulties dark and frowning meet you? Does your path lie over an intricate and thorny way? Let the light of a quiet spirit brighten it, and the music of gentle, loving tones thrill along its tangled mazes. Listen for them, and you shall catch ever and anon, strains of poetry and measures of melody, even on the dreariest road. Have you the greatest blessing a true woman's heart craves, affectionate friends, a pleasant home, a loving and noble man for a companion, and dear, promising children? O, let gratitude to the Great Giver keep you always from the lowering frown of impatience, and the harsh grating tones of complaint and fretfulness at the little ills, the little disappointments, the physical taxations, and the numerous discomforts and ailments that every mother of a family, however blessed and favored, must at times encounter. Let each strive in her own sphere and in her own home, to make that home as perfect, that sphere as ennobled, as it can become. If this is the aim and ambition, surely from such a home and sphere will be banished, with much else that belittles and degrades and mars it, the demon—Fretfulness.

THE RULES.—A lady who has just opened a boarding house somewhere up town has posted up the following "Rules and Regulations:"

"The gentlemen must not put their feet on the mantel in the winter nor out of the window in summer; and the lady must not write her name on the glass with a quartz pin. If she uses an air tight; she must regulate the damper herself, an not ring every ten minutes for the chamber-maid. The single gentlemen must not play the trombone or make love to the servants, nor comb his whiskers at the table. The lady must not turn up her nose at anything upon the table, unless she has a natural pug; and none of the party must drink with a mouthful of victuals, nor must they fight for the top buckwheat cake. Terms liberal and pay in advance."

A SEVERE WINTER.—The weather prophets say that the people in Minnesota may look out for the hardest winter seen for years. There will be more cold days—the mercury will run lower, and the snow deeper, than before or since '57. This is the first fall since that of '57, the brook trout have commenced leaving the small creeks for deep holes as early as September, and the first season since then that muskrats have double walled their little hillock homes. These and certain other infallible signs known to the sportsman and hunter, indicate a winter of unusual severity. It is thought by many that the river will close two weeks earlier than last year.

The German at Dinner.

An American is to be feared when he is eating dinner. There is something in the smell of the meat that makes him savage and blood thirsty. After dinner when he goes out on the front porch to pick his teeth and smoke his cigar, he is the blandest and most amiable of men. Address him by his title at that point of his daily career and he will think nothing of joining you in a "smile." But you had better stir up a Bengal tiger while tearing the ribs from a fat ox, or undertake to tickle a grizzly with the ramrod of your rifle, than interfere with a free-born citizen of the United States in the act of mastication. Not so with the jolly burgher. His face begins to shine after the soup; a schoppen or two of beef suffuses it with roseate tints; the first course of savory stew brings the inner juices to the surface; as wit and beer begins to flow together, he throws back the collar of his coat, loosens the buttons of his vest, laughs a fat, oleaginious laugh from the pit of his stomach, closes the corners of his eyes, and snuffs enjoyment in the clouds of steam and smoke that hover around his head. Oh, what a luxury it is to see him eat! What balm for the sickness of care it is to see him blow the froth from his beer, hold the glass up between him and the light, gloat over its liquid beauties, and then raise it to his mouth, and slowly elevate the bottom till the colored paper on the ceiling glimmers through it! And then he draws such a deep, wholesome, capacious and appreciative breath of satisfaction.—Oh, how inspiring it is to see him enjoy the good things of life! He is such a genial, hearty, self-satisfied, comfortable sort of an animal!

Simplicity of Finnish Manners.

The grand dignitaries who accompanied the Emperor of Russia to Finland, and who have just returned to St. Petersburg with his Majesty, bear witness to the extraordinary simplicity of the mode of life in that country, and which is in such direct opposition to that now prevailing in the Russian capital. The chief of the secret police, Prince Dolgorouky, paid a visit to the Archbishop of Helsingfors, when, to the surprise of the former, the only servant of the ecclesiastical dignitary took the light from the Archbishop's table, and with it opened the door and admitted the Prince. On his departure the Archbishop accompanied him to the door with the same light in his hand. One must be acquainted with the prevailing luxury of St. Petersburg, and with the fact that an immense number of servants are maintained at the mansions of the nobles, in order to appreciate the hilarity with which the recital of this anecdote is received. A still more comic adventure fell to the lot of Prince Gortschakoff when he went to visit the Civil Governor of Helsingfor of Helsingfors. As the Prince's servants rang, the Governor came to the parlor window and lamented that he could not admit his Highness, as the cook had gone out and taken with her the key of the street door. The Governor added that he had himself just returned, and had been obliged to get in through the window. The Prince, so goes the story, did the same.

PUNCTUALITY.—Among mechanics, punctuality is a great desideratum. Show us a mechanic who will get our work done by the time specified, and we will cherish him as the apple of our eye. But to the mechanic who makes us call twice, (fire and sickness excepted,) we bid farewell, 'a long farewell'—he is not the man for our money. The mechanic gains nothing by false promises except a bad name. In order to grasp at all the work in his neighborhood, many a mechanic will promise when he knows it is not in his power to perform. What is such a man but a liar? To say nothing of the vice of lying, than which nothing is more low and contemptible, the mechanic in the end, gets far less work by false promises than he would by a strict adherence to the truth. Punctuality in a mechanic is the soul of business, the foundation of prosperity, and the security of a good reputation.

☞ At a hotel one boarder remarked to his neighbor: "This must be a healthy place for chickens." "Why," asked the other. "Because I never see any dead ones hereabouts."

☞ Before people take the leap through the wedding ring, they should be quite certain that the blanket of connubial contentment is held tight on the other side.

Sal 'Disgraced the Family.'

A traveler in the State of Illinois some years ago, came to a lone log hut on the prairie near Cairo, and there halted. He went into the house. It was a wretched affair—an empty packing box for the table, while two or three chairs and disgraceful stools graced the reception room, the dark walls of which were further ornamented by a display of tin ware and a broken shell article or two. The woman was crying in one corner, and the man with tears in his eyes and a pipe in his mouth, on a stool with his sorrowful looking head supported by the palms of his hands. Not a word greeted the interloper.

"Well," he said "you seem to be in awful trouble here. What's up?"

"Ah, we are almost crazed neighbor, said the woman; "and ain't got no patienca to see folks now."

"That's all right," said the stranger, not much taken aback by the polite rebug; "but can I be of any service to you in all this troudle?"

"Well, we've lost our gal; our Sal's gone off and left us," said the old man, in tones of the deepest despair.

"Ah, do you know what induced her to leave you?" remarked the new arrival.

"Well, we can't say neighbor, as how she's far lost as to induced, but then she's gone and disgraced us," remarked the afflicted father.

"Yes stranger, and—not as I should say as is her mother—but there warn't a pootier gal in all the West than our Sal. She's gone and brought ruin on her own head now," followed the stricken mother.

"Who has she gone off with?" inquired the visitor.

'Well that's the trouble. The gal could have done well, and might have married Mart'n Kehoe, a capital shoemaker, who although he has but one eye, plays the flute in a lively manner, and earns a good living. Then, look what a life she has deserted; she was here surrounded by all the luxury in the country," said the father.

"Yes, who knows what poor Sal will get to eat, drink and wear now?" groaned the old woman.

"And who is the fellow who has taken her into such misery?"

"Why she's gone off and got married to a critter called an editor, as lives in the village, and the Lord only knows how he's to airn a living."

A RECKLESS GENERAL.—Gen. Paine of Illinois, commands a brigade in the Army of the Cumberland, composed of Ohio and Illinois troops. A soldier of Ohio sends to the Dayton Journal the following in reference to this officer:

One day a wealthy old lady, whose plantation was in the vicinity of camp came in and inquired for Gen. Paine.—When the commander made his appearance, the lady, in warm language, at once acquainted him with the fact that his men had stole his last coop full of chickens, and demanded their restitution or their value in sound currency.

"I am very sorry for you madam," replied the General, "but I can't help it.—The fact is madam, we are determined to squelch out the rebellion if it takes every chicken in Tennessee."

This exhibition of utter recklessness of means for accomplishment of a purpose which the old lady deemed most foul, temporarily deprived her of the power of speech and she passed from the presence of the General without asserting her right to the "last word."

ARISTOCRACY.—I can respect the aristocracy of family—the consciousness of blood that has flowed through historic veins and throbbed under blazoned shields of renown. I can respect the aristocracy of talent, rising above all material conditions in its splendor and power. I can respect the aristocracy of enterprise that bursts all obstacles, and holds with a modest self-exertion. But of all aristocracy, the aristocracy of mere vulgar, flaring wealth, and nothing else, is the emptiest and silliest.—E. H. Chapin.

☞ "Lister," said one of the brethren, at a recent love-feast, "are you happy?"

"Yes, deacon, I feel as though I was in Beelzebub's bosom."

"Not in Beelzebub's, sister."

"Well, some of the patriarch's I don't care which."

☞ A poor Yankee being asked the nature of his distress, replied, "that he had five outs and one in," to wit: out of money, and out of clothes, out at the toes, out of credit, and in debt.

Singular Eccentricity.

We find the following in the Philadelphia Inquirer's Norfolk correspondence.

Almost every reader of Northern journals must by this time, have become familiar with the name of Dr. T. M. Wright of this city, who, a few months since murdered Lieut. Sanborn of one of the colored regiments stationed near here. He is now under sentence of death for the crime he committed, and in view of this he has been arranging affairs appertaining to his family. For some time past one of his daughters has been engaged to be married to a resident of this city, named Talbot, and, according to a wish expressed by the Doctor, the ceremony took place on Saturday evening, in the jail in which he is confined. All the members of his family were present, consisting of his wife, four other daughters and son.

With the invited guests the whole number in attendance was twenty-eight. Rev. Mr. Cheevers, the Chaplain of Fortress Monroe, performed the marriage rites.—Dr. Wright himself participated in the ceremony, bestowing his daughter upon Mr. Talbot.

Since his incarceration Dr. Wright has evinced many eccentricities of character. Upon learning his fate he ordered his coffin to be made after a plan designated by himself. It is constructed of plain cypress wood, and is extremely rough in exterior appearance and of a very odd shape. Instead of being like ordinary coffins, widest across the breast, the broadest part is at the head, from which it gradually tapers off to the foot, having somewhat the appearance of an immense wedge.

Directly over the head, extending two feet, there is an abrupt rise above the level of the top of the coffin, which is about eight or ten inches higher than the lower portion of it. It looks as though a small box had been fastened to the top after it was finished. The Doctor's idea in having it constructed in this peculiar manner, was, that small photographic likenesses of all the members of his family might be placed inside, after the manner in which they are hung on walls; with him they are to be buried.

On Thursday night last, when he was expecting to be executed the next day, he arranged the pictures along the raised sides of the coffin, and then got into it himself. He expressed considerable satisfaction with his burial case, it being just as he desired it. He afterward wrote his name on the lid with a lead pencil, in a good, bold hand.

BETROTHAL IN RUSSIA.—After a few preliminaries, one of the men advanced, leading out one of the women. After going through several ceremonious steps, and figures, he presented her with a hand, kerchief, kissed her three times, and returned her to her place. This woman was the mother of one of the younger ones in this circle, and as she had not objected ostensibly to the kisses, the man was emboldened to lead out the daughter. The couple then went through many steps and captivating figures, now advancigg and then bashfully retireing. At last the man dropped the fatal handkerchief that was to decide his lot, and of course, the girl, like most other girls in all other parts of the world seeking an establishment of their own, picked it up quickly and presented it to her future caro sposa, whereupon the kissing, that pleasant heart language of all countries was very liberally, and this time more ardently administered to the young lady, who, I must say, received and returned it in a most generous spirit notwithstanding the publicity of the locale. And so the betrothal of this couple was completed. A liberal distribution of whiskey all around by our kindhearted hostess seemed to be as much relished by the dancers as the kissing had been by the select few, and so the ceremony was finished.

☞ An old Widower says when you pop the question to a lady, do it with a kind of a laugh, as if you were joking. If she accepts you, very well; if she does not, you can say you were only in fun.—Masculines and feminines who have planted helpmates underground seem to know a thing or two.

Apple Butter.

A correspondent of the Rural New Yorker says: Apple butter, if properly made is indeed excellent. When new, I prefer it to the best of preserves, and it will keep good eight or ten years. Apple butter is considered somewhat expensive, as it requires a copper kettle, which costs from twelve to fifteen dollars; but hereabouts one man buys a kettle, does his own boiling with it, and then lets it out and charges twenty-five or fifty cents a day. To one barrel of cider, take five pattent pailfuls of well peeled, cored, and quartered sweet apples; then fill your kettle with cider, hang it over the fire, and before it begins to boil, skim it well.—Boil down one-fourth, then rinse your apples in clean water, and part in the kettle. Have ready what we call a stirrer, which can be made of a piece of inch board, five inches wide at the bottom, and two at the top, the length of which depends upon the heighth of the kettle, wish seven or eight holes in the bottom, and a handle attached to it at the top eight or ten feet long, so that you can stir without suffering from the heat of the fire. Stirring is done so as to scrape the bottom of the kettle to keep it from burning, keeping a brisk fire, and stir well, putting the remaining apples in as fast as you can, and boil down to seven or eight gallons. The best way to try it is to put some in a saucer, and if it draws cider, it is not cooked enough.—Take a large dipper, and dip it out into crocks. Have ready some ground cinnamon, sassafras, and anise seed; put half a tablespoonful in each crock, and stir it around, tie cloth or paper around them, and set them away. When cold, it forms a sort of skin on top, which must remain unbroken till the time you want to use it.

Nature's Alphabet.

Nature's alphabet is made up of only four letters, wood, water, rock and soil; yet with these four letters she forms such wondrous compositions, such infinite combinations, as no language of twenty-four letters can describe. Nature never grows old; she has no provincialisms. The lark carols the same song in the same keys as when Adam turned his delighted ear to catch the strain; the owl still hoots in a barn, yet loves the note, and screams thro' no other octave; the stormy petrel is as much delighted to sport among the first waves of the Indian Ocean as in the earliest times; birds that lived on flies and laid blueish eggs when Isaac went out into the fields to meditate at even tide, as they will two thousand years hence, if the world does not break her harness from the orb of day. The is as bright as when Lot entered the city of Zoar. The diamond and the onyx, and topaz of Ethiopia, are still as splendid, and the vulture's eye is as fierce as when Job took up his parable. In short, nature's pendulum has never altered its strokes.

Wings of Insects.

The buzzing and humming sounds produced by winged insects are not, as might be supposed, vocal sounds. They result from sonorous undulations imparted to the air by the flapping of their wings. This may be rendered evident by observing that the noise always ceases when the insects alights on any object. The siren has been ingenious applied for the purpose of ascertaining the rate at which the wings of such creatures flap. The instrument being brought into unison with the sound produced by the insect, indicates, as in the case of any other musical sound, the rate of vibration. In this way it has been ascertained that the wings of the gnat flap at the rate of 15,000 times per second. The pitch of the note produced by this insect in the act of flying is, therefore, more than two octaves above the highest note of a seven-octave piano forte.

Say Nothing.

If a great person has omitted rewarding your services, do not talk about it. Perhaps he may not yet have had an opportunity. For they have always on hand expectants innumerable, and the clamorous are too generally gratified before the deserving. Besides, it is the way to draw his displeasure upon you, which can do you no good, but will make bad worse. If the services you did were voluntary, you ought not to expect any return, because you made a present of them unasked. And a free gift is not to be turned into a loan, to draw the person you have served into debt. If you have served a great person merely with a view to self-interest, perhaps he is aware of that, and rewards you accordingly. Nor can you justly complain. He owes you nothing. It was not him you meant to serve.

The Tecumseh Herald,

TECUMSEH, MICH., NOV. 11, 1863.

Proclamation.

In accordance with established usage, and because it is eminently fit that an enlightened and Christian people should make frequent acknowledgment of there humble dependence upon Almighty God for all the blessings of life, I do hereby appoint Thursday, the 26th day of November instant, as a day of praise, Thanksgiving and prayer, and recommend that, suspending all ordinary business, the people, of this State do assemble in their places of public worship, in their houses and by the family fireside, and keep this day as becomes them with reverence and gratitude towards our Heavenly Father, and with sincere and hearty good will towards our felow-men. Let the kindly affections which unite the families together receive a new and stronger impulse from the good cheer of this day; and in the midst of our abundance let us not forget the broken-hearted and the poor Many of our people will be absent from the religious and social gatherings of this Thanksgiving; dwelling in tents and in open field, in armes gallantly defending our heritage of liberty our homes and property. Let the united prayers of this whole Let the united prayers of this whole people arise to the God of battle for them, that He will give them victory and the Nation re-established in unity and peace. That He will shield from want and sorrow the families of these heroic soldiers, and that He will comfort those who mourn for the heroic dead in the camp, the hospital, and on the battle-field.

The people of Michigan have been prospered in buisness during the year that is past beyond all previous example. Let them be thankful; but put away pride and the inordinate love of gain, which leads us too often to make merchandize of the most sacred cause. Let us observe this day with humility; truthfulness and honestly towards ourselves, our fellows and our Creator.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great Seal of the State, at the City of Lansing, this 3d day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three. {L. S.}

AUSTIN BLAIR.

Beecher in England.

Mr Beecher took part in a thanksgiving service held in Arundel Square Congregational Chapel, Islington. Fatigued by the incessant occupation of his time, and the severe labor of his recent public addresses, Mr. Beecher was unwilling that any announcement of his visit should be made, desiring rather to take a quiet and friendly part in the service of the evening.

On ascending the pulpit, he stated that his chief reasons for being present on that occasion was the friendshio and esteem he entertained for their pastor, whom he had known in America, and in whose labors and welfare he took a deep interest. He also longed, amidst the excitement of public meetings, for a little quiet communion with Christian people. As he joined in their supplication and their songs of thanksgiving to God, his heart was among his own dear people at home. He thought of the happy seasons of Christian fellowship so often enjoyed with them. Yet still he could truly and heartily join in the thinksgiving of the English people for the abundant harvest with which God had blessed them. The land of their fathers was the land of his fathers. The prosperity of England and the gifts of the Almighty to her were the subject of rejoicing in thousands of Christian hearts in his own land.

He had been much struck in traveling through the country by seeing little armies of wheat ricks standing side by side, ten, twenty, or even thirty together.—Each stack was composed of separate sheaves, and then again of separate stalks. Every stalk had its full ear, and each ear its little crowd of seeds full of fruitfulness and fertility, as it were of God's power and goodness rolled up into the little bundle He referred to the patient and uncomplaining endurance of the men of Lancashire, and grieved that the sad troubles of his country should be the cause of so much sorrow and want amongst them, yet rejoiced in the fact that their sympathies were enlisted for liberty against slavery.

It is impossible to convey any idea of the tender and affectionate strain of Mr. Beecher's remarks. His unsparing severity against oppression proves itself to be but the result of his deep sympathy with the oppressed. None who listened to his kind voice and Christian words in Arundel Square Chapel can ever after cherish hard thoughts of this uncompromising champion of the slave.

☞ In attempting to destroy weeds, the farmer must remember two rules:—"Do not let them flower," and "Do not let them breathe." The leaves are the lungs of the plant, and without their aid, it cannot long sustain itself.

State Items.

The towns of Adams, Pittsford, Wright, Wheatland, Camden, Cambria and Jefferson, in Hillsdale Co., have furnished their quota of men by volunteering, and so escaped the draft. In some other towns in the county the draft will be exceedingly light. Howell has sixteen men to furnish. The draft in the 6th district has passed off quietly. Many of the loyal people of Shiawassee county feel hurt that the Government should have thought it necessary to send a company of soldiers there to keep order, (the 38th Company, 1st Battalion Invalid Corps,) although the soldiers have been cordially received, the Union-loving ladies of Corunna, giving them a sumptuous dinner on the 31st ult.

Lumbering operations in the Saginaw Valley during the coming winter, promise to be largely increased over that of any former year. The very high prices of lumber the past season have caused a complete clearing out of everything saleable in that line in the valley. Large preparations are making for the winter campaign against the army of pines lying along the banks of the various tributaries of the Saginaw. Numerous camps are being established far beyond the confines of civilization, and large numbers of lumbermen will soon take up their winter quarters in them. Immense quantities of supplies and forage are now being transported to the front, which ere long, will be the sene of the most active operations.

IN BAY CITY 21 NEW BUILDINGS HAVE been erected on the "burnt district" alone, since the great fire in July last, nearly all of these are stores or shops. These, however, comprise not more than one-eigth of the whole number of buildings erected during the past summer; and still the demand for room is no nearer supplied than it was last spring. The Sherman house has been remodelled and enlarged to double its former size, and its name changed to the "Boutell House" The machinery has been taken out of Watson's Stave Factory, and the building is to be moved to the line of Water street and converted into stores. Two brick stores are also to be erected on its present site.

A little daughter of Mr. Charles F. Bashford, of Marion, Livingston county, aged two years, accidentally fell into a kettle of boiling water on the 29th ult., and was so severely scalded that she died the following morning.

A disgraceful fight occurred in a saloon on Huron street, Ann Arbor, on Sunday last. Battles, tumblers, etc., were used indiscriminately. One man got his head badly cut and another came near losing a finger. Both were on the drafted list.

The thieves who stole a horse from Downs of Ranson Center, Hillsdale Co., and also broke into the store of F. F. Palmer at the same place on the night of the 20th ult., have been caught and are now in the county jail awaiting the setting of the Circuit Court.

7,600 barrels of apples were shipped from Adrian over the Southern Railroad during the month of October just passed, for which the farmers and coopers have probably received $10,000.

At the last County Fair of Monroe county, a premium of $10 was offered by W. H. Boyd, and $5 by another gentleman, to any person who sets out and makes live the largest number of shade trees, maple or elm, on any of the highways leading out of Monroe, within ten miles, previous to the next county fair.

ANOTHER BANK SWINDLE.—We were yesterday shown two bank bills— one of One dollar and one of Three dollars— of "The River Raisin and Lake Erie Railroad Company," just issued by J. Q. Adams and associates at the City of Monroe. This bank claims, on the face of the bill "Capital 300,000"—but doesn't say so many "pollars." The bills are got up in the green back style; they are made payable to the order of J. Q. Adams, at the Company's office in Monroe. They are signed J. Q. Adams, President," and N. Luce, Cashier. One of the bills we saw was cut from a sheet numbered 5973, which would indicate a circulation, or preparation to circulate $65,000 to $100,000. We understand that a large amount has already been put afloat in Southern Michigan and Chicago. We caution the public against taking any of the vile trash. The pretence for issuing it is based upon one of the oldest defunct "Railroad charters with banking privleges." In our opinion it has been resuscitated to swindle the public. C. Luce, is said to be a Colonel of a Michigan regiment. It may have been started more for speculating out of our soldiers and the people of the Southwest than for home plunder If any of the trash is offered to our soldiers, we hope they will shoot the operator. We trust the authorities will take prompt and summary measures to squelch the vile thing and punish the operators to the extent of the law. Michigan has suffered enough from such swindles. Let no man be deceived by them.—Tribune and Adv.

A man named Zero Kelly, of New Bedfore, Mass., has been found guilty of fitting out a slaver, called the Talmaroo.

Horace Greeley's History of the War has been given to C. D. Case & Co., of Hartford Ct., for $16,000, and is to be sold by traveling agents. We prophesy for it the largest sale of any book since Helper's Crisis.

Certain lawsuits have lately revealed the existence in Somerset county, England, of a licentious institution, known as the "Agapemone" or "Abode of Love." The inmates of this place consist of about 50 rich persons whose property is merged into one fund, who live together in a magnificent house with grounds, &c., and whose whole business is to enjoy themselves in a sort of epicurean retirement from the world. The founder of this family is a Rev. Mr. Prince, who is reverenced as possessing almost divine attributes. The gentlemen are not polygamists like the Mormons, being allowed only one wife at a time; they may change wives, however, or dissolve their matrimonial partnerships as often as they please.

The right of traitors to vote came sharply into question on Monday in Maryland. Gen. Schenk issued an order that Provost-Marshals should arrest all Rebels offering to vote. Gov. Bradford saw fit to resent the order by a proclamation requiring the Judges of Election to conform to the laws of Maryland, and to them only, in receiving or refusing votes. Gen. Schenck suppressed the proclamation, the Governor appealed to the President, and the President responded in a letter which modified in terms one section of Gen. Schenck's order, but which expressly approved its principle, and left its operation, in fact, little hindered.—Whereupon, Gov. Bradford proclaims against the President also, and Gen. Schenck was good natured enough to permit the whole document to be printed, accompanying it with a supplementary order of his own, and the President's letter.

Nashville with a population of 17,000, in 1860, had few friends of the Union.—We have not access to the vote for secession, but understand that it was the center of incipient rebellion, and when the war was really begun, the leaders even anticipated for a time, that Nashville would have the honor of being the Capital city of the Confederacy.

Every part of the city gives proofs and illustrations of the nature and influences of slavery. Fine, aristocratic, and often inconvenient residences are found side by side, or in close proximity to mean, dirty, squalid slave quarters. The Capitol is one of the finest buildings in the United States. It is well situated, and interiorly and exteriorly in good taste, and all its parts in good keeping with its design; but its grounds and surroundings occupy the opposite extreme. Surrounding the Capitol square there are less than half a dozen, even of respectable looking dwellings. None of any beauty or artistic taste. Many of the State and county buildings are in good taste. Some of the stores and private residences would be attractive even in Detroit, but there are so many squalid and dilapidated hovels and tumble-down buildings in their immediate vicinity, that the eye is pained. Decayed and ruined buildings do not furnish a good back ground even to a fine superstructure.

Nature furnished a beautiful spot for a city on a grand scale; but it will require another people than those heretofore occupying Nashville to fill up in good taste even the outline now sketched by its unfinished streets and its scattered buildings.

Mr. Beecher had a hard time of it at Liverpool. The house was densely crowded, and the Southern sympathizers appeared to be in the majority, although many think they were not. Never was a public speaker of character greeted with such an outrageous volley of abuse and insult as was poured out on him. Yet he stood erect and bold as a lion, and he shouted out his words at the top of his voice, as it was absolutely necessary he should do in order to be heard at all. His New England accent in certain words was mimicked, to the great amusement of his opponents. An English writer says: "I never was an admirer of Beecher before, but now I am. A man who could stand up in a foreign country, before thousands who thoroughly detest him and his cause, and speak as he spoke, is certainly something of a hero."

The famous trotting mare, Flora Temple died at Belfast, Me., on the 9th ult. She had trotted a few days previously, and took a sudden cold, of which she died. She made the famous time of two nineteen and three-fourths, the quickest on record, at Kalamazoo three years since She was valued at $1,600.

The question of the finance of the new Mexican empire produced a somewhat unsatisfactory correspondence between the elected Emperor Maximilian and the French Government. There is no difficulty, it is said, about the military arrangments, but France will not guarantee a Mexican loan.

Two new regiments of the invalid corps have been organized, one of which is to be stationed in Detroit.

War News.

The Italian line of battle ship Re Galantumo arrived a day or two since at New York. She comes to this country for the purpose of convoying the new iron-plated steam frigate Re d'Italia, built by W. H. Webb, to the waters of Italy. She was formerly a sailing ship built at the navy yard near Naples, and afterwards converted into a steamer. She brings out the officers and crew of 350 men for the Re d'Italia. The latter vessel, as above stated, was built in this country by Mr. Webb, and launched on the 18th of last April, in the presence of an immense conqourse of people. She is a noble specimen, and Americans may be proud of the skill and workmanship of one of our fellow-countrymen. She is one of the two iron-clad frigates ordered by Victor Emmanuel soon after his acquisition of Naples. She is 294 feet in length, 50 feet beam, 36 feet depth of hold, and 5,500 tons burthen. The gun-deck has ports for 17 guns. Another vessel of the same class, called the Re do Luigi di Portogallo, is now being built by Mr. Webb, and will be ready in the spring.

MAUCH CHUNK, Pa, Nov. 6.—Last night Mr. C. H. Smith, a coal operator at Lewisville, Carlisle county, was murdered in the most brutal manner in his house, in presence of his family, by a gang of Irish outlaws, known as Buckshots. Mr. Smith was a loyal and highly respectable gentleman, and was suspected of giving certain information to the Deputy Provost Marshal by which the latter was enabled to arrest the drafted men.—No Union man's life is safe in Lewisville, Yorktown, Deloraine, Beaver Meadows and other mines of the middle coal fields. Seven or eight murders were committed there within the last few weeks.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Nov. 8th, 4 P. M.—I learn our army is well over the river, and Sedgwick's advance has reached Brandy Station.—No reports of fighting have been received. This will be a week of hot work.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—The advices from the front are to the effect that Gen. Kilpatrick occupied the city and heights of Fredericksburg yesterday, and was in position to hold them until infantry could reach him. Probably the army has already joined him, and is now entrenching itself on the south bank of the Rappahannock. A train conveying wounded from the battle of Kelly's Ford yesterday, to the number of 150, arrived here at 10 o'clock to-night. There were no ambulances there to transport the wounded men to the hospital, and it may be several hours before they will be placed where they can receive surgical attention. Prisoners are expected to arrive during the night.

WARRENTON JUNCTION, Nov. 8.—Upon the lifting of the fog our forces commenced crossing, and found little or no opposition. They are pressing forward toward Culpepper. The 2d division of the corps under Gen. Prince, crossed the river last evening at Kelly's ford and captured 252 of the 2d and 38th North Carolina regiments. Gen. Prince's boys waded the ford, which was about waist deep, and the prisoners had to wade back.

LEAVENWORTH, Nov. 9—Advices from Fort Scott say a courier arrived there on Friday night from Gen. Blunt, bringing information that the rebels, under Cooper and Shelby, eluded our forces, and crossed the Arkansas River with nearly 9000 men and were marching on Blunt, who has 1800 cavalry as an escort to an immense subply train for Fort Smith. Gen Blunt halted his train, and made preparations for defense.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9.—The rebel authorities still presist in refusing to recognize officers of colored regiments in the system of exchange. Our Government demands that they be included in the cartel; and all exchange of prisoners has ceased until this difference is adjusted.

A letter from Libby Prison, of Oct., 13th, says: "There is no meat in the rations for prisoners. The people of Richmond are on the verge of starvation, and another bread riot has occurred.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 9.—The steamers St. Louis and Moses Taylor arrived from Panama, bringing dates from Mexico of Oct. 21st.

The French were preparing for an expedition towards Quartero.

Gen. Foley had left Mexico for Vera Cruz, on his way to France, on the 24th of October, having given over his command to Gen. Bazino, who appears to be much more popular.

It is said that Juarez has re organized the army of the Liberal party, and it is marching towards Quartero to meet the French. A conflict is expected shortly. Minister Corwin has, so far, taken no active part in Mexican troubles.

WASHINGTON, Nov, 9—The star, of this city, says: "we hear that Gen. Grant has telegraphed hither that two of the most advanced positions of Gen. Burnside have been assailed and captured by the rebels, who made prisoners of one-half of two regiments that were holding them at the time."

ROBACK'S STOMACH BITTERS. Having been called upon to examine the formula or receipe for the above Bitters which has been given to me by the inventor, I take pleasure in stating to the public, that they are well known to the medical profession as possessing properties purely tonic, and the combination is well calculated, and especially adapted to that class of diseases arising from a disordered condition of the hepatic functions, or general derangement of the liver, so common in the malarious districts of the West and South. They contain a larger proportion of tonic ingredients than any other Bitters that have been submitted to me for chemical examination. I bespeak for them a wide spread popularity and cordially commend them to the public use.

Very respectfully,
C. W. ORDWAY, Analytical Chemist.

☞ We learn that while the proprietor of this paper, who is on a trip to the scenes of his childhood, Cattarugus Co., N. They produced papers to prove residence, occupation, &c., but it was no go; so they fell in, took up time, and started in search of red tape phylosophy. While on the way to the provost office, Mr. Wood espied the identical run-a-ways, released Burlingame and Ream, secured the deserters, and went on his way, saying "I'll see you again, young men at the Whipple House,' Mr. Burlingame has deserted again, Mr. Wood, but as his wife is with him, perhaps you had better let him slide. The above is the first time we ever heard of a printer deserting "and did'nt know it."

☞ M. Y. Hood has gone to N. Y. city. Look out for new goods.

☞ A large number of silly girls in Adrian Union School have been fooled by "correspondence with a view to matrimony," are engaged in exchanging tender missives with villains of the most unprincipled sort.

☞ The 11th Michigan Cavalry now musters 700 men at Kalamazoo, and has 150 enlisted but not yet mustered. Capt. D. M. Philips' company, mostly raised at Albion, has been mustered in as Co. A.

☞ All persons should be on the lookout for altered greenbacks. Twos raised to fifties in the most skillful manner are in circulation in Chicago, and would easily deceive the inexperienced.

☞ If you see any thoughtful man wending his way to this office with a load of good dry wood, don't stop him, if you do, the devil will be after you certain.

☞ A single firm, doing business in London, pays $150,000 a year to the Times, for advertising.—Exchange.

Pshaw; that's nothing. There is a firm doing business in this town, who don't advertise a cent's worth in double that time.

MARRIAGE.—Marriage is one of the great blessings of the world; Herrick Allen's Gold Medal Saleratus is the other One is the result of love, admiration and courtship; the other is the result of perseverence, science and skill. Where matches have proven unsuitable, this article is well calculated to harmonize and make home happy and pleasant, by always giving you the nicest, whitest lightest and best Bread, Biscuit, Cakes and Puddings that woman's hand can make, which purpose cannot be accomplished by the using of any other Saleratus or soda. Most merchants sell it.

☞ The Union School in this place is now in full blast, with a very large attendence of scholars. If the increase of scholars should continue, we should soon need an addition to the present house, in order to accommodate the scholars. We have no doubt but what there will be a steady increase, and we predict, that before three years shall roll away there will be more than six hundred scholars who will seek opportunities of education in the Union School at Tecumseh. This is a very healthy location, and those who desire to send their children to school, will select a healthy location. Let the people here keep pace with the demand and afford the facilities for all that some.

☞ Ozro Tucker a lad some twelve or fourteen years of age, while out gunning was quite seriously injured by the accidental discharge of his gun. He had placed it against a tree and when in the act of raising it the hammer caught on a log, causing its discharge and lodging its contents in his right wrist. We have not learned that any bones were broken.

Progress of the Draft.

The draft in the First Congressional District was resumed at Detroit, Friday morning. L. G. Berry, Collector of Internal Revenue, and H. Underwood, Esq. both of Adrian, were chosen to superintend the drawing for Lenawee County.

Among those drafted from Woodstock, is Sheffield Knowles, a Quaker, Robert Blay, a member of Col. Barns' colored regiment, Joseph Swartout, who was married on Sunday last, but not soon enough adparently, to escape the draft, and two brothers named Ford. Two Quaker's sons from Rollin were also among the "elect," and a son of the Supervisor was "chosen." During the drawing from this town, a man in the crowd, whose next door neighbor was drawn, sang out, quite excitedly, "give her another turn, old man—I don't want to go;" and it may be that the extra revolution of the wheel saved him, for he escaped.

Tecumseh filled her quota by volunteers
Madison drafted seventeen.
Dover five.
Seneca eighteen.
Fairfield twenty-six.
Ogden six.
Riga nine.
Franklin two.
Cambridge two.
Woodstock eleven.
Rollin fifteen.
Rome twelve.
Raisin sixteen.
Adrian three.
Ridgeway eight.
Blissfield twenty three.
Palmyra sixteen.

WAR MEETING.

Prepare for the Next Draft.

TECUMSEH O. K.

The citizens of Tecumseh Township are requested to assemble at an adjourned meeting, at Union Hall, in this village,

Saturday Evening Nov. 13th, at 7 o'clock, to consider measurers to fill our quota and avoid the January draft.

M. A. PATTERSON, President,
L. LILLEY, Secretary.
Tecumseh, Nov. 10, 1863.

DIED.

Of Typhoid Fever, in this Village, Oct. 14th, 1863, ADRIAN V. YAWGER, of the firm of Burlingame & Yawger.

The subject of this notice was born in the State of New York the 10th of Sept, in the year 1819. He settled in this place about fourteen years ago. He has always been known as a peaceable, industrious and enterprising citizen. He has been a consistent member of the Baptist Church in this village, for about thirteen years. In all the financial matters of the Church which has been bereaved by the Providence which removed him from its midst, he will be specially missed.

His last sickness was very painful, yet he bore it with much patience and resignation. He died with a firm and substantial hope of a glorious resurrection beyond the grave. He has left a widow and five children to mourn his loss. They are comforted by the assurance that their loss is his gain.

The following Resolutions were passed at a meeting of the I. O. O. F.

Whereas, God in his all wise Providence has seen fit to remove from our midst, our beloved brother, A. V. Yawger, and as a testimony of our respect and high regard for his memory, be it

Resolved, That in his death the Lodge has lost an esteemed officer and brother.

Resolved, That while the melancholy event saddens our hearts, we have still the pleasing reflection that our late Brother's life was one of uprightness and fidelity both as a citizen and as a member of the Order. He bore a good name and the respect and esteem of all who knew him.

Resolved, That we tender to the Family of our deceased Brother our sympathy in the bereavement which has fallen on them and the Order, and as a testimony of our high and profound respect for the deceased, we will remember him and his family.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased brother, and that they be published in the Tecumseh HERALD.

Shall be every freemon's cry;
Union formed to stand forever,
Union, the watchword, and reply.

The "UNION LIVERY," all do say,
Is just the place to go to,
To get a rig that's nice and gay,
With bells, and whip, and buffalo;

Horses gay, and safe, and fleet;
Buggies new, and nice, and strong:
Cutters fine, and all complete—
Just get in and go along.

It is the ladies' chief delight
To take a drive in our carriages:
Put on your fixen's boys, and try it,
They'll pay toll on all the bridges.

Come one, and all, by night or day,
We'll make the prices suit you,
For single rig, or four horse sleigh,
And drivers, too, to please you.

Our stables, too, are new and good:
Just drive your horses in and bait,
With hay, or straw, or ots or corn—
There's room enough, you need not wait.

The poetry machine has bu'sted. Good bye. Come and try us at the Union Livery and Feed Stable, betwen Haydens' and Tindall's Warehouse's on railroad street.

UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER

"A child can readily wring out a tubfull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large per centage on its cost. We think the machine much more than PAYS FOR ITSELF EVEBY YEAR in the saving of garments. There are several kinds, nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs, otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly FOUR YEARS CONSTANT USE."

Every Wringer with Cog Wheels is Warranted in every particular.

NO WRINGER CAN BE DURABLE WITHOUT COG-WHEELS.

A good CANVASSER wanted in every town.

THE GREAT

AMERICAN TEA COMPANY,

51 Vesey Street New York;

Since its organization, has created a new era in the history of

Wholesaling Tea in this Co.

They have introduced their selections of Teas and are selling them not over

TWO CENTS [02 Cents] per pound above

COST,

Never deviating from the ONE Price asked.

Another peculiarity of the Company is that their Tea Taster not only devotes his time to the selection of their TEAS as to quality, value, and particular styles for particular localities of country; but he helps the TEA buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this, but points out to him the best bargains.

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all others.

If he is no judge of TEA, or the Market, of his time is valuable, he has all the benefits of a well organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.

This enables all tea buyers—no matter if they are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York merchants.

Parties can order Teas and will be served by us as well as though they came themselves being sure to get original packages, true weights and tares and the tea warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Company Teas, which will be sent to all who order comprising

Hyson, Young Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, Twankay and Skin.

Oolong, Souchong, Orange & Hyson Pekoe,

JAPAN TEA OF EVERY DISCRIPTION, colored and uncolored.

This list has each kind of Tea divided into FOUR classes, namely; Cargo, high Cargo, Fine, Finest, that every one may understand from description and the prices annexed that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea Trade.

We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over two cents (02 Cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who have heretofore been paying Enormous Profits.

T. Wilcox & Gibbs' Sewing Machine is the best in use without regard to price. for Family Sewing,

Braiding,
Hemming,
Feiling,
Tucking,
Cording,

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seem, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances to survive the wash-tub."

A patented device of great utility to Hemmers prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it.—Phila. Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder.—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines.—Pennsylvanian.

"A Machine in the opinion of the committee more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs', as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21 1860.

"After much wear and many washings the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others"—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experience in our own family"—Boston Traveller

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable"—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has in so short a time, acquired such well-merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette

"We esteem it the best machine for family use The stitch is unexceptionable."—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

DR. ROBACK'S

and

BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,

Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,

Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Fluid Extract Buchu

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the
BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATER or EXCRETORY depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflammation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, or CHILDREN.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEAKNESS

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot Hands,	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin,	Pallid Countenance,

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follow

in one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those dire ful diseases."

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION,

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

Requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

I could furnish any quantity of testimonials of its efficiency from from my own patients, but the practice of parading bought and fictitious ones before the public is so prevalent I do not deem it advisable. My object is to place my medicine before the public, not alone to make money, but to do good. It is proverbially true of the American Ladies, that not ten perfectly healthy ones may be found in any one vicinity.

Let not disease destroy your constitution. Try a bottle of my PERIODICAL DROPS, and you will be satisfied that I am no imposter. Tell your afflicted friends what restored the bloom of health to your cheeks, and thereby confer a favor more valuable than gold. For painful or scanty menstruation it is just the thing; I have now in my mind an instance of a lady who had been suffering from painful menstruation two or three years confining her to her room each time; she had applied to several various physicians, without relief, when one bottle of my DROPS entirely cured her.

After the Battle.

The angel stars are weeping,
Above the battle plain,
And death is slowly floating
On the leaply crimson rain.

A soldier's soul is passing
Up to the living God,
And his spirit feet are treading
The courts by man unsod.

It is a sore decked body
That he has left below,
The cruel wounds all open
Where the blood has ceased to flow,

I wonder if that soldier
From the realms of endless night,
Can see a heart-worn mother
In her Northern home to-night?

I know that in that battle,
In all the fierce alarm,
For her and for his country
He has raised his strong right arm.

I know that in the anguish
Preceding Death's eclipse,
The sacred name of Mother
Was still upon his lips.

And will he not protect her,
Now freed from earth's control,
And love her more than ever?
Oh, answer me, my soul.

Winding Up the War.

In August last, a foraging party, numbering about fifty men, under a Lieutenant, went into Helena, Arkansas, loaded with mementoes more than forage. Gen. Curtis hearing how the party was loaded, road out on the road toward the picket, to meet them. Soon they came along, each man loaded with some article he had gobbled on the road. One had an eight day clock, another had toiled under the weight of a feather bed; another had a pillow case full of books; another had under his saddle a handsome rug taken from some bedroom. All the goods were ordered to the Provost office. Last in the party was an Irishman, lugging an old fashioned spinning wheel. As he deposited the keepsake on the pile, the General demanded

"Well, sir, where did you get this machine?"

"Faith, gin'ral, I confiscated it on the farm where I wint."

"Was this all you could find?"

"Indade it was! Sure, gin'ral, I was the last man in the house, so I was."

"Well what do you intend to do with such a concern?"

"Bedad, gin'ral an I just thought it would be a nate thing to giveyez."

"What in the devil do I want of such a machine?"

"To spin cotton, an sure an' if it ain't no use for that, use it to wind up the war.

The general laughed, and allowed Pat to keep the machine."

Is it a Superstition?

A bridge broke down at Terre Haute a few days since, drowning a number of persons The Terre Haute Express says:

One incident connected with the recovery of the bodies is worthy of more general publicity. All had been found with the exception of that of Miss Thralls and the approaching night was about to compel the search to be abandoned, when some one suggested that by placing quicksilver in a loaf of bread and putting it in the water, it would stop directly over the body. Accordingly a loaf was procured and two ounces of quicksilver placed in it then taken about fifty feet above the bridge and thrown into the water. It floated down in the current, which is quite strong at that place, when, suddenly it stopped, and circling around, was apparently about to sink, when a gentleman in a boat caught it, and grappling hooks being put down, the bony was found directly beneath, in from eight to ten feet of water. We had read of this mode some ten years since, but supposing it one of the many superstitions, had almost forgotten it. What the philosophy is we cannot tell.

☞ The captain of a vessel just arriving in the harbor of New York, directed one of the crew, an Irishman, to throw the buoy overboard. He was then stepping into the cabin. On his return the captain inquired if his order had been obeyed. The Irishman, with great simplicity, replied: "I could not catch the boy but I threw overboard the old cook."

☞ In Texas, secret societies after the manner of the Know Nothings have been organised, by which Union men know each other. This party is so powerful, that last August they elected Morgan, a union man, to the Confederate congress, over Wright, one of the most ultra disunionists.

A Girl-Soldier's Story.

In St. Louis, Missouri, a short time since, a young girl was arrested for wearing male attire. Her appearance, manner, style of conversation, and the account she gives of herself, place her above the ordinary class of women who affect the garb of the opposite sex. All who converse with her are impressed with the conviction that her story is true. In light gray pants, vest and coat, and light felt hat, she looks like a sprightly boy of fourteen. She is a medium (woman's) size, black and curling hair, large lustrous, dark eye, regular features, ruddy and fresh-looking, and in very generous health. Her narrative, received from her in the calaboose, is as follows:

"I was born in Michigan, near to and north of Kalamazoo City. My father was heir to a large landed estate in England, and had an abundance of money, with which he traveled about for pleasure. I was taken from my birth-place when only a few months old. Mother died when I was seven years old, then father had the whole care of my brothers and me. We had a private tutor who traveled with us. Brothers were sent to college. When I was eleven, father died. At fourteen I was married to a member of a minstrel troupe. He had some five thousand dollars in money, and with it went into partnership with his uncle, who lost his life and the money while crossing the Atlantic. When I had been married eighteen months, my husband died, and I was left wholly to the care of my two brothers. The elder was clerk in a banking house, and the other was still at college in Ohio.

"When the war broke out my younger brother came home, and they both enlisted. First they consulted me about enlisting. I at last consented. I considered that the country needed every able-bodied man to aid in putting down the rebellion Their regiment went to Baltimore, and I afterwards became restless and uneasy, and wanted to join them. My younger brother was anxious I should and my elder brother reluctantly consented. Going to Baltimore, I entered the hospital as nurse to the sick and wounded. There I frequently met my two brothers, and was tolerably contented, but at length I received insults and ungrateful return from the recovered soldiers. Some were kind-hearted and grateful. I was determined to be with my brothers, yet I could not endure the continued insults, and so I asked my brothers' consent to dress in male attire and join their regiment in some capacity so as to be near them. I proposed to act as orderly to the major, who was our second cousin on father's side. My brother at first peremptorily refused his consent, but the younger and myself insisted, and he finally but reluctantly yielded. When I assumed male clothes my younger brother complimented me, and said I looked like a great green boy. He thought the disguise was perfect. He took me to some rough places to accustom me to act naturally. I recollect going with a large party where the glasses were handed round to drink. As I undertook to 'tip the glass,' my hand trembled awkwardly, but no one seemed to notice it. I enlisted, and was sworn in as the major's orderly. The regiment was ordered to New Orleans, under Gen. Butler. My younger brother was wounded in a skirmish, and died in consequence. I nearly went crazy. I was in the second assault on Baton Rouge, and received a severe sabre cut on the right arm. A ball also grazed one of my lower limbs, and a number passed through my clothes.

"In a short time the major discovered my sex, but, learning all the circumstances, and that I would stay with my brothers, he let me remain, and treated me as respectfully and kindly as a father could do. I got on very well till on one occasion a man who suspected me, attacked me in an out of the way place, when I had to defend myself, and after giving him warning, I shot him with a four-shooter. I meant to disable his arm, but he stooped so quick that the ball entered his face and found its way under his skull-cap. I attended him for two weeks, till he was out of danger, but would not permit him to speak to me.—When he attempted to, I told him I should leave unless he desisted, and he then would not. Others wondered much, but didn't understand, and said I was a foolish boy. After I left him he sent me a written apology, very humble, and begging my forgiveness in such a manner that I forgave him.

"I remained with few interruptions or difficulties as orderly for the major, but bye-and-bye he was taken sick, and I took the Louisiana fever, and had the erysipelas, and was very homesick. This was last January. The major got furloughs for us. I accompanied him to Northern Illinois, his home, and then went on to Michigan. On the way my health became good again. I resumed female dress when I came to the place where I had lived with my husband—Pleasant Valley, near Detroit. Staid about four weeks, then started out again, and took citizen's (male) dress. Meanwhile the major had resigned. I had resolved to join my brother again at New Orleans. He was my only hope and stay in the world. I traveled by rail to Cairo, and thence to Memphis on the steamboat Belle of Memphis, and from Memphis on another boat to Lake Providence. I had heard of the illness of a college mate of my dead brother, and found him (the college friend) in the hospital at Lake Providence. He was also our second cousin on mother's side. I went to the hospital and staid two weeks nursing him till he died. Then I took a boat to go to Cairo, in order to go to New York, and from thence by ship to New Orleans, but on the way not getting my trunk checked, I lost it, with a hundred dollars in gold, and some greenbacks, a revolver that cost thirty dollars, and an ivory-handled stiletto. The trunk was too heavy for me to carry to the state-room, and the porter neglected to do it, and next morning it was missing.—Then I had left only money enough to take me to St. Louis, where I came to the conclusion I must go and try to get work.

"I got there about the 29th of March or 1st of April, and went first to the Taylor House, but stayed only a short time, when I got work at the Everett House as a dining-room boy. I was all the time anxious and nearly distracted about my only remaining brother, from whom I could hear nothing, and after writing to him in vain. I wrote home, and received a letter that he died of fever So I was left all alone. At the Everett House I succeeded as waiter, though I had never done any housework, and my sex was not discovered, though I had to sleep with a boy. I could not knead bread, but could make pastry, having learned it as a pastime. I had to be among the boys as one of them, and they urged me to go to the Bowery and the Varieties, till at last I consented, and one night went with Jimmy and another boy to the Bowery. We were followed by two fellows of the house, who accused us of being girls, which I denied; but Jimmy said he was one. One of them went off with him, and the other staid by me and I could not get rid of him, but would not go back to the hotel for fear of trouble.

"At last I told him he must leave or I'd call a watchman; he refused, and the altercation drew the attention of a watchman across the street, who called to us to come to him. I told him to come to us. Then I said, 'What shall I do, for I am really a girl?' My companion told me to run up a flight of steps, and so I did, but the officer caught me and locked me up. The recorder took an interest in me and released me, advising me to change my dress and leave the city. I went and enlisted as a major's orderly, and went to Rolla, where he was so pleased with my capacity that he promoted me as clerk.

"While I was this employed, an Iowa young man, an officer, made my acquaintance, and frequently came to see me, and frequently came to see me, and seemed to be very fond of my company, but without suspecting me. Finally, I fell desperately in love with my visitor, but concealed the fact. We continued intimate and much together, and I finally disclosed to him my true character. The result was we engaged to be married this fall. He owns a small store in Davenport. We arranged that I would come down to St. Louis, resume female attire, and get a discharge from the service. I came for that purpose, arriving two weeks ago. In passing the Everett House I was recognized by a policeman, who arrested me. I told him who I was, and begged of him not to make it public, as it might bring a crowd. I was brought in here. I dislike lodging here; would prefer to sleep on the ground, as I have frequently done, without covering and in the rain."

After hearing her eventful history steps were taken to effect her liberation, and she went on her way rejoicing; and it is hoped that she married the man whom she loved, although no report has reached us to that effect.

The Kissing Deacon.

In one of our New England towns lived Deacon Brown, a staid, dignified sort of Christian, and a model of propriety. Deacon Brown had the misfortune to lose his wife, and at the age of forty found himself with four small children, without a mistress to his farm house. As he could not immediately take another wife and avoid exciting scandal, and could not get along without some one to take charge of the kitchen and nursery, he had recourse to employing a young woman as housemaid. Nancy Sterns was a laughing, romping beauty, who delighted in experimenting upon the deacon by way of testing the strength of human nature. For a long time the Deacon was invulnerable; but at last, in a moment of unguarded weakness he was led into temptation, and into committing a slight indiscretion with his beautiful housemaid. When in his wonted coolness and presence of mind, he was horrified at the enormity of his sin. In vain he repented and grieved over lost virtue. Finally, as a last effort for easing his conscience, at the conclusion of the services on the following Sabbath morning he arose and, requested the forbearance of the brethren and sisters a few moments when he electrified them by making the following confession:

"My Christian friends, you all know that I lost my dear wife some months ago, (sobs and tears,) and that Nancy Sterns has been keeping house for me; and you know that I have a little child not a year old. Well, that little child would cry in the night, and it would be a long time before I could quiet it, and last Tuesday night—God forgive me!—the child cried so hard that Nancy arose and came into the room and leaned over the bed to hush the child—and, brothers and sisters, her leaning over the bed made me forget Christ

Here the worthy Deacon broke down entirely, and stood weaping, wailing and blowing his nose.

"What did you do?" sternly demanded the minister.

"I—I—I ki—sed her!" stammered out the deacon between his sobs, "but I have been very sorry about it, and prayed to be forgiven—and I want you to forgive me and pray for me, brothers and sisters."

As the Deacon bowed himself upon his seat like a mighty oak before a tornado, Deacon goodfellow arose and astonished the audience still more by saying:

"Brothers and sisters, you have heard what brother Brown has said, and how he wants your forgiveness. For my part I think brother Brown is penitent, and I am willing to forgive him with my whole heart. And, brothers and sisters, I will add still further, that, if I had no wife and a pretty girl like Nancy Sterns should come to my room and lean over my bed, I'd kiss her and abide the consequences."

Drunkenness.

The Washington correspondent of the New York Independent, writing under the date of Oct 24, says:

"There was a sight to be seen in broad daylight, a few days ago, in front of the Presidential mansion, which gave those who witnessed it a shocking idea of the onward strides which the vice of intemperance has made in good society, during the last few years. A woman clad in the richest and most fashionable garments, with the diamonds flashing from her slender fingers in the slant western sunshine, sat upon the stout balustrade, unable to proceed on her way homeward without betraying herself. At last she arose and started on, swaying to and fro, and yet soon rested again, utterly unable to proceed The carriage of a foreign minister passed by—the poor woman was noticed, and it turned, stopped, took in the lady, and carried her to her luxurious home; for the lady is wealthy, and occupies a high social position; but she was drunk in the streets of Washington."

GENEROUS.—The President of the Sanitary Commission, acknowledges in an eloquent letter, the gift of $8,267.29 to the Commission, by Miss Charlotte Cushman, being the proceeds of five dramatic representations. This magnificent product of the genius of Miss Cushman, devoted to the relief of our suffering soldiers is the most striking exemplification yet made of woman's power and will to do her full part in the national struggle. It is proposed that the amount shall be expended through the Home Branches of the Commission, that it may thus reach our soldiers on the field and the hospitals, charged with the blessings, prayers and tears of American womanhood.

Forgiveness.

Let not the sun in Capricorn go down upon thy wrath, but write thy wrong in water, draw the curtain of night upon injuries; shut them up in the tower of oblivion, and let them be as though they had been. Forgive thine enemies totally, and without any reserve of hope that, however God will avenge thee.

To do no injury, nor to take none was a principle which, to my former years and impatient affections, seemed to contain enough of morality; but my more settled years and Christian constitution, have fallen into severer resolutions. I can hold there is no such thing as injury; but if there be, there is no such thing as revenge and no such thing as the contempt of an injury; that to hate another is to malign himself; that the truest way to love one another is to despise ourselves. I were unjust unto my own conscience, if I should say I am at variance with anything like myself.

Let age, not envy, draw wrinkles on thy cheeks; be content to be envied, but envy not. Emulation may be plausable, and indignation allowable; but admit no treaty with that passion which no circumstances can make good. A displacency at the good of others, because they enjoy it, although we do not want it, is an absurd depravity, striking fast unto human nature, from its primitive corruption; which he that can well subdue were a Christian of the first magnitude, and, for aught I know, may have one foot already in heaven.

Where charity is broken, the law itself is shivered, which cannot be whole without love, that is the fullfilling of it. Look humbly upon thy virtues, and though thou art rich in some, yet think thyself poor and naked without that crowning grace, which thinketh no evil, which envieth nor, which heareth, believeth, hopeth endureth all things.

Be your own Man.

People who have been bolstered up and levered all their lives, are seldom good for anything in a crisis. When misfortune comes they look around for somebody to cling to or lean upon. If the prop is not there down they go. Once down they are as helpless as capsized turtles or unhorsed men in armor, and they cannot find their feet again without assistance. Such silken fellows no more resemble self-made men who have fought their way to position, making difficulties their stepping-stones, and deriving determination from their defeat, than vines resemble oaks, or spluttering rushlights the stars of Heaven. Efforts persisted to achievements train a man to self-reliance; and when he has shown to the world that he can trust himself, the world will trust him. We say, therefore, that it is unwise to deprive young men of the advantages which result from energetic action, by "boosting" them over obstacles they ought to surmount alone No one ever swam well who placed his confidence in a cork jacket; and if, when breasting the sea of life, we cannot buoy ourselves up and try to force ourselves ahead by dint of our energies we are not salvage, and it is of little consequence whether we "sink or swim, survive or perish."

One of the best lessons a father can give his son is this: "work; strengthen your moral and mental faculties, as you would strengthen your muscles by vigorous exercise. Learn to conquer circumstances; you are then independent of fortune. The men of athletic minds who left their marks on the years in which they lived, were all trained in a rough school. They did not mount their high position by the help of leverage; they leaped into chasms, grappled with the opposing rocks, avoided avalanches, and, when the goal was reached, felt that but for the toil that had strengthened them as they strove, it could never have been attained."

WONDERS OF MODERN GUNNERY.—When our war broke out we had no cannon that could bombard Charleston from Fort Sumter, distance three and three-eighths miles. Now we have guns that can reach the city and go a mile beyond, from Morris Island, distance five miles.—And guns have been invented that will carry enormous missiles nine miles. One of these on a ship could bombard a city without being itself seen. Thus, an enemy can destroy an object of attack while out of sight and hearing. For at seven miles distance the curvature of the earth renders a ship invisible. Such is the progress of modern gunnery.

☞ It is a great error to whip, beat or kick a cow during milking, because she happens to be restless and unquiet.—It does no good, and in the end the cow becomes afraid of the person who is in the habit of so doing, and rapidly becomes worse, instead of better. Treat the cows gently and kindly, like all other animals.

The same care should be taken of working animals as of milch cows. Give them good shelter and good bedding.—They should be fed at regular hours, at least twice a day, and have access to plenty of pure water.

☞ One of the names drawn to fill the quota of Charlotte, Eaton County, was that of a young man who formerly resided there, but some time ago went to California. Singularly enough, however, he was not drafted; and received the congratulations of his friends as he passed through this city en route for home on Tuesday last.—Jackson Eagle.

☞ Wilbur F. Story, the hoary libertine who edits the rebel organ in Chicago, has been arrested for grossly libelling a young woman of Albion, Illinois named Emily Weaver, accusing her of running away with a negro. He was released on $500 bail to appear in a criminal suit. A civil action has also commenced for $1,000.

☞ Friction matches should be kept in covered metallic boxes or cases. A house in Bangor, Me, was lately fired by rats or mice carrying matches between the floors and nibbling at the phosphorus, of which they are exceedingly fond.

☞ The latest dodge to get whiskey through the lines into the army, is for women to wear gutta percha breasts filled with old Bourbon of great quality and greatest age from which the soldiers extract the stimulants in the usual way.

☞ Willie Johnson, a drummer in the 3d Vermont infantry, aged 13, has been presented by secretary Stanton in person with the Star Medal of Honor, for heroic conduct in the seven days' fight before Richmond. He was the only drummer in his division who brought his drum from the field.

☞ T. D. McGee, Esq., is about to lecture in Kingston, C. W., on "The future of Canada."

Susannah Evans, a Welch girl of fifteen is lecturing on Temperance, in the East with remarkable effect. She created much sensation in her native country.

☞ It may sound like a paradoxe, yet the breaking of both wings of an army is a pretty sure way to make it fly.

☞ Two grandsons of Henry Clay and sons of Henry Clay, Jr., who fell at Buena Vista, have died within a year of disease contracted in camp—the elder, Henry, fighting for his country; Thomas Jefferson, in arms against the flag in whose defence his father and brother fell.

☞ A citizen of L. I. recently found upon his door step a basket containing a little child, some five months old, to which was pinned a note, charging the gentleman with being its father and imploring him to support it. A scene ensued between the injured wife and indignant husband, the latter strenuously asserting his innocence. The wife was at last induced to forgive her husband, painfully adding that it was there mutual off-spring which has just been taken from the cradle for the purpose of playing the joke.

THE MICHIGAN SOLDIERS RELIEF ASSOCIATION of Washington.—We regret to hear, through a private letter, that, owing to a want of support from home, this Association — composed of the Michigan residents at the Capitol—has been obliged to dispense with the services of Miss Wheelock, one of the capable and efficient nurses whom it has employed to look after and attend upon our sick and wounded soldiers; and it is expected they will also be compelled, ere long, to dispense with those of the devoted Mrs. Brainard a lady whose labor in behalf of suffering men it would be impossible to over-estimate. Some time in December the Association will probable hold a final meeting and dissolve its organization altogether.—The transfer of all the contributions from this State to the Sanitary Commission has forced this step upon them The Association has done a noble work for the soldiers, and we very much fear they suffer for its demise. We trust that some plan may be devised by which the services of Mrs. Brainard, at least, may not be lost to our soldiers in the Washington hospitals. Will not our home Aid Societies attend to it?

The Tecumseh Herald,

TECUMSEH, MICH., NOV. 19, 1863.

Proclamation.

In accordance with established usage, and because it is eminently fit that an enlightened and Christan people should make frequent acknowledgment of there humble dependence upon Almighty God for all the blessings of life, I do hereby appoint Thursday, the 26th day of November instant, as a day of praise, Thanksgiving and prayer, and recommend that, suspending all ordinary business, the people of this State do assemble in their places of public worship, in their houses and by the family fireside, and keep this day as becomes them with reverence and gratitude towards our Heavenly Father, and with sincere and hearty good will towards our felow-men. Let the kindly affections which unite the families togather receive a new and stronger impulse from the good cheer of this day; and in the midst of our adundance let us not forget the broken-hearted and the poor Many of our people will be absent from the religious and social gatherings of this Thanksgiving: dwelling in tents and in open field, in armes gallantly defending our heritage of liberty our homes and property. Let the united prayers of this whole Let the united prayers of this whole people arise to the God of battle for them, that He will give them victory and the Nation re-established in unity and peace. That He will shield from want and sorrow the families of these heroic soldiers, and that He will comfort those who mourn for the heroic dead in the camp, the hospital, and on the battle-field.

The people of Michigan have been prospered in buisness during the year that is past beyend all previous example. Let them be thankful; but put away pride and the inordinate love of gain, which leads us too often to make merchandize of the most sacred cause. Let us observe this day with humility; truthfulness and honestly towards our fellows and our Creator.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great Seal of the State, at the City of Lansing, this 3d day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three.

{ L. S. }

AUSTIN BLAIR.

JAS. B. POTTER, Secretary of State.

The Approaching Draft.

Gov. Blair has issued a proclamation, calling for recruits to fill up the old regiments, and for men to fill the quota of Michigan under the new call for 300,000 men. To effect this object the same bounties are to be paid to veteran volunteers (that is those who have served nine months and over in the U. S. army) that has heretofore been paid, viz: one month's pay in advance, and a bounty and premium amounting to $402. To all other men accepted and enlisted, one month's pay in advance, and in addition, a bounty and premium amounting to $302 will be paid. In addition to the above bounties, it must be borne in mind that the regular monthly pay of $14, and clothing pay of $3,50 will be paid, making the first years bounty, pay and allowance, $380 for newly enlisted men, besides their rations.

The Deputy Provost Marshal for this State, Col. Hill, has just completed the assignment of the quotas under the new draft to the various towns. The following is the assessment for Lenawee County being a total of 534

Adrian, first ward, eighteen.
" second ward, twenty-six.
" third ward, fifteen.
" fourth ward, twenty-three.
Adrian town, twenty-three.
Blissfield, twenty-four.
Cambridge, seventeen.
Dover, nineteen.
Franklin, twenty-two.
Fairfield, thirty-two.
Hudson, forty-seven.
Madison, twenty.
Macon, nineteen.
Medina, twenty-seven.
Ogden, eighteen.
Palmyra, nineteen.
Raisin, twenty-two.
Riga, ten.
Ridgeway, ten.
Rollin, twenty.
Rome, twenty.
Seneca, twenty-one.
Tecumseh, forty-four.
Woodstock, eighteen.

The following is Gov. Blair's Proclamation in connection with the assessment of quotas in the different towns in the State.

"The proclamation of the President of the United States, of the date of October 18th, calling upon the Governors of the different States, to raise and have enlisted into the United States service for the various Companies and Regiments in the field from their respective States their quotas of three hundred thousand men, has made it a duty again to address the people of Michigan. For the purpose of allowing the State to fill its quota with volunteers and in its own way, the President has authorized recruiting for the companies and regiments in the field until the 3d day of January next, and credit will be given for such recruits by sub districts as immediately previous to the draft just concluded.

To encourage such recruiting, largely increased bounties are offered by the Government. To volunteers in regiments whose terms of service will expire in in 1864 or '65, there will be paid a bounty of three hundred and two dollars, and to veterans who shall re-enlist in such regiments a bounty of four hundred and two dollars. If the State shall fail to furnish its quota by volunteering then a draft will be made for the deficiency, commencing on the fifth day of January 1864.

The quota of this State has been assigned by the War Department, and is 11298 men.

This call is for Soldiers to fill the ranks of the regiments in the field—those regiments which by long and gallant service have wasted their numbers in the same proportion that they have made a distinguished name, both for themselves and the State. The people of Michigan will recognize this as a duty already too long delayed. Our young men I trust will hasten to stamp beside the heroes of Antetam, Gettysburg, Vicksburg, Stoneriver and Chickamuga.

The hopes of the rebellion are steadily perishing. The armies of the Republic are in the midst of their country and they have not power enough to expel them

Fill up the ranks once more, and the next blast of the qugles, for an advance will sound the knell of revolution and herald the return of peace.

Fellow citizens, let us do it willingly gallantly and joyously. The people of Michigan have heretofore earned the grattidude of the Country by their promptness and energy in the support of the Gevernment.

The terms of enlistment of the regiment many of them, will expire next year.—They must not be allowed to perish by such expiration. The quotas of the districts and sub-districts will be published

I earnestly request the Counties' Cities and Towns to move immediately and actively in this work. Volunteers can choose their regiments among those named in the accompanying ordera. The men of townships and neighborhoods can enlist and go together in such regiments as they may prefer, and I do assure them that it is abundently better, both for them and their country, to take service in old and tried regiments than in new ones.

Patrio ic men of Michigan, obey your Country's call.

Northwestern Fair.

The Fair closed with two grand balls on Saturday evening, one at Bryan and one at Metropolitan Halls. The following are the sums received on the several days of the Fair:

	$7,200 00
Total,	$59,050 01

Contributions continued to pour in until the last day of the Fair, among which were $800 given by Express employes in the Northwestern States, $400 from the Philadelphia Corn Exchange, a box of fancy goods from Allegan, in your own State, $200 from the Hon. T. W. Ferry, of Grand Haven, &c.

J. Young Scammon, the wealthy banker, was sufficiently lucky on Saturday to draw, in a raffle, a camel's hair shawl, valued at $1,000.

The Emancipation Proclamation remains as yet undisposed of. It will undoubtedly be purchased for the Chicago Historical Society.

The Art Gallery in McVicker's Theatre building will be continued one week longer and perhaps two, for the benefit of the soldiers' Northwestern Fair.

AN OFFER.—Old Abe's original draft of the Emancipation Proclamation, sent to the recent Fair in this city to be sold for the benefit of the sick and wounded soldiers, has not, we learn from the statement of a committee appointed to sell it, yet been sold. The highest offer for it, the committee state, is from a gentleman in Maine: two thousand dollars. We raise the bid. We will give THREE THOUSAND DOLLARS for it, and the money is ready. This bid is made in all earnestness. Now who will give more!—Let us know, and perhaps we will bid again. We want the document, and are willing to pay extravagantly for it, since the proceeds are to go to the relief of sick and wounded soldiers.—Chicago Times, Nov. 13.

A Chapter of Southern Horrors.

On Friday evening last a gentleman arrived in Philadelphia who has recently traveled in many parts of the South. In his tour he passed through a considerable part of Georgia, North Carolina and Eastern Virginia. Less than eight days since he was in Richmond. He passed through rebeldom disguised. The following brief recital of horrors or most of them fell under his personal observation.

No less than five attempts at negro insurrection have been made in Georgia since the month of July last. As a terror to the slaves some were shot, others hung, and seven or eight were burned, one of the latter being a pregnant female.

Many children have died from want of the common necessaries of life. Old and infirm men and women have also died, their deaths having been hastened by the want of proper nourishment.

In Richmond, Virginia, women to the number of five hundred or more appeared in the streets demanding bread or blood. One house filled with stores for the rebel army was broken open, and the women succeeded in obtaining some provisions to sustain life a little longer. The people of Richmond were in a desperate condition. There are but few of the wealthy classes remaining. Many of them had reached Wilmington, North Carolina, and running the blockade are now out of harm's way in Europe. Considerable numbers of Union prisoners are daily starving to death; many who yet cling to life are hopelessly imbecile.

During the second bread riot three women were shot, one of whom died from her wounds. In her last moments she upheld a little cross—the emblem of her Christianity, worn next to her heart—and taking therefrom a diminutive American flag made of silk, wrapped it on the outside of the cross, and kissed it, when her head fell upon her breast. She was dead.

About twenty eight miles from Newbern, N. C., our informant saw an emaciated mother digging a little grave, in which she buried an infant nearly two years old. Her despair was truly heart rending. Her husband and son were conscripted into the rebel army. She became insane. Her son was killed at the battle of Malvern Hill. He belonged to the North Carolina Seventh, which she says was composed nearly all of boys, some of them not over fourteen years old. She had understood that her husband had escaped North. Our informant was touched by the grave scene. He gave the woman some Confederate scrip and made a little head-board for the grave, on which he drew the following: 'Sacred to the memory of Sallie Johnson, aged twenty-one months.'

The mother could not read. He explained what he had placed on the little board, and she expressed great gratitude and burst into a flood of tears. She no doubt thought he was a rebel soldier.

The newspapers are filled with the most heart-sickening accounts of the sufferings endured by our Union soldiers who have been so unfortunate as to fall into the hands of rebels, and have been confined in the loathsome prisons at Richmond. The treatment of our prisoners by the rebels is brutal in the extreme.—A correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer states that of 200 prisoners who were sent home under a flag of truce a few days since, every one was sick when they arrived at Annapolis, and 35 died within a week after their arrival. A post mortem examination of all these was made by the attending hospital physicians, and it was the deliberate opinion that they sunk into death solely from previous neglect, starvation and ill-treatment, whilst confined in the vile prisons of Richmond. They had been obliged to sleep in the dirt, on the ground, in sand, and upon or [amid filth of every kind, until their skins were so coated—actually perforated—that scrubbing and washing could neither remove the dirt, imbedded grains of sand, &c., nor create a reaction upon the skin. Every symptom known to scientific surgeons, upon examining the stomachs of the dead, demonstrated clearly that they had died from the effects of starvation and neglect whilst prisoners of war in Richmond.—When first put on board a Government vessel, many of them had nothing under heaven to cover even a portion of their nakedness, except a miserable old tattered blanket, alive with vermin. They had been robbed of their clothing, shoes, money, and everything else. Not one of them was able to walk from the steamer to the hospital, and some actually died whilst being carried upon litters. It would seem as though they had been thus kept under ill treatment and starvation until vitality had nearly vanished, and then sent home to die in order to save the trouble of burying them. Several now dead were so weak when delivered from under the rebel flag of truce as not to be able to articulate their names, and there being no clothing upon them to designate the company or regiment to which they belonged, have died and been buried without the ability to inform their relatives and friends who it was who had thus found a soldier's grave.

War News.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 14.—Rev. H. Trumbull, of the 10th Connecticut Regiment, who has been a prisoner at Richmond, was exchanged last Wednesday. He says that two days previous to his leaving Libby Paison the officers daily rations consisted of about one third of a pound of bran, and water. No meat had been served for several days. A rebel Quartermaster told the prisoners that it was not his fault, that he had none to give them that day; he had been unable to furnish anything whatever to the prisoners on Belle Island, and that it was with the greatest difficulty that he could get the smallest supply of meat for the hospitals.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov 10.—From the Herald's correspondence, written at the headquarters of Gen. Banks, in Texas, the following details of the Texas expedition. On the morning of the 30th, a heavy storm was experienced, raging 12 hours, during which the steamer Union and two schooners went down. The steamer Zephyr had her machinery broken, and was taken in tow by the gunboat Owasco. The whole fleet, with the exception of the Union and two schooners, arrived at the rendezvous on the 3rd.—The landing was first made on Brazos Island on the 2d. The 15th Maine, Col. Dwyer, started for Boca Chica, took possession of the Pass and encamped on the 3d. After a reconnoisance of the mouth of the Rio Grande, a landing was effected on the Texas shore. A high surf was running, and four boats were capsized and seven soldiers and two sailors were drowned. One of the boats, after returning from landing her men, succeeded in picking up a large number of those in the water, and the Mexican shore being much nearer than the other, they started for it. but the Mexicans would not allow them to land, and the boat was compelled to cross the river to the Texas side. During the whole time not an armed rebel was seen. The same correspondent says he counted 37 blockade runners in Mexican waters on the Rio Grande. On the appearance of the fleet off the Texas shore a series of fires were seen lighted all along the coast by rebels. On the 3d a boat was picked up containing two deserters from the Texas cavalry, who stated that three rebel regiments had been lately sent from the Rio Grande to Galveston and Sabine Pass, and a regiment of cavalry to Houston, where Magruder is said to be.

Most of the rebel army is said to be scattered at different points. General Slaughter is said to be commander at Fort Brown, superceding Gen. Bee.

A small reqel gun boat is said to be in Saluria Bayou, and on Mattagorda Island near Saluria, is a large fort mounting 9 guns.

A schooner laden with cotton was seized in Texas waters on the 2d.

NEW YORK, Nov. 14.—The Herald's Washington dispatches state that important foreign rebel dispatches had been captured, fully indicating that the rebels have no hope from England or France.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 14.—A gentleman who arrived in this city to-day direct from Charleston bar, expresses great confidence in the progress of operations now going on there, and predicts the capture of Charleston in a few weeks.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—The correspondent of the Philadelphia Inquirer, writing yesterday, says that information just received here from the South indicates that a large body of North Carolina and Georgia Unionists, who have had a habitation only in the mountains of Western North Carolina, have made their escape with their arms and much valuable information, into East Tennessee, where they will swell the ranks of Gen. Foster's army. They come to us as original Union men, and will guide and fight with our volunteers to the end.—These men formed themselves into an army and numbered about 5,000 men, poorly armed and equipped; but with real courage and patriotism they have dared to give battle to the rebel regulars at a place called Warm Springs, north of Ashville, Buncombe county, N. C., and near the Tennessee line. These brave men were making their way towards Knoxville, and were attacked on the 29th of October, by a part of the 25th North Carolina Regiment under command of Lieut. Col. Samuel C. Bryson, who was badly whipped and forced to beat a hasty retreat to Ashville. The rebels lost 6 killed and 30 wounded. Among the killed were Lieut. Hyatt. After the fight the Unionists advanced and took Ashville as a feint, and came near taking Gen. Vance, son of the Governor, and his staff prisoners. After this the patriot band fell back to the mountain, and a letter from Gov. Vance, dated Madison county, N. C., 3d, says that the enemy have withdrawn from Western North Carolina to East Tennessee. They carried off several prominent citizens in chains.

FOR LAKE SUPERIOR.—The propeller Mineral Rock left Detroit on the evening of the 16th for Lake Superior with a full load of freight. It will be her last trip of the season.

Miscellaneous Items.

☞ A man in Ludlow, while pedling yeast, was struck by lightning, and found himself on the ground, covered with yeast but hardly able to rise.

☞ Anxiety is felt at Washington to know what to do with the Congressmen who are now flocking in. There are no available houses, and with beefsteak at 35 cents, eggs at 36, butter 50, coal $11, and wood $10, there are few inducements to open boarding houses. A seven-by nine room rents for from $40 to $120. It is estimated that an investment at Washington of $5,000 in a building on a lot worth $1,500, pays at present rates, an interest of 500 per cent.

☞ The newest mining rush in California is towards Reese River, a long way into the interior, but it is said to be the richest and the best poor man's mining country yet discovered, as its wealth lies up to the surface and is easily extracted.

☞ Deputy provost marshal and clerk at Pontiac, Mich., have been arrested for receiving bribes to secure the acceptance of substitutes offered by drafted men.

☞ The New Hampshire Gazette, claiming to be the oldest newspaper in America, completed its 107th year on the 1st of October.

ANTIPODAL.—In Australia it is summer in January and winter in July. In noon there when it is midnight in Europe The longest days are in December. The heat comes from the North, the cold from the South, and it is the hottest on the mountain tops. The swans are black, the eagles are white; the bees do not sting, the birds do not sing. The cherries do not have pitts; the trees give no shadow, for their leaves turn edgeways to the sun, and some of its quadrupeds have a beak and lay eggs.

A PLEASED HUSBAND.—In a quiet town in Maine, a few Sabbaths since there occured an incident in the Methodist Church which it will perhaps do no harm to relate. A friend of the settled minister having officiated during the morning, as is customary some of the members, took occasion after the discourse to exort the brethren or say a word of encouragement. Among others was the pastors wife, who stated substantially that she believed her days were numbered—that she should soon be "home," and at rest with those who had gone before, whom she should soon meet, &c. Her husband, who occupied the pulpit during these remarks, sat rubing his hands, apparantly with great satisfaction, and shouting "Amen!" "Glory to God!" A broad smile was seen on the faces of that congregation.

☞ Trade at Memphis with Arkansas is assuming considerable importance. The proprietors of a little ferry boat at the former place are making a fortune, at a half a dollar per passage, and freight in droportion, counts up. An average of probably $15,000 worth of goods are taken across the river daily, and nearly cotton enough comes over to pay for them.

☞ Mr. Lincoln has brought his family into Washington for the winter. Mrs. Lincoln will keep house in a very hospitable style the coming season. Dinner-parties, levees, and so forth will abbound after New Year. Washington will be crowded with strangers, some of them distinguished. The Presicent's House will be open to such people, though it is hinted in some quarters that some kind of a check will be put upon the nob. Heretofore people who could not enter a decent drawing room in the country, have wiped thear dirty boots on the carpet of the magnificent East Room at there pleasure. If it is proposed that in the future onley clean, well-behaved men shall be let into the presidants levees, all sensible people will be delighted in the smprovement.

☞ The Reformed Protestant Dutch Churches of Macon and Ridgeway were reorganized Sunday the 8th inst. Rev. Wm. J. Skillman, of New Jersey, was ordained and installed as Pastor of the Society.

☞ Michigan Editors seem to be unfortunate, viz: Howell of the Pontiac Gazette, Bates of the Grand Rapids Eagle Wheelock of the Albion Herald and Aldrich of the St. Joseph Traveler, have been drafted. Smith of the Ann Arbor Courier has received a premium for being spicy, and Cole of the Journal a premium for being "the worst looking bug on the vine;" Schiermerhorn of the Hudson Gazette has received a package and a bottle; Clute of the Three Rivers Reporter announces that he has the Northwestern Fair fever on the brain; Welper of the Hillsdale Democrat has received money on subscription; Case of the Albion Herald has got married and Story of the Chicago Times offers two thousand dollars for the original Emancipation Proclamation. Go it gentlemen, you will never see another such a time.

☞ G. T. Ketcham is now forming his clubs for Godey, Peterson and Arthur's Magazines for 1864, at the lowest club rates. Godey for $2; Peterson or Arthur for $1,25. Those wishing either of the above books will do well to subscribe early.

☞ A new style of sleeping car has been introduced on the Michagan Southern Road. By an ingenious arrangement it is enabled to run smoothly on the roughest track, and by a newly discovered apparatus the air is kept always pure and sweet.

☞ Take care of your health and that of your children, and use no other Saleratus except Herrick Allen's Gold Medal Saleratus. It is acknowledged as being the only perfectly harmless article in the market, is peculiarly adapted to benefit weak stomachs and dyspeptic persons. Try one paper and you will have no other. Use it instead of soda. It is much better. Grocers and Druggists sell it. Depot 112 Liberty Street, N. Y.

☞ A minister at a rural funeral, condoled with the bereaved parents on the loss of this lovley daughter, upon whose education they had lavished so much expense.

DESERTERS ARRESTED.—On the 4th inst. Constable Hines succeded in arresting one Henry Ames a deserter, Ames enlisted in Capt. D. W. C. Smith's company last January, received his bounty money, procured a short furlough and deserted, He next turned up in New York, where he joined the Army as a substitute, received $300 in addition to the goverment bounty, and was sent to the Army of the Potomac. He remained with that army about two weeks' and not liking the way in which matters were managed in that department, left in disgust, and did not stop till he reached Canada. He soon became tired of living in that portion of her Majesty's dominions, crossed the border, and was again in the midst of civilization. Officer Hines watched the deserter's wife. On the 3d she went south on the Solhern road, the officer being on the same train, she stopped at Napoleon, where he also halted. Hines has produced a horse and buggy and renewed her journey; Hines obtained a conveyance and followed her to Ridgeway, Lenawee county. Here she met her husband and was with him but a few moments when the officer stepped in and arrested the fugitive. He was taken to the Detroit barracks.

Tecumseh on the War Path.

Having filled our quota and bid farewell to drafr number two, we were preparing to celebrate November 26 as per proclamation of the Governor, when the telegraph whispers in our ear that Father Abraham wants "forty-four" or more.—Handbills were issued and the following

Resolutions,

Adopted at a meeting of the citizens of Tecumseh hold at Union Hall in the Village of Tecumseh, Nov. 14th, 1863.

Resolved, That this meeting reccommend to the Township Board of the Township of Tecumseh to call a Township meeting for the purpose of voting $7,500,00 to be raised by tax this year in the said township for procuring volunteers, paying bounties and the expenses thereof, for the present call for the same.

Resolved, That on such vote being had the Township Board be requested to issue certificates to each person subscribing and paying the amount thereof to the committee hereinafter named.

Resolved That E. B. Wood, H. C. Conklin, Wm. Hayden, A. James, J. S. Kies, E. W. Freese, E. R. Smith, Simeon Davidson, J. G. Roberts, J. L. Tallman, and C. W. Culbertson be appointed a committee to procure subscriptions as a loan to the township and to pledge the faith of the township board to repay such subscription when such board is authorized by law to raise and pay the same.

MARRIED.—At the residence of Mr. Jacobus in Macon, on Monday the 9th inst., by Rev. J. H. Kershow, Mr BENJ. C RICHARDSON of Salina, N. Y., to Miss ANNA MOHORTER of Adrian.

ROBACK'S STOMACH BITTERS

Having been called upon to examine the formula or receipe for the above Bitters which has been given to me by the inventor, I take pleasure in stating to the public, that they are well known to the medical profession as possessing properties purely tonic, and the combination is well calculated, and especially adapted to that class of diseases arising from a disordered condition of the hepatic functions, or general derangement of the liver, so common in the malarious districts of the West and South. They contain a larger proportion of topic ingredients than any other Bitters that have been submitted to me for chemical examination. I bespeak for them a wide spread popularity and cordially commend them to the public use.

Very respectfully,
C. W. ORDWAY, Analytical Chemist,

MONEY EASILY MADE,
By Either Gentlemen or Ladies.

I am in possession of a BEAUTIFUL FRENCH ART which has been introduced in this country only to a limited extent, and that in New York City. It is something which every person stands in great need of, consequently will be extensively patronized. Persons can make money with it at home or abroad Thousands in France have made small fortunes at it, and are still doing so.—I would state what it is, but persons purchasing the knowledge of it do not desire it made public. One Dollar sent to the undersigned will ensure the immediate return of a Circular giving full information in the Art, and the requisite instructions to pursue it. It is strictly genteel, and the best and only thing ever introduced which every person can make money at. NO LETTERS NOTICED, except those containing the required amount for instructions.

The "UNION LIVERY," all do say,
Is just the place to go to,
To get a rig that's nice and gay,
With bells, and whip, and buffalo;

Horses gay, and safe, and fleet;
Buggies new, and nice, and strong:
Cutters fine, and all complete—
Just get in and go along.

It is the ladies' chief delight
To take a drive in our carriages:
Put on your fixen's boys, and try it,
They'll pay toll on all the bridges.

Come one, and all, by night or day,
We'll make the prices suit you,
For single rig, or four horse sleigh,
And drivers, too, to please you.

Our stables, too, are new and good:
Just drive your horses in and bait,
With hay, or straw, or ots or corn—
There's room enough, you need not wait.

The poetry machine has bu'sted. Good bye. Come and try us at the Union Livery and Feed Stable, between Haydens' and Tindall's Warehouse's on railroad street.

ORANGE JUDD, of the "American Agriculturalist," says of the

UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER

"A child can readily wring out a tubfull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large percentage on its cost. We think the machine much more than PAYS FOR ITSELF EVERY YEAR in the saving of garments. There are several kinds nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs, otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly FOUR YEARS CONSTANT USE."

Every Wringer with Cog Wheels is Warranted in every particular.

NO WRINGER CAN BE DURABLE WITHOUT COG-WHEELS.

A good CANVASSER wanted in every town.

☞ On receipt of the price from the places where no one is selling, we will send the Wringer free of expense

THE GREAT

AMERICAN TEA COMPANY,

51 Vesey Street New York;

Since its organization, has created a new era in the history of

Wholesaling Tea in this Co.

They have introduced their selections of Teas and are selling them not over

TWO CENTS (02 Cents) per pound above COST,

Never deviating from the ONE Price asked.

Another peculirity of the Company is that their Tea Taster not only devotes his time to the selection of their TEAS as to quality, value, and particular styles for particular localities of country, but he helps the Tea buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this, but points out to him the best bargains.

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all others

If he is no judge of TEA, or the Market, of his time is valuable he has all the benefits of a well organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.

This enables tea lovers—no matter if they are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York merchants.

Parties can order Teas and will be served by us as well as though they came themselves being sure to get original packages, true weights and tares and the tea warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Company Teas, which will be sent to all who order comprising

Hyson, Young Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, Twankay and Skin.

Oolong, Souchong, Orange & Hyson Pekoe,

JAPAN TEA OF EVERY DISCRIPTION, colored and uncolored.

This list has each kind of Tea divided into FOUR classes, namely: Cargo, high Cargo Fine, Finest, that every one may understand from description and the prices annexed that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea Trade.

We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over two cents (02 Cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who have heretofore been paying Enormous Profits.

SEWING MACHINE.

Price, with Hemmer and Feller, $40.

THE Wilcox & Gibbs' Sewing Machine is the best, without regard to price, for Family Sewing,

Braiding,
Hemming,
Felling,
Tucking,
Cording,

It forms a flat, even and elastic seam, which is warranted not to rip in wear even if the seam is cut in intervals and also under all circumstances to survive the wash-tub.

A patented device of great utility to learners prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially no other will bear any comparison with it."—Phila Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder"—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines."—Pennsylvanian.

"The Machine, in the opinion of the committee, combines nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858

Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs' as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report

"We must, in justice express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 2 1860.

"After much wear and many washings the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun

"In principle it is perfect"—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others"—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experience in our own family"—Boston Traveler

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable"—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has in so short a time acquired such well merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette

"We esteem it the best machine for family use. The stitch is unexceptionable"—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

DR. ROBACK'S

and

BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED"
COMPOUND

Fluid Extract Buchu

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATERY or CADAVEROUS depositions and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflammation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, or CHILDREN.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEAKNESS

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion.	Loss of Power.
Loss of Memory.	Difficulty of Breathing.
Weak Nerves,	Trembling.
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness.
Dimness of Vision.	Pain in the Back.
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body.
Hot Hands	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin.	Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITY, EPILEPTIC FITS,

In one of which the patient may expire Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those direful diseases.

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION.

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

Requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Life is but A Span.

Life is but a span—of horses;
One is Age, the other Prime;
Up and down the hill our course is—
"Go in, ponies, make your time!"

Boyhood plies the whip of pleasure,
Youthful folly gives the stroke,
Manhood goads them at his leasure—
"Let 'em rip, they're tough as oak!"

"Hi, ha, there! the stakes we'll pocket;
To the winds let care be sent;
Time 2·40, whip in socket—
Give 'em string, let 'em went!"

On the sunny side of fifty
Prime is drowned in Lethe's stream;
Age is left, old and unthrifty—
Life then, proves "a one horse team,"

Age jogs on, grows quite unsteady,
Reels and slackens in his pace;
"Kicks the bucket," always ready,
"Gives it up"—Death wins the race!

The Man Without a Friend.

There was a day when Talleyrand arrived in Havre from Paris. It was the darkest hour of the revolution. Pursued by the bloodhounds of the Reign of Terror, stript of every wreck of property, Talleyrand secured a passage to America in a ship about to sail. He was a beggar and a wanderer in a strange land, to earn his daily bread b daily labor.

"Is there an American stopping at your house?" he asked the landlord of the hotel. "I am bound to cross the water, and would like a letter to a persoe of some influence in the New World."

The landlord hesitated a moment, and then replied:

"There is a gentleman up stairs, either from America or Britain, but whether from America or England I cannot tell."

He pointed the way, and Talleyrand who in his life was bishop, prince, and minister, ascended the stairs; a miserable supplicant stood before the stranger's door knocked and entered.

In the far corner of the dimly lighted room, sat a man of some fifty years of age, his arms folded, and his head bowed upon his breast. From a window directly opposite, a flood of light poured upon his forehead. His eyes looked from his downcast brows and upon Talleyrand's face with a peculiar and searching expression. His face was striking in outline the mouth and chin indicative of an iron will. His form was vigorous, even with the sorrows of fifty winters; he was dressed in a dark, but rich and distinguished costome.

Talleyrand advanced—stared he was a fugitive, and with the impression that the gentleman before was au American, solicited his kind feelings and offices.

He poured forth his history in eloqnent French and broken English.

"I am a wanderer and an exile. I am forced to fly to the New World without a friend or home. You are an American. Give me then, I beseech you, a lettle of yours, so I may be able to earn my bread. I am willing to toil in any manner—a life of labor would be a paradise to a career of luxury in France. You will give me a letter to one of your friends? A gentleman like you has many friends."

The strange gentleman arose and retired towards the door of the next chamber, his eyes still looking from beneath his darken d brow.

"I am the only man in the New World who can raise his hands to God and say: 'I have not a friend—not one—in all America.'"

Talleyrand never forgot the overwhelming sadness of look which accompanied these wordi.

"Who are you?" he cried, as the strange man retreated to the next room.

"My name," he replied, with a smile that had more of mockery than of joy in the convulsive expression, "my name is Benedict Arnold."

He was gone, Talleyrand sank into the chair, gasping the words:

"Arnold, the traitor!"

Thus he wandered over the face of the earth another Cain, with the wanderer's mark upon his brow.

☞ When Gen. Jeff. Thompson of the Confederate army, now a prisoner of war in Alton, Ill, arrived at Pilot Knob, after his capture, he expressed himself to Gen, Fisk as much dissatisfied with the conduct of the people of South East Missouri, in not remaining true to the rebel cause. "Two years ago," said Jeff., they were as plucky as need be. On my way up this time, I whispered to them whenever I got a chance, and told them to keep up good courage. I thought they would be all right, but curse them, they had to take out their note-books to see which oath of allegiance they took last."

Let Everybody Help.

The business of the hour is to raise the new levy, a business which is looked upon as exclusively in the hands of a certain number of government agents, who open offices in the streets and advertise the inducements which they can offer to the idler and the working man to enlist in the service. A more fatal mistake could hardly be made than to suppose that our recruiting officers are to raise our armies. The whole work of obtaining recruits, seemingly a complex and formiabable task really rests in the simple use of individual influence, and the whole responsibility of answering the Presibent's call for more volunteers is resolved into individual responsibility. All the elaborate machinery of recruiting, perfected by a town year's exberimenting, is powerless unless attended by the active co-operation of single men. No system, however carefully contrived, can induce men to enlist; it is personal influence which avails. A man may pass on his way to work a dozen flags of recruiting offices, and read at each place huge placards setting forth in most persuasive figures the attraction of every arm of service, and yet be enticed into no one of the open doors; but let him at the end of his walk find his employer ready with the same probosal, and immepiately he is subjected to an appeal of the most powerful kind. On on the other hand, let him have entertained some half resolution to enlist, a dissuasive influence equally potent lies in the indifferent or worse than indifferent employer.

It is certain that the ultimate ground of succes in raising volunteers is in the conviction of individual responsibility, and in the practical obedience to that conviction. There is not a man in the community who, if he really must stay at home, is not able to urge arrangements of some sort powerful to send at least one in his place. Let the employer propose enlistment to his workmen, and then wait for his excuse; when he has heard it, let him answer that with money for the needy, and argument for the hesitating, plain talk and cheer for all. Especially now is there need of such personal persuasion, when so few are likely to be driven into enlistment by want of work.

Labor is scarce and renumerative, owing chiefly to the heavy drain upon the working classes, consequently, the men into whose hands work has fallen are more than ever tied to their occupation, and ever so patriotic intent find it difficult to become disengaged. It is the place of the employer to make the enlistment easy to the employed, to help him volunteer, and to relieve him from anxiety by providing alone, or through societies, for the absent soldier's family when it is in want.

So much must the employer do by the employed. But who shall protect the employer. It is proposed to make still heavier drain upon the industry of the community, and labor, now hard to secure will become even more scarce. It is enough to answer that we must all make sacrifices. That is a very unsatisfactory reply to the carpenter's question—where shall I get my journeyman? to the merchant's question, who takees my clerk,s place? Fortunately there is an answer, much more complete than many suppose. War supplies as well as demands laborers. Every day the railway trains carry to the seat of war strong men from their shops and fields and offices. Every day also railway trains from the seat of war bring back, not indeed the counterparts of these but yet substitutes for them. The men men who come from the army are discharged not because they are disabled for every employment, but because they are disabled for active service in the army.—The disqualification for such service by no means proves an inability to fill, in many instances the very positions which they formerly occupied, in many more different but equally available situations. The man who lost his leg in Virginia and can no longer march with his regiment, is able at any rate to climb on to his old stool and dnee a quill with the best of his fellows.

In fine, here is an opportunity for a most equable adjustment of losses. The employer owes it to the employed that he shall speed him into the army, and while he is yet going there comes back a heroic fellow, whom it is equally his duty to help into employment. The great question—whom shall we get to work for us? and the more important one—how shall we find employment for discharged soldiers? are answered at one and the same time. Nor does any question arise of justice to the employed whom you have not only sent away but whose vacant place you have filled. If there were any balancing of justice between him and the new comer we think the departing volunteer would himself generously cast into the scale the service already done to his country by his returned comrade; but no such question comes up. To-day the army demands soldiers, a demand exceeding all others from any quarter; the war closed and the gates of industry reopeded, then the demand for laborers will be equally urgent and the army will find it hard to supply them.

There is a perilous unanimity of sentiment respecting the President's call. The Governor eloquently seconds it. The two great political parties are agreed upon the expediency of the measure for meeting an exigency whose existence no body denies; opposition is silent, and every man agrees with his neighbor. If this unanimity of sentiment should remove the press of responsibility from individual shoulders to those of the general and irresponsible public, then might we almost wish that some dastardly apostle of peace might arise to shame into action loyal men too indolent, too selfish, or too much absorbed in private enterprise to give just the one effort apiece which it costs to recruit our armies. But we hope better things, we hope for a rivalry of effort under the influence of common sentiment in the community, demanding of every man that he shall give to this business some particular personal attention.

A Visit to Brigham Young.

A salt Lake correspondent to the New York Evening Post writes:

I found President Young agreeable and affable, apparently not over forty-five years of age, although he is really upward of sixty. He was disposed to converse on any and alll subjects very freely. The treaty with Japan he regarded at first as a failure, and the character of the embassy which visited the United States has served to confirm that belief. The war, he thinks, will be continued till a great part of the North and South is used up, or, to speak more plainly, till all are annihilated, when the "Saints" will be the people to occupy the country in peace and quietness. The desolation caused by the war he regards as the judgement of the Lord for the persecution of the Sainte.

Bingham was disposed to give any information concerning the theatre, temple and tabernacle, and about his other public buildings.

The ventilating of his private schoolroom, where his own children, numbering some sixty, are educated, appeared to be a favorite subject of conversation. The ceilings of these rooms are eighteen feet high, ventilated from the tops of all the windows. His own residences—there are several buildings—are large and airy, with double doors, and ceilings twenty or thirty feet in height. One large building is principally occupied by his wives.

Brigham sleeps along and eats alone. Whenever he wants one of his wives he sends for her. It is not uncommon to see three or four of his wives at church sitting together, and generally dressed alike. A dozen or fifteen children are about his premises at play at all times, apparently happy enough.

Brigham Young, Jr., a son about twenty-two years oldfla pretty fair chip of the old block—has just returned from Europe whither he was sent on a mission. Whilst there he visted most of the countries and places of interest, being supplied with as much money as he wanted to spend.—Brigham's last wife was rather an interesting young lady, the daughter of Mr. Folsom.

It is asserted by the Mormons that the most perfect harmony and good feelings prevail among the wives of the 'harem,' but I have possitive information which shows this to be false.
